Virginian Hits New Deal Action as 'Cheat and Repudiation.'

Supreme Court's Decision Flayed

Program Is Satisfactory, Morgenthau's Reply to Ex-President.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Whatever former President Herbert Hoover had in mind Wednesday night, when he issued his plea for a return to the gold standard on the basis of the present depreciated dollar, he succeeded yesterday in inspiring a heated fight among Senate Democrats over New Deal monetary policies.

Privately, some Democrats thought Mr. Hoover was bidding for renomination by the Republicans in 1936 and was offering his party an issue. But no Republicans could be found who concurred in this view. Most Republicans were reluctant to comment on Mr. Hoover's proposal and only a few expressed sympathy with it.

Efforts of Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), of Texas to reply to the Hoover statement resulted in the sharp-tongued Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), of Virginia making a vitriolic attack on both the Administration's gold program and the Supreme Court decision earlier in the week. The court held that Congress lacked authority to invalidate the gold clause in Treasury bonds, but that in the case decided the bondholder had not shown he had been damaged.

Charges Repudiation.

Senator Glass referred to abrogation of the gold clause contracts as "a cheat and repudiation" and contended that the Supreme Court had said to "those who have been cheated and repudiated that if they undertake to recover what the Government agreed to give them, they can go to hell." Subsequently he said the Government's promise to pay currency notes in gold was "a lie."

The first legislation as a consequence of the Supreme Court decision was offered in House and Senate yesterday by Representative John B. Hollister (Republican), of Ohio, and Senator W. Warren Barbour (Republican), of New Jersey. They introduced similar bills directing the Treasury to pay the present gold equivalent in settlement of all obligations issued prior to passage of the gold-clause abrogation resolution in June, 1933.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., made the only Administration comment on Mr. Hoover's suggestion when at his press conference he said, "I am perfectly satisfied with the way our monetary policy has worked during the last year and see no reason for changing it." Mr. Morgenthau added that the monetary program was still on a day-to-day basis and might be changed at any time to meet new conditions.

May Ban Suits.

The Administration is still considering the desirability of legislation withdrawing the privilege of holders of Treasury bonds to sue for damages under the gold clause in the Court of Claims. Many lawyers believe the Supreme Court left the door open for future suits by bondholders who believe they can show damages. The court in its

Devices Seized In Gaming Raid

Police Force Entrance of Establishment Here; Two Face Charges.

Led by Detective Sergt. George Deyoe, members of Lieut. George Little's special vice squad smashed their way into a gambling establishment in the 500 block of Eighth street southeast yesterday, arrested one man and confiscated a large quantity of gaming equipment.

Taken to headquarters on a charge of setting up a gaming table, the prisoner registered as James B. Frazier, 27, of the Eighth street address. He was taken into custody in a barber shop below the establishment when police found the second-floor resort deserted.

Later police announced that a man giving the name of Eugene Brinkley, 46, who gave the same address as that of the establishment raided, also has been charged with setting up a gaming table.

Officers were compelled to force steel-braced doors and steel-plated windows in gaining admittance. No one was in the gambling room and this led police to believe one of their "undercover" men had been spotted as he located the place several days ago.

Equipment confiscated included several sections of blackboard on which racing results were scrawled, numerous slips containing horse-racing information and several gambling devices.

Manslaughter Verdict Spares Kennamer Life

Jury Out 7 Hours in Gorrell Slaying Trial; Judge's Son Faces Term of 4 to 99 Years; Friends Congratulate Him on Decision.

Pawnee, Okla., Feb. 21 (AP).—Phil Kennamer was convicted of manslaughter by a Pawnee jury tonight for the Thanksgiving night slaying of John Gorrell, jr. The jury left the passage of sentence to Judge Thurman Hurst.

Kennamer, 19-year-old son of Federal Judge Franklin E. Kennamer, received the verdict more calmly than his father, and patted the small, elderly man on the shoulder.

Judge Hurst will pass sentence at 2 p. m. Saturday. Under Oklahoma law the term may be from 4 to 99 years.

Young Kennamer's friends crowded around him to shake his hand before he was taken back to the county jail.

A motion for new trial will be entered at the same time Kennamer is sentenced.

The court room quickly cleared and the 11-day grind of the trial was over. The jury deliberated over the evidence about 7 hours

Paris to Build 2 Battleships, 1,010 Planes

Considers Washington Pact 'Dead;' Cites Germany's Naval Construction.

Paris, Feb. 21 (U.P.).—France, considering the Washington Treaty a dead letter, today announced plans for the construction of two 35,000-ton battleships and 1,010 war planes.

She will not wait for the outcome of the projected world naval conference to begin liberating herself from the limitations established by the Washington pact of 1922. The first of her two new battleships will come under the treaty—but the second will be started early in 1937, outside the present restrictions.

The president of the Chamber of Deputies Naval Commission declared:

"German naval rearmament obliges construction of these warships. The first, costing $47,333,000, will be included in the 1935 naval program, with two destroyers to cost $9,585,000. The chamber also will be asked to vote a reserve fund of $8,536,400."

Second Ship Demanded.

The ministry of marine demanded the second 35,000-ton warship, to be laid down in 1937 because of lack of funds at present.

France thus will have under construction at the same time the most modern and powerful fighting units in the world's navies, as well as two formidable pocket-battleships of 26,500 tons each, the Dunkerke and Strasbourg, designed to answer Germany's Deutschland class ships.

France will build her 1,010 new war planes under a program of air force rejuvenation plan published today. It was drawn up by Gen. Victor Denain, air minister.

Program of Construction.

The plans call for rejuvenation during 1935 as follows: Construction of two-thirds of the full program of heavy defense planes; one-half of light-defense planes planned; one-third of the combat planes, and one-third of the reconnaisance planes.

Included in the new air force will be 240 light defense planes, 188 heavy defense planes, 45 bombers and 350 reconnaisance planes.

London Irked By Reds' Plan For 'Security'

Note Approving Peace Pact Called Adroit Scheme Against Germany.

London, Feb. 21 (AP).—British government circles were clearly impatient tonight at unexpected publication of the Soviet's views concerning the Anglo-French security proposals.

As diplomatic quarters expressed the view that the Soviet's note demanding the carrying out of the London program in its entirety was an adroit move to head off any further concessions to Germany, the government's lack of appetite for responsibilities in eastern Europe was evident.

A possibility developed, however, that Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, might go to Warsaw and Moscow, as well as to Berlin. It would be the first trip of any British minister to those distant capitals since the World War.

Looks to Own Defenses.

Despite her newly assumed responsibility for calming the fears and jealousies of Europe and the Soviet's clamor for security in the east, Great Britain was described as far more interested in her own defenses in the west.

It was that British attitude, informed quarters here believed, that provided the background for Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's attempt to remove the projected western European air alliance from its context in the Franco-British proposals, and his request for separate Anglo-German conversations.

The Soviet note, which arrived shortly after the cabinet debated the advisability of sending Simon to Berlin, warned the British and the French that the "disregarding" of any of the regional agreements proposed at London would be "open encouragement of breach of peace in the region concerned."

It served sharply to emphasize the different chief interests of the British and the Russians in the London plan, the Soviet insisting that Germany adhere to the French-sponsored eastern security agreement and the British, lukewarm to that phase of the proposals, eager for conclusion of an air alliance.

Moscow, Feb. 21 (AP).—Picturing Nazis as hungry for war, the official Soviet press today charged Germany and Poland with trying to push Rusia out of Europe.

'Swing Low,' Sings Laborer, And He's Rescued in Cave-in Hymns his mother taught him when he was a youngster at her knee probably saved the life yesterday of T. Nestfield, 38-year-old Negro laborer, who, with a fellow worker, was buried under a ton of wet earth in a ditch near Colmar, Md.

While the dirt avalanche brought death to Alonzo Sharps, 27, colored, of Brentwood, buried with Nestfield, the cave-in forced Nestfield's head against an open section of pipe, and he gasped for breath through his mouth.

"Swing low, sweet chariot," he suddenly sang in choking gutturals.

Other workers, led by Ferguson Harrison, the white foreman, dug feverishly toward the voice with their picks and shovels.

"Beulah Land, sweet Beulah Land," Nestfield sang out.

His rescuers dragged him from the ditch. He was rushed to Casualty Hospital in critical condition.

Sharps was taken from the earth at about the same time, unconscious, but was pronounced dead later after the Bladensburg rescue squad had failed to revive him.

Miners Slay in Pit.

Matowice, Poland, Feb. 21 (AP).—In an attempt to enforce the payment of wages in arrears, 130 miners in the Luisenglueck pit have refused to return to the surface. The men have been below ground since Tuesday morning, claiming the company owes them 25,000 sloty (nearly $5,000).

Hitler Places Private Cash At Reich Call

Currency Conscripted to Buy Raw Materials, Consolidate Debts.

Power to Demand Funds of Banks and Citizens Given Finance Chief.

Berlin, Feb. 21 (AP).—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler conscripted the nation's cash today to buy raw materials and consolidate debts.

In one of the shortest laws passed by the Nazi government, the hunt for liquid assets was begun and will spare none upon whom the Reichminister of finance wishes to call for money.

Lutz Schwerin von Krosigk, the finance chief, was given wide powers to secure funds through credits, and is limited only by the Fuehrer's personal estimate of the extent to which he should strip liquid assets from those who have them.

May Demand Loans.

Von Krosigk may go to banks and demand loans. He may go to private firms and individuals and insist upon their parting with such cash reserves as are not absolutely essential to their well-being.

Though official sources were silent on this point, there was a widespread belief in financial circles that the government may to a certain extent call upon Germans who still have bank accounts and securities abroad, to make this form of exchange available to the Reich for the purchase of raw materials in return for government securities, in reichsmarks.

Must List Holdings.

Every German is compelled on pain of severe punishment to register with the reichsbank a list of all foreign holdings. Until the present, the reichsbank usually has notified owners of foreign credits it was not necessary to file them. The next few weeks, the financial observers say, may tell a different story.

Hitler's mandatory order to the finance minister virtually says: "Find money where you can—I shall back you up."

It is now up to Von Krosigk to make enough cash available to "consolidate" the debts incurred for public works and make sure Germany obtains enough raw materials for current needs.

Baby Recovering From Hemophilia

6-Day-Old Virginia Girl Fights Rare Malady.

Luray, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—A 6-day-old girl is recovering at Page Memorial Hospital in Luray from hemophilia, a disease unusual in this country, and especially so in infant girls, according to Dr. Charles E. Conrad, specialist, of Harrisonburg, called here to give blood transfusions to the infant. Dr. Conrad said he has known only two or three girls to have the disease.

Several transfusions have been given, the mother's blood being used. According to Mrs. M. O. Swartz, superintendent of the hospital, the child is greatly improved.

The child is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Robinson, of Luray. Her local physician is Dr. E. G. Brumback.

2 U. S. Girls Leap to Death From Plane

Love Blamed in Suicide Pact of Naples Envoy's Daughters.

Suitors Killed, Sisters Hire British Airliner for Fatal Trip.

(Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.)

London, Feb. 21.—Two beautiful American sisters, hand in hand, threw themselves from an airplane over England today to join in death their British sweethearts, Royal Air Force officers, who were killed with seven others in a crash near Messina, Sicily, last week.

They were Jane and Elizabeth Du Bois, 20 and 23, daughters of the United States Consul at Naples, Coert Du Bois, of Hudson, N. Y. The girls, reared in Boston and California, last saw the British fliers at Naples, just before their crash on a test flight to Singapore.

They had danced and dined for days with Flight Lieut. Henry L. Beatty and Flying Officer John A. C. Forbes. And the next day they heard the gay young fliers had crashed to death in their flying boat, the Ace of Diamonds.

The shock was too great for the girls. They went to London when the bodies were returned for burial. There in a hotel room after hours of weeping they contrived the death plan.

Appeared Distraught.

They bought all seats in the regular Paris airliner of the Hillman Line, paying $135 for the privacy. With Pilot J. Kirton at the controls, they headed for the English Channel and France.

The pilot said they appeared distraught. He thought they were worried about the weather. At their request he closed the door separating the cockpit from the passenger cabin, and covered the windows.

Kirton was over the channel when he discovered the two girls had disappeared. The door to the cabin was flapping open. He banked the plane around and streaked back toward the coast.

The bodies had hurtled to earth in a cabbage patch near Upminister in Essex.

"Their hands were still clasped when we found them," said A. D. MacGregor, an Upminister builder, "and one had a tight grip on the other's coat."

Pilot's Report.

Pilot Kirton said:

"The girls must have jumped during the time I was climbing at about 85 miles an hour through bumpy air. If it had happened while I was flying in calmer air I would have felt it in the controls.

"After emerging from a thunderstorm over the channel, I opened the cabin door, which had been closed because the girls complained of drafts. I intended to tell them that the worst was over. They were gone."

Many farmer folk of the countryside saw the bodies fall. Some at first thought it might be another gold shipment hurtling from the plane, as happened last month. They ran to the spot and found the crumpled bodies.

The inquest probably will be held tomorrow or Saturday, it was said after a conference with American authorities, who objected to waiting until Monday, as originally suggested by Coroner C. E. Lewis, of Hornchurch, a nearby village.

Letters Found in Plane.

The death plane left Stapleford Airport, outside Abridge, Essex, at 10 a. m. According to the pilot's estimate the girls leaped at about 4,000 feet while he was climbing for the cross channel run.

Kirton immediately returned to Stapleford and reported the tragedy.

Police of Romford next reported to the airdrome they had found two bodies on the Cranston Park estate

Post Takes Off at Dawn Today; Andrews' Hop Here Sets Record

Coast-to-Coast Under Eight Hours Is Goal of 'Winnie Mae.'

10-Hour-and-22-Minute California-to-Capital Hop Completed.

Los Angeles, Feb. 21 (AP).—Wiley Post, 35-year-old holder of two round-the-world speed flight records, said late today he planned to take off about dawn tomorrow on his sub-stratosphere flight to New York.

The spectacular non-stop flight, Post said, probably will start about 6 a. m., (9 a. m., Eastern standard time). He expects to fly 7 to 8 miles above the earth's surface and hopes to make the distance in less than eight hours.

After weeks of preparation and reconditioning of his five-year-old high-wing monoplane, the "Winnie Mae," Post today received a new propellor by air from the East almost simultaneously with weather reports indicating conditions would be good for landing at Floyd Bennett Field, New York, tomorrow afternoon.

Any time unted 10 hours and 2 minutes that Post may make will be a transcontinental speed

A non-stop airplane speed record from Los Angeles to Washington was established yesterday when Leland Andrews, veteran American Airlines pilot, brought a new single-engined Vultee transport into the Capital 10 hours and 22 minutes after leaving the West Coast. He averaged better than 220 miles an hour for the 2,295-mile trip.

After pausing 14 minutes at the Washington airport Andrews raced his ship into Newark, N. J., setting a new transcontinental speed record for transports of 11 hours and 34 minutes. The former record of 11 hours and 59 minutes was set last month by Maj. James Doolittle. Andrews' brother-in-law, and was established in the same stock transport plane belonging to American Airlines that Andrews flew.

Andrews said that "there was nothing outstanding about the trip." "We would have made better time if we had used our radio better,"

Senate in Revolt Votes Prevailing Pay, 44-43, Defying Veto of Works

Wagner Introduces Labor Bill Seeking Company Union Ban

Measure Given Senate as Green Assails Richberg on Code.

Into a Congress already embroiled over labor's clash with the Administration, Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, right-hand man of the President in past labor settlements, yesterday dropped his long-awaited bill for deciding labor disputes.

Revised only slightly from the form in which it was offered last session, to be whittled down into authority only for the present Labor Relations Board, the bill would outlaw so-called company-dominated unions and set up a permanent labor relations body to arbitrate labor disputes.

Even while Senator Wagner was offering the measure, President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, demanded labor representation on all administrative boards at a hearing before a House committee.

Green asked equal labor representation on all code authorities, diverting from his subject only to denounce Donald Richberg, New Deal coordinator, as responsible for what he called an unfair settlement

Glass Takes President's Side in Vain, Plea of Roosevelt Fails.

Huey Long's 'Ace' Defeats Leaders

'Pair' of Mrs. Caraway Decides Maneuver on Amendment.

By Robert C. Albright.

Overriding a direct personal appeal from the President and the threat of a White House veto, the Senate yesterday adopted the McCarran prevailing wage amendment to the $4,880,000,000 works and relief bill. The vote was 44 to 43.

It was the Administration's second damaging defeat of the session. In vain, the President sent a last-minute letter to Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, who read it to the Senate, and added an admonition of his own. The credit of the United States was challenged, he said. The plea was strong, but futile.

When the final vote was counted, 21 Democrats joined with 21 Republicans, 1 Progressive and 1 Farmer-Laborite behind the white-maned, heavy-waisted Pat McCarran, of Nevada, in favor of prevailing wage payment on every work relief project.

Long Plays an Ace.

It was Senator Huey Pierce Long, Louisiana's Kingfish, loose-spoken critic of President Roosevelt and his recovery program, who gave the labor amendment its 1-vote shove to victory, outsmarting leaders in a floor maneuver that drew a loud but unavailing protest.

All day long Huey had strutted the Senate floor, openly lobbying for the McCarran proposal. When the vote was taken he had an unplayed ace in his hip pocket. He passed it on to Senator L. J. Dickinson (Republican), of Iowa, who played it. It was the "pair" of Mrs. Hattie W. Caraway, of Arkansas.

In so doing, Long, whose legislative strategies in Louisiana have blasted his way to State domination, made use of a prevailing Senate custom. An absent Senator may balance his vote for or against a measure by offsetting it against the ballot of a member voting the other way. This is known as a "pair."

Shifting pairs with lightning rapidity, Dickinson engineered the winning vote, with Long at his back. Paired at the start with Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, an opponent of the amendment, the Iowan transferred his pair to Senator Lynn J. Frazier, of North Dakota. When Frazier appeared, to vote "aye," Dickinson's pair was shifted to Mrs. Caraway. The Senator from Iowa voted "aye," and the McCarram battle was won.

Senate Majority Leader Joseph Robinson was on his feet at once to question the transfer. Then Long had his moment. Modestly, Louisiana's "dictator" confessed Mrs. Caraway had granted permission to pair her vote.

Veto Waits, Says Glass.

Just before the ballot, Senator Glass, who has backed the President on his proposal to pay a $50 "security" wage on Federal aid projects, in lieu of the prevailing rate asked by the American Federation of Labor, solemnly warned members a presidential veto awaited the bill if the labor amendment was attached.

His trump card was a letter from the President, asserting it has been the consistent policy of the Administration not only to maintain salary standards and prevent reductions, but actually to raise wages.

"I think the record of this Administration has demonstrated that in the administering of this legislation I will not permit anything to

10,000 Posts In CCC Open To Democrats

Concession to Patronage Revolt Cheered at House Caucus.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

The Civilian Conservation Corps, to some extent at least, is going political.

Speaker Byrns created an uproar yesterday at a caucus of House Democrats on patronage when he announced at least 10,000 jobs as superintendents and foremen in charge of the camps would be distributed among "deserving" members of the party recommended by Congressmen.

Between bursts of tumultuous applause the Speaker assured his job-hungry followers their leather-lunged protests against failure of the New Deal to consult House members in distributing spoils have borne fruit.

The vacancies, some to be created by broad expansion of the CCC, will be filled promptly, Byrns said. He indicated there would be an average of six jobs to each camp, paying from $110 to $200 a month. The Speaker promised Senators would have no say-so on such patronage.

One of the sharpest of several tirades against the number of Republicans holding Federal berths was voiced by Representative Deen, Georgia.

Cites Jobs Given G. O. P.

"Since Lincoln," he said, "we have had 13 Republican Presidents and only three Democrats in the White House. This is not due to any lack in the Democratic Party of money, brains or a good theory of government.

"Rather, it is because the Democratic Party has handled and managed its patronage in such an unsatisfactory manner that it has spelled political death in all but three campaigns.

"The normous number of Republicans given jobs in my district without my knowledge or consent and against which I have protested, means nothing more nor less than resentment by thousands of good Democrats."

Representative McFarlane, Texas, instigator of the patronage revolt, told the caucus President Roosevelt

Mellon Listed 3 Million Loss In Stock Sale

Children Acquired Shares for $314,945, U. S. Investigators Say.

Pittsburgh, Feb. 21 (U.P.).—Stocks which Andrew W. Mellon bought for $3,227,726 were later acquired by his two children for $314,945 in one of several transactions by which the banker claimed losses, it was stated today.

The transaction—through a "middle man"—was revealed as a hearing continued on the Federal Government's demand for $3,000,000 more 1931 income taxes from the former Treasury Secretary. Mellon asserts he overpaid his 1931 income tax by $139,000, and seks a refund of that amount.

H. M. Johnson, whose work was to handle much of Mellon's $97,000,000 personal fortune, told of the sale during cross-examination by Robert H. Jackson, Government counsel.

Five Blocks in Sale.

There were five blocks of stock in the sale to the Union Trust Co. in December, 1932. Two months later, the Coalesced Co., owned by Paul Mellon and Mrs. Ailsa Mellon Bruce, bought the same stocks from the bank for $314,945. Johnson did not say what the bank paid for the stocks.

During the years 1931 and 1932, Mellon claimed losses on every sale of stock he made to the Union Trust, which is a Mellon-controlled bank.

Jackson brought out the transactions as he sought to bolster the Government's contention that Mellon fraudently claimed losses on sales which were not bona fide.

Money Given Children.

Mellon's two children—to whom the banker gave huge fortunes when Paul was 21 and before Mrs. Bruce was 27 to see whether they knew how to manage money—also profited from other stock transactions.

Johnson told of a transatlantic telephone call from London to Pittsburgh during which Mellon instructed his local interests to turn

Former Consuelo Vanderbilt Gets Divorce at 8-Minute Trial

Reno, Feb. 21 (AP).—An eight-minute private trial ended nine years of married life here today for Mrs. Consuello Vanderbilt Smith, heiress daughter of Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt, and her socially prominent husband, Earl E. T. Smith.

Slipping quietly into court late this afternoon, the attractive young brunette who is reported to have a personal income of $1,000,000 a year, went directly to District Judge Thomas F. Moran's courtroom. The doors were locked behind her and the trial began.

Only Mrs. Smith, who testified in support of her charge of extreme cruelty, and her residence witness, Mrs. A. A. Blackmer, were witnesses. Mrs. Blackmer conducts the ranch where Mrs. Smith spent her required six weeks residence in Nevada.

After the trial Mrs. Smith hurried out the back entrance of the court building. She declined to comment on the divorce case, which her attorney, William Woodburn, said was based "merely on mental cruelty."

She was dressed in a black dress and black hat and wore a fur coat. She drove away in Mrs. Blackmer's motor car.

Job Insurance Scope Reduced By House Body

Farmers, Domestics and 2 Working Groups Are Cut From Bill.

(Associated Press.)

Farmers, domestics and workers in small establishments and charitable institutions were removed yesterday by the House Ways and Means Committee from the realm of unemployment insurance as bounded by the Administration's social security plan.

To carry out the decision, the committee voted to exempt from the taxes by which the fund for paying insurance would be maintained employers of farm and domestic help, employers of fewer than ten, and all nonprofit or charitable institutions. Originally it would have covered employers of four or more persons in all the classifications.

No estimate of the number of persons affected by the committee change was available, except that it would run into several millons.

While the Ways and Means Committee was reshaping the social security bill, copies of the drafts of model State bills that have been prepared by Administration experts became available for the first time.

Model State Bills.

Two model State unemployment insurance bills, one covering a pool fund system and the other a plant account system, have been prepared. Suggestions for a State old-age assistance law also have been drawn up. These are ready to be put before the State Legislatures by the State directors of the emergency council as soon as the Administration is certain of the form of the national unemployment insurance and old-age pension laws will take.

The bills were drawn, Dr. Edwin E. Witte, director of the economic security committee, said, to meet all requirements of the Federal measure.

Under the pooled fund plan, all contributions would be paid into a single, undivided fund with no segregation of the amounts paid in by each employer. Benefits would be paid from the pooled fund to eligible employes.

Under the plant reserves plan, the total contributions paid into the State fund would be pooled, but the major part of each employer's contributions would be segregated within the fund and benefits paid from an employer's account only to his own eligible employes.

Pooled Fund Plan.

The pooled fund plan calls for a 3 per cent pay roll tax on the employers, but optional sections were incorporated under which the States might make their rates conform to the varying rates of the national measure up until 1938, when its 3 per cent rates comes into effect. Another optional provision would have the employes contribute 1 per cent of their wages.

The old-age bill would fix 65 as the age at which a person would be eligible for benefits. That person must: Have an inadequate income; be a citizen of the United States, and have been a resident of the State for at least five years within the ten years prior to filing application.

The amount of the assistance to be paid would be left to the local old-age assistance agency subject to rules of the State welfare department.

Between You and Me

Hoover on the Shelf; Long the Real Threat; Post-Mortem on Gold; Glass Goes Profane.

—By Raymond Clapper—

DESPITE numerous assertions to the contrary, it will take more than the statement on the Supreme Court's gold decision to put Herbert Hoover back into the Presidential picture.

Politically, he is as dead as Taft was on a raw November morning in 1912. Some prominent Republicans who have managed to stay in public life under the New Deal put it more strongly than that yesterday.

For the present, the language of 1929 is a dead tongue politically. Few speak it and fewer are interested in listening.

A new threat has come up in the last few months which has shifted the whole picture away from the old traditional lines. It is Huey Long and the vast inarticulate underdog forces whose emotions he stirs. Father Coughlin has been preparing the audience for several years. Continuation of the depression and heavy unemployment has kept it in a receptive state of mind. Huey Long has come along with the political genius to make himself its instrument.

Huey Long, not Hoover or Ogden Mills or the conservatives, is the man the Administration fears.

Wise persons in the Administration who have observed Huey closely are agreed that he is smart, fast and deadly. His daily one-man attack on Postmaster General Farley is one of the most embarrassing developments politically that the Administration has had to contend with.

Long is widely pictured as a clown but the Administration here does not fool itself by believing that. Next to Roosevelt he probably is the most vital figure in public life. His stroke yesterday, in maneuvering to bring about a critical defeat for the Administration on the wages provision of the works bill, in face of threats of a presidential veto, ought to be sufficient to drive that fact home.

What is this situation doing to national politics?

It is dividing the country into two groups, with Roosevelt on the right and Long on the left. As Long and the extremeists he typifies draw their followers from the ranks of the discontented who voted for Roosevelt against Hoover in 1932, the conservative forces tend to go to Roosevelt as the only practical way of saving the country from something worse. This might not be the situation if the Republicans as a national party showed any vitality or leaders strong enough to impress themselves upon the country. In that case Roosevelt would be caught between the cross-fire of the two outside wings of public sentiment and would lose strength both to the left wingers and to the conservatives. With a strong Republican Party he would be in serious danger. In the absence of that, he may become in 1936, paradoxical as it seems, what Coolidge was in 1924 when thousands of Democrats supported him to head off the elder La Follette.

If it is correct, as is intimated, that President Roosevelt had made preparations to go on the air and address the country in the event of an unfavorable decision from the Supreme Court on the gold cases, a situation would have been created unprecedented since Andrew Jackson said of a Supreme Court decision in his time: "John Marshall has spoken; now let him enforce his decision."

The fact is that the Supreme Court has no power to enforce its decrees. They rest upon the force of public opinion. During the constitutional debates a proposal was up for using Federal troops to enforce the court's decisions, but it was thrown out.

When the court recently ruled that the oil section of NIRA was unconstitutional, Mr. Roosevelt indulged in a parable. He told of a New York village where, after suffering a number of traffic accidents at a certain corner, a constable and traffic lights were installed. Eighteen months later, a motorist who had been arrested for going through the light fought the case and the ordinance was held to have been illegal. But, added Mr. Roosevelt with a twinkle, the village, during that 18 months, had enjoyed traffic protection and had learned through the decision how it might continune to do so by redrafting its ordinance so as to make it legal.

Is it possible that had the Supreme Court ruled against the Government and given citizens the right to recover $1.69 for every dollar of face value on their Liberty bonds Mr. Roosevelt would have urged the country to join with him in avoiding carrying out this decision? One plan was to rush through a resolution to prohibit the filing of suits.

Such post-mortem speculation is important now only as bearing on what might happen should the Supreme Court in further decisions on emergency legislation cross swords with the Administration over a vital question.

Senator Carter Glass has never tasted liquor nor smoked. He didn't used to say anything stronger than "dad-bum it" until he got into the feud with Bishop Cannon and ran out of expletives. He had been getting stronger and stronger, until yesterday, right in the middle of Senate debate, he blurted out that the Supreme Court had told buyers of Government gold bonds they could "go to hell." Senators have been known to mutter curses at each other in tones audible to each other but not to the galleries. This time the spectators' ears were so tickled that guards rushed down all aisles to shush the laughter.

George Washington's Birthday is always an event for Harry, the grizzled descendant of one of Gen. Washington's body servants, born at Mount Vernon and doorkeeper for the House Ways and Means Committee. He has been working for the House 43 years, starting as a shine boy in the House barbershop. Members mostly wore boots in those days.

"The gentlemen were very particular, especially the Kentucky and Texas gentlemen," Harry says.

The boots were vici kid, with high Cuban heels. Trousers were worn tucked in. All wore Prince Albert coats.

In those days members had no offices. They worked at their hotels.

Now Harry officiates in the sumptuous committee quarters in the new House Office Building, surrounded by electric drinking water machines, dial telephones and other gadgets unheard of when he began his public career polishing the patent leather toes of patent leather statesmen.

Pair in 'Solitary' Nine Years Freed

New Warden Releases Men Caged After Break.

Lincoln, Nebr., Feb. 21 (AP).—Two convicts who served nine years and four months in solitary confinement at the State penitentiary here for participating in the attempted break in 1925, when two men were slain, were released from solitude yesterday. They are Joe Dunn and Ray Smith.

Nearly delirious with happiness, they stumbled out of the prison jail. Unable to walk straight, they clutched the railing as they wobbled down stairs to the sidewalk and started for the office of Warden N. T. Harmon.

Releasing the men from their cells was Harmon's first act after he became warden yesterday.

Warden W. T. Fenton put the pair in solitary confinement with the promise they would never come out during his administration. The men were given life terms. Smith was serving ten years for a highway robbery and Dunn already had one life sentence for killing an Omaha policeman.

Fenton retired as warden last year because of ill health.

Sentenced to die with her is Thomas J. Lehne.

Oil Truck Trailer Explodes When Struck by Train.

Woodbridge, N. J., Feb. 21 (AP).—A crossing watchman met death in a shower of flaming gasoline today, two other men were seriously burned, and five cars and the Woodbridge Station of the Pennsylvania Railroad destroyed when a train hit an oil truck trailer carrying 1,500 gallons of gasoline. The trailer exploded.

The man fatally burned was identified as John Shannon. Witnesses said the crossing gates were up and Shannon tried to flag the truck.

Critically burned was G. M. Welch, engineer of the train. He and Albert Terhune, the fireman, who was less seriously burned, were taken to Perth Amboy Hospital. Belden Bailey, driver of the truck, and his helper, Harry DeWitt, were uninjured.

Adrenalin Injection Revives 'Dead' Patient

Tyler, Tex., Feb 21 (AP).—W. A. Strange dozed under an oxygen tent today after a physician had revived him from apparent death with an adrenalin injection in the heart. Strange indicated his mind was blank during the five minutes cardiac and respiratory action was suspended.

Strange, 71, a former sheriff of Smith County, still was weak today, but Dr. Howard Bryant, who resorted to the emergency measure, felt more confident of the patient's recovery.

Dust Storm Sweeps Western Nebraska

Lincoln, Nebr., Feb. 21 (AP).—High winds and dust clouds tore eastward across western Nebraska today moving from Sidney to near North Platte in five hours. The dust storm, accompanied by a 45-mile-an-hour wind, darkened the sun in many places.

At Sidney the storm so filled the air with dust that Cheyenne County was left in almost total darkness. Vision was limited to a few yards and few persons ventured out of doors.

Shearer Hurls Lie at Charge Of Death Plot

Will Reply Today to Story He Threatened to Kill Bethlehem Chief.

(Associated Press.)

William B. Shearer will be permitted today to voice his denial before the Senate Munitions Committee that he threatened death and scandal to shipbuilders for alleged failure to pay him for publicity.

"I was framed," he flared as yesterday's committee session ended without giving him an opportunity to answer.

Thumbing through a report of the Naval Affairs hearing of 1930 in which the allegation of his threat was made, he pointed to what he declared was evidence that it was put into the record over the protest of Clinton L. Bardo, then president of New York Shipbuilding Corporation.

Bardo was described as the author of the statement to the Naval Committee saying that Shearer threatened to kill S. W. Wakeman, president of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co., and to scandalize the industry because he was not paid $250,000 he claimed due as a representative of the shipbuilders at the Geneva naval conference in 1927, and for other services.

Ickes to Give PWA Amounts.

The committee, in announcing that Shearer would be allowed to appear today, said Secretary Ickes of the Interior would be questioned first regarding amounts of public works funds supplied the Navy in 1933 and 1934 for shipbuilding purposes. Members of the committee have expressed oppposition to allocating emergency employment funds to construction to be carried on over a period of three or four years, such as on warships.

The committee heard Capt. W. G. Du Bois, of the Navy, assert that construction costs in navy yards are less than in private yards. Dissatisfaction with his report was expressed by members, who declared it gave no true comparison because of lack of sufficient detail.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt returned to the Senate the 1925 arms control treaty approved by the Senate last year, in compliance with a recent request of the Foreign Relations Committee, which wished to strike out a section of the treaty put on by this country but found objectionable by other prospective signatories.

The reservation declares American ratification shall not mean any interference with whatever sovereignty Persia may exercise over the Persian Gulf. The State Department opposed this section because Persia never has been conceded such sovereignty.

Opposes McSwain Bill.

Chairman Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, expressed to newspapermen his opposition to the McSwain bill introduced in the House proposing to freeze prices at the outbreak of war.

"What could have been sweeter for industry than to have had prices freeze at the beginning of the World War?" Nye asked. "At that time there had been two years of steadily rising prices and they were almost at the peak when the country entered the war."

He said the committee was investigating feasibility of drafting industrial executives, giving them the rank and pay of Army officers and limiting their profits from their plants by an income tax.

Questioning of Du Bois brought out that of two cruisers described as "virtually the same," one built in naval yards, the Chicago, cost $9,635,000, while the other, built by the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co., the Augusta, cost $11,569,000.

He conceded that the navy yard cost did not include taxes, interest and other items affecting private yards, and added that some of the overhead cost in the navy yard probably was paid from other funds and not charged to the ship.

Democrats to Get 10,000 CCC Jobs planned to appoint a personnel man in each Department to receive complaints from House members and assure them of courteous treatment.

"The President assured us," the Texas explained, "that he would cooperate with us in every way possible and consider our wishes. I think we're making progrss."

Insists on Merit Plan.

Chairman Arnold, of the Democratic patronage committee, reported the President insisted non-Civil Service posts in the regular departments and emergency agencies should be filled on an efficiency basis. He predicted the new contact man in each agency, however, would be "helpful" to Democratic members.

David Lynn, Capitol architect, and Edward Brown, House Office Building superintendent, were defended by Representative Blanton, Texas, as "good Democrats" and efficient employes. Lynn and Brown were named at earlier protest meetings as among Republicans still in office.

Another Texas, Representative Sumners, made an appeal for party harmony.

McFarlane and his cohorts obtained the intervention of the President after circulating a petition to force a party caucus on patronage. In answed to a White House request for specific grievances, they submitted a list of several hundred Republicans holding key jobs under the New Deal.

While Mr. Roosevelt promised to examine the list and study all of the complaints, observers believed no wholesale shakeup would follow.

Bingham to Sail March 1.

Robert W. Bingham, Ambessador to Great Britain, after several conferences yesterday with State Department officials, announced he would sail from New York on the Majestic on March 1 to resume his duties in London.

Tugwell Denies He Will Resign As Wallace Aid

'Nothing to It,' He Declares of Reports After Parley at White House.

Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell is staying on as Undersecretary of Agriculture, all reports to the contrary nothwithstanding, he declared yesterday after a lengthy conference with President Roosevelt.

Asked if he intended to resign, either because of the shake-up in the AAA or for other reasons, he replied:

"Nothing to it."

Reports that Dr. Tugwell was considering resigning have been current ever since Jerome Frank, young AAA counsel and close associate of the Undersecreteary, was ousted summarily in the reorganization of the AAA two weeks ago.

Frank yesterday assumed his new position as a member of RFC's legal staff in the division of railroads. This berth was found for him after the AAA administrator, Chester C. Davis, had decided to dispense with his services.

The most recent official to quit the AAA was Victor A. Christgau, assistant administrator, who submitted his resignation Wednesday after having been shorn of many duties. Christgau is reported to have been critical of the AAA milk policies.

Meanwhile, there were indications that Paul A. Porter, chief of the AAA press section, is in line for promotion to an administrative position. He has been working with officials on cotton.

Diane Chamberlain Is Wed in England

London, Feb. 21 (AP).—Diane, the only daughter of Sir Austen Chamberlain, was married today to Arthur Terence Maxwell, only son of the late Brig. Gen. Sir Arthur Maxwell, in little St. Stephens' Chapel, beneath the houses of Parliament. Because of the recent death of the bridegroom's father, the ceremony was a quiet one.

The bride, 23 years of age, for some time has acted as her father's secretary. The bridegroom is a partner in the banking house of Glynn & Mills.

Jack Dempsey Gives N. Y. His Fingerprints

The former heavyweight boxing champion and several radio stars, including Abe Lyman, the band leader, accepted an invitation of Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine, who is allowing citizens to be fingerprinted and the records kept for their own safety and identification.

Board Blames Crash of Macon On Bad Frame

Accident Must Be Charged to Profit and Loss, Asserts Gatch.

San Francisco, Feb. 21 (AP).—Commander T. L. Gatch, judge advocate of a naval board of inquiry, said today a sharp gust of wind straining a "structurally weak frame" sent the dirigible Macon into the Pacific, with a loss of two lives, February 12.

"The loss," Gatch added, "we can only conclude from evidence the court has gathered, should be charged to profit and loss and, if we build another airship, we can now build her a lot better."

He said the court could fix no responsibility for the crash.

The judge advocate, summarizing testimony taken before the board, declared there was a "defect in design in that forward part of the upper fin which was not sufficiently secured against lateral pressure."

Reeves to Get Findings.

The court's findings will be submitted soon to Admiral J. M. Reeves, commander in chief of the battle force.

Secretary Swanson announced recently he would oppose appropriations for any further construction of dirigibles for the Navy, declaring they might be useful for commercial purposes but not for military operations.

But as the inquiry closed Lieut. Comdr. Herbert V. Wiley, skipper of the ill-fated Macon, expressed "earnest hope the Navy will build another airship immediately."

"They are of inestimable value as scouts," Wiley said.

A preponderance of testimony taken, Gatch declared, brought the conclusion a sharp gust of wind struck the top fin.

"The pressure on the forward part of the fin," he said, "was transmitted to the four holding down bolts at its base on frame 17½ (the frame where the forward part of the four fins was anchored). To that frame was directed the pressure from its outer rings and from there through diagonal girders to the inner ring, thereby causing a strain to be thrown on frame 17½, which possibly failed.

Gas Cell Punctured.

"One or more of the diagonal girders gave away. These undoubtedly punctured one or both of the gas cells in the tail, leaving it unsupported and causing the ship to drop into the ocean."

On the flight of the Macon last April to Florida, two girders on frame 17½ were sheared off in a storm over Texas. The Bureau of Aeronautics ordered the frame stregthened, but this work had not been completed when the Macon went down off Point Sur, Calif.

Gatch praised the Macon's crew.

"The conduct of the officers and men," he said, "evinced cool-headed action in time of great danger, clear thinking under stress and a deliberate and knowing willingness to go into places of great danger with considered disregard of personal safety."

Senate, in Revolt on Works, Votes Prevailing Pay, 44-43

be done that will result in lowering the wage scale of the Nation," was President Roosevelt's concluding promise.

Delivered with the characteristic force of the Virginia Senator, it was a powerful appeal, calculated to show revolting Democrats a way out. Senator McCarran jockeyed for the last word, a brief encomium of American living standards, and a plea that they be maintained. But long before either speech was delivered, Senators had made up their minds.

Leaders Seek Solution.

The 44-to-43 vote for the amendment left leaders in a position where they must work out a solution or send the Administration's own bill to a certain presidential veto. In order to move for reconsideration, at least one Senator who voted "aye" must switch his ballot.

Glass, who as chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, managed debate on the bill, admitted several courses are being considered, but declined to disclose them. Leaders might stake all on eliminating the prevailing wage amendment in conference with the House. Another alternative is left open. They might accept the Adams amendment, cutting the total of the bill to $2,880,000,000, which hitherto has been opposed by the Administration. In that event, Senator McCarran has indicated he may not press his prevailing amendment.

It was late in the day when Glass tossed his biting attack on the amendment. It threatened for a time to change the course of the vote.

All of the arguments in his repertoire against further increasing the indebtedness of the Government (he said the McCarran proposal would add nearly $2,000,000,000 to the cost of the bill), were hurled at his colleagues.

Assails "Federal Aid."

Already, he said, the President is considering how much further we may go into public spending "without wrecking the Nation's credit." A ten-point drop in bonds, he warned, might render insolvent every bank in the country, and the laboring class would be the first to suffer.

For a moment he turned his fire at the very principle of "Federal aid," which has been anathema to him. The States, he argued, should care for their own indigent, and are qualified to do so.

"Instead," he told the Senate, "every State and every community has put itself in a position to servitude to the Federal Government to such an extent that some of these miserable little bureaucrats here in Washington have had the insolence to threaten States with the withdrawal of Federal funds unless special sessions of their Legislatures were summoned to give them more funds."

"Federal aid" he shouted. "There never was such a misnomer in the English language. The Federal Government has no means of getting a dollar to expend that it doesn't extract from pocketbooks of taxpayers in the States."

Glass tossed words of bitter rebuke at Senators backing the amendment as he came to the support of an Administration that in the early days of the bill had ignored his influence.

"I have been astounded,' he said, "that Senators who are supposed to be identified with the Administration, who thought the result of the last election was providential and that the President is God's vice regent on earth, should have denounced in words of biting scorn, approaching vituperation, this measure in which the President is vitally interested."

It was the sardonic, slashing Glass of old, alternately critical of persuasive.

McCarran Fears "Cataclysm."

In closing, he repeated his opening admonition that he had "substantial reason to believe that this amendment, if incorporated, will encounter a presidential veto."

McCarran took only a few minutes for rebuttal. He predicted the catastrophe following upon collapse of the Nation's credit would be nothing compared with the "cataclysm" following upon universal unemployment.

Then the roll was called and Glass was able to muster only 41 Democrats and 2 Republicans—Hale of Maine, and Metcalf of Rhode Island—short 1 vote of the number needed.

It was the second time Administration leaders had left the floor empty-handed this session on a major vote. The first rebuff was suffered early this month, when the Senate turned down the President's request for World Court adherence.

Sweepstakes Tickets Worth Million Seized

Philadelphia, Feb. 21 (AP).—S. J. Montgomery, inspector in charge of the local customs office, and several of his men today boarded a ship entering this port from France and said they seized more than $1,500,000 worth of sweepstakes tickets concealed in bales of rags.

Montgomery said the shipment of rags was consigned to a man in Trenton, N. J., whose name was given as Samuel Barra. A warrant for his arrest was issued.

Glass Attacks Money Policy In Senate Row

Terms Gold Action 'Cheat and Repudiation,' Hits Court Decision.

majority opinion pointed out Congress was under no obligation to provide a remedy for bondholders who believe they have been damaged. The Government can not be sued without its consent.

If the Supreme Court in its decision meant that damages could be shown if the present-day dollars paid in satisfaction of Treasury obligations did not purchase as much as the dollars originally lent to the Government, there may soon be a test on that ground unless the right to sue is withdrawn.

A three-year issue of 3 per cent notes bearing the gold clause, according to Treasury attaches, matures on June 15 in the sum of about $417,000,000. These notes were issued on June 15, 1932. According to the Labor Department Bureau of Statistics, the wholesale commodity price index (all commodities) was 64.0 on June 25, 1932. For the week ended February 16 last, it was 79.4, an increase of 15.4 points, or almost 25 per cent. The retail price index figure, including all foods, at the end of June, 1932, was 100.1, and at the end of last month was 119.8.

Lost Purchasing Power.

Thus, if the present price level increases or does not decrease between now and June, holders of the maturing notes would be in a position to demonstrate lost purchasing power for their dollars. There is some debate, however, as to whether the Supreme Court intended purchasing power to be the decisive factor.

Senator Connally, one of the leaders of the movement for devaluation of the dollar, contended Mr. Hoover was trying to bring back the system which caused "his Administration to tumble in ruin about him." He said a system that would mean destruction should not be adopted and that the country was now on a gold standard.

"The Senator knows we are not on a gold standard," interrupted Senator Glass. "We are on a fiat basis and under the opinion handed down by the Supreme Court we are on a fiat bond basis."

Senator Connally replied the Supreme Court had answered such an argument but instead of appeasing the Virginian the remark seemed to irritate him the more.

"The Supreme Court says that what Congress did was a cheat and repudiation," Senator Glass retorted. "It further says that those who have been cheated and repudiated, if they undertake to recover what the Government agreed to give them, can go to hell."

Returns to Debate.

Senator Connally explained the Court of Claims remained in which bondholders could demonstrate any damage suffered by them. Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, contended that claimants always could come to Congress. He agreed the country was on a gold standard under which each dollar contained 15 grains plus of gold.

The Virginian returned to the debate to ask how a dollar might be redeemed in gold. Senator Connally agreed that it could not, but argued that "you can't eat gold and you don't wear it except in perpetuation of barbaric customs" and asked why anyone should want gold. He said it was only a yardstick of the measure of monetary value.

The Texan contended that gold should be the Government's property, in order to dominate the money system. The yellow metal should not be used to "enrich" holders, as the Supreme Court said, Senator Connally added.

Senator Glass said he agreed the Government should have domination over money, but he also believed the Government, when it had such "domination" should keep its word and not swindle people and not write a lie into every bill it issues."

"Lie" Printed on Money.

The Virginian took from his pocket a currency note and, holding it up, read from it.

"The Government says," he read in his drawling voice, "that this $2 note that I have is 'redeemable in gold on demand at the United States Treasury or in gold or lawful money at the Federal Reserve banks,' and the Senator knows that is not true. He knows that it is a lie printed right on the face of that bill. He knows it will not be redeemed except with another piece of paper."

Later the debate quieted down and the Senate went to work on the relief bill. The type of currency note from which Senator Glass read could not be ascertained. The promise to pay in gold, however, was printed on Federal Reserve notes which are still in circulation as well as gold certificates which have been ordered surrendered.

Asked if it were a gold certificate he read from, Senator Glass asserted, "What do you want to do, put me in jail?"

Roosevelt Was Ready To Go to the People

Reports that President Roosevelt planned to go on the air Monday night, had the Supreme Court overthrown his monetary policy, and appeal to the Nation to back him in measures to protect the Treasury, were not denied by the White House yesterday.

That elaborate precautions had been taken to meet every conceivable contingency was common knowledge. But that the President had gone to the extent of preparing an address to the country, to explain the necessity for Government action, was not reported until yesterday.

As it was, the Supreme Court upheld the New Deal's cancellation of the gold clause, in effect, when it ruled by a 5-to-4 decision that the holders of Government gold-clause bonds had suffered no damages and thus had no claim for more than the face value of the securities.

If the opinion had been otherwise, however—and the difference was the vote of just one justice—the Administration would have been forced to take steps to circumvent the court's ruling. An adverse decision might have meant that for every $1 of gold-clause securities outstanding the owner could collect $1.69 in devalued currency.

Significance was attached to the President's apparent readiness to "go to the people" for two reasons. First, it was regarded as an indication of what might be expected if the Supreme Court upsets some other major Administration law. Secondly, it would have brought out the conflict between the Constitution, as construed by the court, and the conditions which Congress and the Chief Executive believe required legislative or administrative remedies.

Roosevelt's Letter to Glass

The text of the President's letter to Senator Glass on wages to be paid under the works relief bill follows:

February 21, 1935.

The White House,
Washington,
Dear Senator Glass:

In response to your telephonic inquiry, I am very glad to report what I told you and several members of your committee last week.

Every action of the Administration during the past two years has been directed, first, to the objective of raising wage scales which, from the point of view of public interest, were set at unconscionably low levels; and, secondly, we have constantly followed the objective of preventing reductions in existing wage scales.

So much for that, except that I might add that both of these objectives are constantly before us, and will continue so to be.

As you are aware, the practical operation of the principle of collective, plus the operation of the national industrial recovery act, have, in the overwhelming majority of cases of organized and unorganized labor, either raised wages or prevented any reduction in wages.

I object to and deny any assertion that the payment of wages to workers now on the relief rolls at less than the prevailing rate of wages may, under some theory, result in a lowering of wages paid by private employers. I say this because it is an obvious fact—first, that the Federal Government and every State government will act to prevent reductions, and, secondly, because public opinion throughout the country will not sustain reductions.

I have enough faith in the country to believe that practically 100 per cent of employers are patriotic enough to prevent the lowering of wages. In this thought they will have the full support of the Government.

I think that the record of this Administration has demonstrated that in the administering of this legislation I will not permit anything to be done that will result in lowering the wage scale of the Nation.

Very sincerely yours,
FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

States Propose Works Projects Of Nine Billion

PWA Expects to Get an Even Higher Total in National Survey.

Plans for new public works projects totaling $9,000,000,000, almost twice the sum carried in the pending works relief bill, have been submitted to PWA, it was learned yesterday.

These proposed projects have been sent in the course of a Nation-wide survey ordered by PWA in connection with the new program to be developed under the pending legislation.

Officials estimate that the total will mount much higher than the present $9,000,000,000 figure when the list is complete. Two States have not yet been heard from and States reporting have sent in only partial lists to be added to later.

It is explained, however, that in many cases these projects would be withdrawn in event State and local governments were called upon to finance part of the cost. Although no definite policy has been formally announced, it is understood that President Roosevelt is at the moment insistent that a share of the cost, probably a least 70 per cent, be borne by the localities through issuance of long-term bonds.

The figures support Administration claims that there is no lack of potential work to which the huge pending appropriation could be put.

Girls Winners In Scholarship Section Tests

Three Awarded Medals at Roosevelt High in Post's Project.

Girls captured all three final honors and subsequent chances for major scholarship awards in Roosevelt High School intramurals in the second Washington Post Scholarship Competition, which terminated yesterday with exercises in the school auditorium. Allan Davis, principal, presided, and Dr. George B. Woods, dean, American University, presented silver medals to the winners on behalf of The Post and the university, sponsors of the project.

The winners, Wenona Barger, Eleanore M. Charis and Ruth E. Butrick, paid a visit later in the day to the American University and were shown about the College of Liberal Arts by Dr. Woods. Their victory yesterday entitles them to compete in campus finals at American April 27 against division winners in other local schools and rural communities surrounding Washington, for the two four-year tuition scholarships offered girl final winners by the College of Liberal Arts.

Miss Barger received first place in the ballots of a faculty jury, headed by Miss Frances S. Hay, for her essay on "Russia Today." She will receive a certificate of honor in recognition of her efforts, which included extensive reading. She is 18 years old, is active in the Girls' Glee Club, president of the Girl Reserves Club at her school, and an editorial writer for the Roosevelt Reporter. She is ambitious for college training for a career in social work.

Miss Charis, 18-year-old daughter of Arthur Charis, of the Alabama Apartments, graduated from Roosevelt February 1. She has keen hopes for a course at American, with major studies in social sciences. Her essay is on "The Relation of World Trade to American Recovery." She, as vice president of the Roosevelt Literary Club, secretary of the Ampico Club, treasurer of the Math Club, manager of the girls' basket ball team, and active in the Hilarodes, Spanish, Glee and Constitution clubs.

Miss Butrick, the 16-year-old daughter of Arthur B. Butrick, of 1332 Ingraham street northwest, covered "Pros and Cons of Hitlerism" in her winning essay. She is especially interested in history and archeology, which she plans to study in college.

Drewry Heads Congress Body Of Democrats

Succeeds Speaker Byrns as Committee Chairman; Plans Campaign.

A short, white-thatched orator from Virginia, Representative Patrick H. Drewry, last night was elected chairman of the Democratic National Congressional Committee.

He succeeded Speaker Byrns, who designed the committee chairmanship a fortnight ago after unsuccessfully seeking to quit the extra work a year ago while he was House majority leader.

Chrales S. Hayden, former Washington newspaperman, was elected executive secretary to serve for two years. His appointment previously had been for no fixed period.

Vice chairmen named were Representative Eugene B. Crowe, Indiana; Abe Murdock, Utah, and William J. Granfield, Massachusetts.

Drewry reported the committee possessed a "small surplus" in its war chest and predicted the Democratic majority in the House would be increased substantially at the next election. He said organization work would begin at once.

Social Affairs Mark Holiday

1933 Bay Catch Value Is Placed At $5,061,000

31,700 Employed in Industry; Oyster Lead Cash Returns.

(Associated Press.)

A total of 272,380,000 pounds of seafood was taken out of Chesapeake Bay waters by commercial fisheries in 1933, the latest year for which figures are available.

The Bureau of Fisheries announced yesterday the value of the year's catch was $5,061,000. The figures represent a decrease of 24 per cent in volume, but only 14 per cent in value, as compared with the catch of the previous year.

The catch in Virginia waters amounted to 217,018,000 pounds, valued at $3,327,000, while in Maryland waters it amounted to 55,362,000 pounds, valued at $1,734,000.

The fisheries of the two States gave employment to 20,100 fishermen, while 11,600 additional persons had jobs in wholesale and manufacturing establishments connected with the industry.

The oyster remained the most valuable Chesapeake product during the year. A total of 25,153,000 pounds of oyster meats valued at $1,725,000 was taken from the bay.

Following in order were crabs, 56,076,000 pounds, valued at $997,000; shad, 6,191,000 pounds, valued at $573,000; menhaden, 115,990,000 pounds, valued at $386,000; sea trout, 13,636,000 pounds, valued at $227,000; hard clams, 1,211,000 pounds, valued at $268,000, and croakers, 16,042,000 pounds, valued at $311,000.

In 1933 there were 502 wholesale and manufacturing fishery establishments in Maryland and Virginia, which paid wages aggregating $2,367,000 and manufactured products of a total value of $7,234,000.

Bill Is Offered To Grant Towns Funds Control

Prince Georges Group in Move to Change Gas Tax Statute.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 21 (Spl.). A bill sponsored by the Prince Georges County Municipal Officers Association authorizing expenditure of a portion of State gasoline tax funds by the incorporated towns of the county at their discretion was introduced in the House of Delegates today by the Prince Georges County delegation.

Submission of the measure marks the culmination of a long fight by the towns in the suburban area against present gasoline tax statute, enacted by the 1933 Legislature. The statute, which diverts 1½ cents of the 4-cent State tax to the counties to be expended for construction and maintenance of roads and for aid on bonded indebtedness of towns by the State roads commission, has proved unsatisfactory, officials of many of the incorporated towns claim.

The bill introduced today provides there shall be allotted to each incorporated town a sum which bears the same proportion to the total allotment of the county as the amount of the county road tax rebated to the town in 1932 bore to the total road fund of the county for that year. It further stipulates the State roads commission shall turn over this amount to each town for the purpose of payment of interest, sinking funds or redemption payments on bonds issued by the towns for street purposes or for maintenance, construction and repair of streets.

Alternative Offered.

A clause inserted in the measure would permit any town to have its share of the tax money expended by the State Roads Commission for maintenance or construction work. Several of the incorporated towns have expressed the desire to have their road work supervised by the commission.

The present gasoline tax law, which expires September 30, 1935, provides that in the event any town has bonded indebtedness for street work, it can obtain an allotment from the State Roads Commission, but that if no bonded indebtedness exists, the towns must have their proposed street work authorized, approved and expended by the commission.

Many of the towns have had difficulty in obtaining their allotments and cases have been cited of no payments having been received since passage of the law in 1933. Mayor Fred W. Gast, of Cheverly, which has failed to obtain any funds from the commission, has been a leader in the fight for introduction of the new measure.

Some Areas Unaffected.

The new bill follows the old statute in that it provides for expenditure by the State Roads Commission of the balance of the Prince Georges County allotment in that portion of the county not included within the limits of the incorporated towns.

Several members of the county legislative delegation expressed doubt of passage of the bill because of it affecting the State's finances, not being in effect a local measure. It has been referred to the ways and means committee.

Backing of the measure has been given by officials of the Municipal Officers Association from Hyattsville, Mount Rainier, Riverdale, Brentwood, North Brentwood, Bladensburg, Colmar Manor, Cottage City and Cheverly.

Fairfax County Physicians Rap Health Set-up

Propose More Economical Unit to Replace One Costing $10,500.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

Fairfax County (Va.) physicians yesterday made another attack on the county health unit at a joint meeting of the board of supervisors and school board. The meeting was held for a discussion of finances and expenditures during the 1935-36 fiscal year.

The physicians—Dr. E. C. Shull, of Herndon; Dr. Jessie Thornton Scott, of Vienna, and Dr. C. A. Ransom, of Falls Church—said the health unit has outgrown its usefulness.

The unit consists of a director, sanitation inspector, nurse and clerk. Its cost is $10,500, of which half is paid by the county and half by the State. Its work is confined to preventive measures, as the health director is not permitted to engage actively in the practice of medicine. The unit seeks to control the spread of diseases and conducts an annual health examination of all school children.

Substitute Plan Proposed.

As a substitution, Dr. Shull proposed a nurse with one or two assistants to help local physicians. He declared sanitation regulations are not enforced and that the present inspector is overpaid. If the board wanted to retain an inspector, a person could be found to do the same work at a much lower salary, he stated. Dr. Shull admitted the health unit does not interfere with private practice and that there is no conflict, but added that the health unit is of no assistance to local doctors.

Dr. Ransom declared the physicians are willing to take over the work of the health unit in the control of communicable diseases at no cost to the county. He said he did not believe the cost of the proposed substitute unit would exceed $5,000.

W. P. P. Reed, chairman of the supervisors, announced a public hearing on the proposed county budget, which includes the health unit item, would be held April 2, and that the physicians could file their protests then.

Salary Restoration Asked.

During the afternoon session of the supervisors, Sheriff E. P. Kirby asked that salary reductions applied to him and the county police be restored. He pointed out that the equivalent of cuts, which were about 10 per cent, had been returned in a number of cases and that during the past year his net income as sheriff was about $1,900.

The board voted to restore that portion of the sheriff's salary paid by the county to $1,200, but refused to restore salaries of the three county policemen from $112.50 a month to $150.

A number of petitions protesting the condition of secondary roads, and asking the State to allocate more funds for their care and maintenance were received.

Prince Georges Continues Investigation in Case of Student Boxer.

Prince Georges County police last night continued their investigation into the death of Adolf Wolfson, 19, University of Maryland student, who died early yesterday from a cerebral hemorrhage after a boxing match with his school mates last Saturday.

After viewing the body at the District Morgue, a coroner's jury, headed by Acting Coroner George S. Phillips, of Berwyn, Md., set February 27 for the inquest.

An autopsy was performed by Dr. John T. Maloney, of Cheverly, Md. The body was retained at the morgue pending further investigations. Sergt. Ralph Brown, of the Hyattsville station, took charge of the inquiry for the county.

Friends of Wolfson, who lived at Gaithersburg, Md., said he had engaged in several rounds of friendly boxing with his schoolmates last Saturday. Then, at the university gymnasium, he played basket ball for a short while.

While in the shower room of the gymnasium he began to complain of his head, then became hysterical, and was taken to the local infirmary. Dr. Leonard Hayes, school physician, ordered him rushed to Garfield Hospital. An emergency operation was performed. He never regained consciousness after leaving the gymnasium.

Wedding in 1926 Brilliant Affair

New York, Feb. 21 (Spl.).—The former Consuelo Vanderbilt, a granddaughter of the late James G. Fair on her mother's side and of the late William Kissam Vanderbilt, was married to Earl T. Smith, a Yale man, here on January 7, 1926. The wedding took place at the home of her parents at 666 Fifth avenue. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Thomas Murphy, of St. Patrick's Cathedral, who officiated at the wedding of Miss Vanderbilt's parents in 1899, and was followed by a brilliant reception.

Mrs. Smith's sister, the former Muriel Vanderbilt, was married in 1925 to Frederick Cameron Church, but the marriage ended in divorce and she was married in 1931 to Henry Delafield Phelps.

After her first marriage her mother, Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt, tried to have the marriage annulled because of religious differences, she being a Roman Catholic.

It was reported as late as the summer of 1931, two years after Muriel Vanderbilt's divorce from Mr. Church, who is a Protestant, that the mother had tried for two years or more to have the Rota of the Roman Catholic Church annul the marriage, finally abandoning the effort. It also was reported, but never affirmed, that after the first marriage ceremony another ceremony was performed months later by a Catholic priest.

Secrecy Upset On Patman Act To Force Vote

House Overthrows 'Gag' on Petition for Bonus Bill; 78 Already Sign.

(Associated Press.)

A new, stringent secrecy rule was invoked, criticized and promptly liberalized yesterday by House leaders as backers of the $2,000,000,000 Patman bonus pay-off bill moved to assure consideration of the measure.

Representative Patman (Democrat), of Texas, filed a petition to force a House vote on his bill in the event it is blocked in committee. Within two hours, he had obtained 64 of the necessary 217 signatures.

But when his petition was filed, word was passed around to House employes that they could not tell newspapermen how many names were on the petition, or even that it had been presented.

A number of House members protested, Representative Kvale (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, asserting off the floor: "That is wrong. It doesn't conform either with the spirit or the letter of House rules."

Many Rush to Sign.

Subsequently, Speaker Byrns and Chairman O'Connor (Democrat), of New York, of the House Rules Committee, agreed the original order was too strong, and it was changed to permit newspapermen to find out how many members had signed the petition.

Patman emphasized that he intended "no criticism" of the Ways and Means Committee, before which his bill is pending. He said that when the necessary majority of the present membership had been obtained—217 signatures in all—the right to force a House vote would not be invoked if the committee gave his bill "reasonable consideration."

Into the well with Patman went a score of members, seeking to get their names high upon the list of signers. Patman was first, Representative Eagle (Democrat), Texas, second and Representative Cannon (Democrat), Missouri, third. Some Republicans, Progressives and all three Farm-Labor members signed.

Leaders, meanwhile, continued their "hands-off" policy, declining to take sides in the dispute between advocates of the Patman and the American Legion bills. The former would pay the bill by issuing new currency; the latter would merely authorize an appropriation.

Is Given Only Week.

If Patman obtains the required 217 signatures within a week, it would be in order for him to ask a vote on his bill either on March 11 or March 25.

Three other petitions also were filed. One was by Representative Lundeen (Farm-Labor), Minnesota, for his bonus bill. However, he signed the Patman petition and urged others to do likewise.

The other petitions were filed by Representative Blanton (Democrat), Texas, one to take away from the Immigration Committee a bill to stop all immigration for 10 years and the other to take from the Rules Committee a resolution making it in order for the Patman bill to be attached to the legislative appropriation bill, which carries salaries of Representatives and Senators.

Stay Is Granted, Hauptmann's Lawyers Agree

Reilly and N. J. Staff Decide to Press for Appeal Speedily.

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 21 (AP).—Bruno Richard Hauptmann, sentenced to die in the electric chair for the kidnap-murder of the Lindbergh baby, won an indefinite stay of execution today, and his four lawyers, once more in harmony, promised to go ahead with his appeal as speedily as possible.

Edward J. Reilly, of Brooklyn, and the three New Jersey attorneys—C. Lloyd Fisher, Frederick A. Pope and Egbert Rosecrans—conferred for several hours at the State Prison. Mrs. Hauptmann attended the conference, and all five saw Hauptmann.

Hauptmann's execution, set for the week of March 18 by Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Trenchard, was stayed when a certified copy of a writ of error was filed with Irving Bleam, prison clerk, by Pope and Fisher. An hour earlier they had filed the original writ with the Court of Errors and Appeals, the State's highest tribunal.

"All of the small differences, which were very small, indeed, have been forgotten," Pope said. "We are going ahead with the appeal as expeditiously as possible."

Mrs. Hauptmann said her husband asked what food his baby son, Mannfried, is now getting, and whether he has learned any new words. She displayed a photograph of her husband, taken by a newspaper photographer at Flemington, and autographed by Hauptmann for his wife.

Storekeeper Fined $75 On 'Short-Weight' Count

The last of five local merchants accused of violating the District weights and measures law by allegedly "short-weighting" persons on relief rolls was arraigned in Police Court yesterday.

Charles Lerner, proprietor of a store on M street near South Capitol street, pleaded guilty and was fined $75. Because he has since sold his store and has no previous police record, Lerner was accorded leniency on recommendation of Assistant Corporation Counsel Edward Curran.

Three other merchants are awaiting trial and a fifth previously was fined $100.

Where Girls Fell, Pilot and Father

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

The spot marked by the boards is where the bodies of Jane and Elizabeth DuBois were found at Upminster, England, after the girls had leaped from a plane. The photo was sent by radio from London to New York. ....

at Upminster, after workmen "saw something fall" from a plane.

The bodies were taken to the Hornchurch village mortuary to await the inquest.

Two letters were found in the airliner, addressed to the father and mother of the girls. They will be read at the inquest.

Scotland Yard operatives examined the plane and found it intact, except for the open door, the lock of which was in good order. Pilot Kirton is rated as a first class navigator.

With the broken bodies of Jane and Elizabeth were scraps of their belongings. These included a hat, a glove and a wrist watch, still ticking.

Hid From Friends.

Witnesses said the bodies would have struck houses in Upminster had they not been blown by a strong wind. The bodies were only a few yards from the road.

The last few days of life for the distraught girls were passed in secret, hidden from their friends.

They arrived Tuesday night, registered at the Ritz Hotel for a double bedroom and remained in it much of the last two days, coming down only for a walk.

"They seemed upset and rather hysterical," a hotel official said. "They wept a lot. They checked out this morning."

They had booked reservations at the London Women's Club earlier, but canceled them by telephone.

An official of the Hillman Line said the girls telephoned yesterday asking for reservations for themselves and four others—apparently fictitious characters. They told Kirton the others "aren't coming," and the plane left on schedule.

A little later they leaped. A gas company worker who saw them fall said their bodies "came down like two pieces of paper, fluttering to earth."

The Du Bois girls had lived in London for two months last year, vacating a small flat in June after one of the sisters was involved in an automobile accident in which a bicyclist was injured. Both were gone when police investigators called.

On their return Tuesday, Jane and Elizabeth deliberately refrained from allowing friends to know they were in London. Several friends in the United States embassy and consulate who saw them frequently last year said they had not known the girls were in London this week until they read in the newspapers of their deaths.

The consulate in Naples telephoned the consulate in London to claim the bodies and "handle necessaries." United States Consul Franklin C. Gowen proceeded to Upminster with an undertaker.

Police took possession of their suitcases from the plane. The door of the blue and silver airliner then was sealed.

Ill Health of One Girl Recalled by Friends Here

Ill health may have driven Elizabeth and Jane du Bois to leap to their deaths from a Paris-bound airplane at Upminster, England, yesterday, friends of the girls, who remembered their Washington school days, surmised last night.

Jane, 20, it was recalled, suffered from chronic asthma. In life, friends said, the girls were inseparable. Their hands were joined in death, according to press reports.

Meanwhile, in the Falls Church, Va., home of Paul G. Redington, chief of the Bureau of Biological Survey, frisked one who, next to Jane, probably was Elizabeth's favorite playmate. She was Shimmie, 12-year-old fox terrier, given by Elizabeth to Mary Ann Redington when the Du Bois turned their home over to the Redingtons to move to Washington in 1925. The dog was named by Elizabeth, Mrs. Redington recalled, because its tail wagging as a puppy required the exercise of virtually her entire body.

In 1926 the girls attended Friends School here, where they showed a superiority in their studies, earlier demonstrated in Falls Church Schools. Throughout the 1926-27 term Miss Theresa M. O'Sullivan, their teacher, recalled, they were on the school honor roll, excelling particularly in languages. Elizabeth was at that time 15 years old, Jane, 12.

Associated Press Photos.

Coert DuBois, left, father of the girls, and John Kirton, pilot of the plane they hired for their fatal flight.

The family lived in or near Washington from 1923 to 1927, while the girls' father, Coert du Bois, served at chief of the State Department's visa division. Before the war, in which he served at lieutenant colonel in the Engineer Corps, Mr. du Bois was associated with Mr. Reddington in the United States Forestry Service.

He entered the State Department following his discharge from the Army, and in 1927 was sent abroad, serving in Batavia, Java and Genoa before taking his present post in Naples.

The family came here originally from San Francisco, and State Department records showed that the sisters' nearest relative in this country was Allen R. Campbell.

Mother Prostrated By News of Suicides

(Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.)

Naples, Feb. 21.—Mrs. Coert Du Bois, wife of the United State Consul here and mother of two American girls who leaped to death from a British airliner, was prostrated tonight. Her condition delayed funeral arrangements.

Du Bois telephoned to London asking the American consular officials to handle details pending his arrival. He plans to depart tomorrow.

Neither he nor Mrs. Du Bois, the former Margaret Mendell, of Boston, would discuss the tragedy. Friends said they were bewildered.

Friends of the family told how the girls had been frequent companions of Flight-Lieut. Henry L. Beatty, half-brother of Lord Beatty, and Flying Office John A. C. Forbes, killed in the crash of a British Royal Air Force hydroplane in Sicily last week.

The fliers were seen with Jane and Elizabeth almost nightly during their sojourn here. They were in Naples from January 25 to February 15.

Some believed the girls were engaged to marry the British officers.

United States Ambassador Breckenridge Long, at Rome, a close friend of the Du Bois family, said: "I can not believe it. I am deeply shocked."

Du Bois had been scheduled to visit the ambassador Saturday.

Girls' Love Revealed In Strange Episode

London, Feb. 21 (AP).—A strange episode illustrating the deep feeling which Jane and Elizabeth Du Bois felt for their reputed sweethearts, killed in a British air force crash, was disclosed here tonight.

Among the last to see the American girls alive before their tragic hand-in-hand plunge from an airplane today was Thomas Dedman, who said:

"I was standing outside the Labor Exchange Wednesday at 4 p. m. when a taxicab drew up and two girls in fur coats stepped out.

"The elder had a bagful of silver and went up to several people handing out half crowns (about 60 cents, saying, 'This is from Lieut. Forbes.'

"Seldom have I seen two women who looked so obessed with grief."

over $1,250,000 to his children as an outright gift.

Mellon was then Ambassador to the Court of St. James. The money was used to help the children purchase a half interest in the Melbank Corporation, another Mellon holding company.

Such transatlantic calls to advise on business matters were frequent while Mellon was ambassador, Johnson said.

Interests Transferred.

Jackson failed in an attempt to infer that Mellon was purchasing bank stock through his brother, the late Richard B., while he was Secretary of the Treasury. He had turned over his personal interests to Richard when he assumed the secretaryship, as required by law.

Jackson brought out that part of the transfer was $10,000,000 in Union Trust stock which was passed on to Paul Mellon in 1930. In addition to that, however, R. B. Mellon owed his brother $1,250,000 which was never repaid.

The hearing adjourned today until Monday.

New Liquor Licenses Net $653,260 to D. C.

Liquor licenses issued this month have brought $653,260 into the District coffers, it was reported yesterday to the Liquor Control Board by Chief Inspector Jerome L. Johnstone.

This is $91,482 more than was collected for licenses in the previous 11 months of repeal. The year for licenses began February 1. The most revenue came from licenses to sell liquor in bottle form, $297,000 having been collected for this type.

But Quiet Observance of Washington's Birthday Scheduled Today.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Washington's birthday will be observed quietly in Alexandria, the Washington's Birthday Association having decided not to stage the parade which has been the main attraction in alternate years. Many organizations will place wreaths on the tomb of Washington at Mount Vernon.

The annual session of the George Washington Masonic National Memorial Association, which is building the $4,000,000 memorial temple on Shooters Hill, will be held in the temple at 10 o'clock this morning, with a recess for luncheon. The afternoon session will be called to order at 2 o'clock, and will be presided over by Col. Louis A. Watres, of Scranton, Pa., president of the Association. The principal business to come before the meeting will be the annual financial report.

Alexandria-Washington Lodge of Masons, of which Gen. Washington was the first worshipful master, will hold its annual banquet in the armory at 6:30 p. m. The banquet will be preceded by a stated communication of the lodge, at 5:30 p. m., and will be attended by approximately 400 persons. In the morning the officers of the lodge will go to Mount Vernon, headed by Clyde C. Lamond, jr., worshipful master, to place a wreath on Washington's tomb.

Members of the Friendship Veterans Fire Association, of which Washington was a member, headed by Samuel B. DeVaughan, will assemble at 115 North Pitt street and go by motor to Mount Vernon, there to place a wreath on the tomb of Washington. Members will be in uniform.

Charles H. Callahan, commissioner of revnue of Alexandria and Virginia historian, was guest speaker at the weekly luncheon of the Alexandria Kiwanis Club yesterday in the George Mason Hotel. Mr. Callahan told of the boyhood and young manhood of Washington, and his association with the Fairfaxes; of his education as a surveyor and of his taking an examination before the board of the College of William and Mary and being awarded a surveyor's certificate when only 17 years old. In 1751 he was made commander of the Northern Military Division, with rank of major of provincial troops, raised and drilled a command in Alexandria, and engaged in the Great Meadows campaign, later joinin Gen. Braddock and saving that officer's command from annihilation.

Col. John H. Trimyer was program chairman and introduced the speaker. President Robert W. Eaves presided, and announced that an unusual program would be presented next Thursday under the direction of John Huff.

The annual report of the Alexandria branch of the American Red Cross, made public yesterday, shows that the chapter had 914 members in 1934, and carried out six of the eight activities which the Red Cross sponsors.

Five members of the disaster-relief committee attended the conference on this subject at national headquarters and organized the local committee along the lines recommended at this conference. Two members attended the clinic for mental disturbances at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Anacostia, and received certificates for the course. Volunteer service gave 1,500 hours, or 187½ eight-hour days.

Home service aided 30 former service, service and civilian families and several transients with information, medicines, medical care, food and clothing.

Twelve children passed their beginner's and swimmer's tests and received their badges. A first-aid school was held for 100 CCC workers, who, in turn, will teach others. The chapter gave this course wtih the help of the local fire department. A letter of special commendation was received from national headquarters for the manner in which this school as conducted.

The canteen service planned menus for hot luncheons for 297 undernourished children in five schools. This was done in cooperation with the Parent-Teachers Association and United Charities, who financed the project. Lunches cost approximately 5 cents per meal and were given to the children free. They consist of hot soup, milk, bread and buttter, fish, meat, starch and green vegetables and fruit, giving a balanced and varied diet. Two workers aided the FERA with the subsistence garden project. The cotton distribution committee and production corps helped 300 families with 2,500 garments at a cost of $10.95 to the chapter. Experts Take Stand in Fight For Weitzman

Handwriting Men Testify at Chicago Insurance Murder Trial.

Chicago, Feb. 21 (AP).—Two handwriting experts took the witness stand late today as the defense opened its fight to save Irving Weitzman from the electric chair.

Weitzman, bantam-sized business man accused of engineering the murder of Eli Daiches, wealthy advertising executive, in a $300,000 insurance plot, prepared to follow them as his own star witness.

The experts—Howard A. Rounds and Rudolph Salmon—were handed two telegraph blanks. Thomas Kelly had testified earlier that one of them was the original of the $200 money order he had wired to Walter Murphy in Florida in January, 1934. The other was a copy of the message he had written in court. Kelly had said he sent the money to Murphy at Weitzman's behest. The State claimed it was part of the $25,000 the defendant paid Murphy to arrange Daiches' slaying.

Both Rounds and Salmon said the telegrams were not written by the same person.

They were preceded by 15 men who had conducted business transactions with Weitzman, head of a chain of bakeries. All described his character as good.

The State closed its case with a dramatic incident.

Andrew Askew, colored bellboy, testified he had seen Murphy, Weitzman and Jack London, fugitive gangster named as Murphy's associate in the murder plot, at the Miami-Strand Hotel, Miami, in January, 1934. Asked to identify the man who had visited the hoodlums, he stepped down and leveled a finger at Weitzman.

"There he is," he said.

The State claimed Daiches was killed in order that the Thomas Bowers Advertising Agency could collect $300,000 in insurance money. The agency is headed by the defendant's brother, Louis Weitzman, of New York.

THEY'RE SAFE—IN AN ALL-STEEL BODY
—a feature of the big, rugged New-Value Dodge

THE first Dodge car ever built had an all-steel body. It wasn't chance . . . it wasn't "climbing on a bandwagon" that led Dodge to the safety of the all-steel body. It was progressive engineering, the urge to pioneer, to lead and not follow in vital, important automobile improvements.

These Dodge bodies have been tested and proved by owners for over 20 years, everywhere, in constant daily use. Dodge not only pioneered the all-steel body but has constantly perfected it over the years.

So, too, with hydraulic brakes. First introduced by Dodge many years ago, Dodge has constantly developed them. Today, Dodge gives you hydraulic brakes that are long past the experimental stage. For in Dodge you get perfected, dual-cylinder hydraulic brakes—safer, more dependable, more economical than other types.

Now Dodge pioneers again the "Airglide Ride", in which you speed smoothly along with new comfort, skimming over bumps without a tremor or jar, taking the curves safely, without sidesway. Another new contribution to motoring ease is "Synchromatic Control", which makes driving unbelievably easy and effortless.

You'll recognize this Dodge as a prize beauty the minute you see it. But you must drive it to see how far ahead of others it is in power and speed, comfort and economy, safety and performance.

IN A GAS HEATED HOME

Boy oboy oboy! An extra half hour's sleep in the morning!

If you awaken at the usual "furnace tending hour" in the morning after you've had Automatic Gas Heating installed it will either be through force of habit (which will quickly wear off), or for the pleasure of ignoring the clock and enjoying the next half hour. In the Gas Heated Home the furnace wakes up before you do, has the house warm and comfortable when you arise. How? By that modern, magical marvel, the thermostat. Just set the temperature you like. A simple time clock (attached to the thermostat) starts the furnace at its work just when you yourself formerly struggled out of bed, shivered down the steps and shuddered at the task.

Call District 8500 for a free and accurate estimate of the cost of Automatic Gas Heating for YOUR HOME. No obligation. It's information everybody should have.

Paris Nabs 800 As Schuschnigg Is 'Smuggled' In Leftists at Station Foiled as Austrian Chief Quits Train on Outskirts.

Paris, Feb. 21 (AP).—France made sure tonight that Chancellor Kurt von Schuschnigg of Austria, arriving to confer with French statesmen, should meet no such fate as that of the late King Alexander of Yugoslavia.

In sharp contrast with the pomp that attended Alexander's arrival at Marseille last October, Schuschnigg and his foreign minister, Egon Berger-Waldenegg, were secretly taken off the train and smuggled into Paris by automobile.

So secret were the percautions that even the Paris police were not informed.

As the police arrested 800 Socialists and Communists milling around the East station where Schuschnigg was expected to arrive, Premier Pierre Etienne Flandin and Foreign Minister Pierre Laval were greeting the visitors at the deserted station of Reuilly on the outskirts.

The Austrian's private car was unhooked 25 miles from Paris and hauled to Reuilly by a special locomotive. There Flandin took the Austrian chancellor into his automobile while Berger-Waldenberg climbed into Laval's, and the two French statesmen drove the visitors to their hotel.

The radicals, police said, gained entrance to the heavily guarded railway station by buying tickets for the nearest suburban points and showing them to guards.

Believing the Austrian chancellor's train was due at 6:30 p. m., the radicals began arriving at the station at that hour. A small army of policemen stood guard while from 400 to 500 mobile guards were posted in the street.

The extensive precautions were taken because of fears of a public denunciation of the chancellor, who has been called in leftist propaganda here "the butcher of Austrian workers."

Wagner Labor Bill Offered in Senate

bor" behind the Wagner disputes bill, and predicted its passage.

"Labor will appeal to Congress to enact the Wagner disputes bill into law during the present session of Congress," he said.

White House Support Doubted.

Despite Wagner's close accord with the Administration on most matters, there is a growing doubt the President will take his revamped measure under the White House wing.

The measure would seal the doom of company-dominated unions as such in the sense that employers would be prohibited from contributing toward their support.

Further, if a majority of employes in any industry or branch of industry designate persons to represent them, those selected would represent all employes in the unit. The right of free bargaining between employes and employers is stipulated.

Hardly had the measure been introduced into the congressional NRA extension embroglio, before representatives of the National Association of Manufacturers announced it would be vigorously opposed.

Seeks to Avoid Battle.

Seeking to avoid as much controversy as possible, Wagner did not offer the bill as an amendment to the Administration's NRA extension plan, details of which yesterday were communicated to House and Senate committeemen by Mr. Richberg. The New Yorker admitted, however, he consdered his measure a "complement" of NRA.

The life of that recovery unit, meantime, hung in the balance, pending outcome of two parallel senatorial investigations. A Senate Judiciary sub-committee has ordered a sweeping inquiry into alleged monopolies under NRA, and a broader investigation, asked by Senators Nye (Republican), North Dakota, and McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, has been approved by the Senate Finance Committee, which will handle also NRA extension plans.

Neither Chairman Robert L. Doughton, of the House Ways and Means Committee, nor Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, would disclose the contents of Richberg's message. They explained the letter was for their "personal guidance" and not for publication.

The Wagner bill would clarify and freeze the much-disputed section 7(a), guaranteeing the right to collective bargaining, into the basic law of the land. While the President, in his NRA message, asked protection of labor's right to negotiate with employers, it did not specifically request continuation of section 7(a) in precisely its present form.

Sees Industry Stabilized.

"The enactment of this measure will clarify the industrial atmosphere and reduce the likelihood of another conflagration of strife, such as we witnessed last summer," Wagner declared, in explaining his measure.

"It will stabilize and improve business by laying the foundations for the amity and fair dealing upon which permanent progress must rest. It will give notice to all that the solemn pledge made by Congress when it enacted section 7(a) can not be ignored with impunity, and that a cardinal principle of the New Deal for all and not some of our people is going to be supported and preserved by the President."

The measure, in effect, guarantees labor's "right to strike" and would punish violations of the act with a $5,000 fine or one year imprisonment, or both. Wagner denied his bill "created a closed shop for all industry," but said it sanctions voluntarily made closed-shop agreements between employes and employers in States where they are now legal.

executive committee of the U. S. S. R., said the German official press had been blandly offering Poland an opportunity to join the ranks of great powers by shoving the Soviet back into Asia.

Silence of the Polish press on the subject, Izvestia said, is tantamount to assent.

All Moscow newspapers gave generous space to charges published in the Czechoslovak newspaper Narodni Politika that Japan, Germany and Poland, under the guise of "diplomatic chattering," are preparing war against the U. S. S. R. Izvestia and Pravda, the latter the organ of the all-powerful executive committee of the Communist Party, included Britain in their jibes.

"German fascism is getting ready to occupy east and central Europe in order to prepare for war on the western front," Pravda said. "That is why it is against the eastern pacts and mutual assistance."

Addresses London, Paris.

Yesterday Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet commissar for foreign affairs, advised London and Paris that the Soviet generally approved of the Anglo-French security proposals, involving the Reich's adherence to the eastern and central foreign pacts, but will insist on their being carried out in entirety.

Pravda further charged the Reich with "trying with English help to destroy Franco-Soviet cooperation."

"The English bourgeoisie must take into account," it said, "that the mass of English toilers * * * does not approve of encouraging the adventurous plans of German fascists. The English government has taken to complicated maneuvers, but is now faced by the general conclusion that it is necessary to accelerate the completion of regional pacts * * *."

Izvestia added the comment that "the Germans are maneuvering to avoid all except the air pact in order to leave their hands untied in the east * * *."

Code on Aluminum Extended to April 6

The NRA yesterday extended the aluminum code, long a subject of controversy, until April 6.

Several changes in the present code, however, were made operative. These were formulated after a conference with representatives of the industry.

Changes proposed would make it compulsory for all members of the industry to file a list of prices with the NRA so Administration officials may determine if any customer is receiving favoritism from any seller of the product.

Andrew Mellon, former Secretary of the Treasury, and other members of his family, are interested in the aluminum industry. The aluminum code was adopted on last June 26, after a fight during which alleged domination of the industry by the Mellon-controlled company was charged.

record. The present mark is held by Col. Roscoe Turner.

Post has emphasized that his flight will not be primarily for speed, but to make a practical test of the feasibility of stratosphere flying by commercial-type planes. Speed, however, is one of the major advantages of high-altitude flying that Post expects to demonstrate.

Speed of Winnie Mae.

The Winnie Mae in ordinary flying makes a maximum of about 225 miles an hour, but at 30,000 to 40,000 feet Post expects to attain a speed of 350 miles an hour or more.

Post will drop his landing gear to reduce air resistance after leaving Union Air Terminal, Burbank, and trust to skill and luck to land safely on a wooden skid.

To protect himself from intense cold— as much as 60 degrees below zero—and to maintain normal air pressure about his body, Post will wear a 16-pound rubber and fabric suit and aluminum helmet, fed from an oxygen tank in the cabin.

Not to Be Visible.

After he gains his high altitude, Post will not be visible to the naked eye on earth. He will begin to descend about 50 miles from his goal.

Aeronautical engineers are watching the flight with interest, and at least one major air line, Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., expects to start regular air-mail flying in the stratosphere soon if Post's new test proves it feasible.

Jury Convicts Kennamer, but Spares His Life

Manslaughter Verdict Is Returned; Jurors Out Seven Hours.

Judge Hurst had instructed the 12 farmers and laborers they might assess the death penalty if they believed young Kennamer guilty of premeditated murder.

After three older State prosecutors had asked only imprisonment in the face of the combined defense of insanity and self-defense, W. F. (Dixie) Gilmer drew an excited murmur from the crowded courtroom when he concluded the final argument shouting:

"He killed in cold blood. I demand that you exact his life just as Phil Kennamer shot and killed John Gorrell in Tulsa last Thanksgiving night."

Slumped in his automobile in the exclusive Forest Hills residential section of Tulsa, the 23-year-old Gorrell, Kansas City dental college student and son of a well-to-do Tulsa physician, was found with two bullets in the head.

Gorrell, Sr., Collapses.

Young Kennamer swore Gorrell was slain in a fight started when Phil sought to thwart an alleged $20,000 extortion-kidnaping plot against the socially prominent family of blonde Virginia Wilcox, 19-year-old Tulsa oil heiress for whom Kennamer professes a great love.

Dr. John Franklin Gorrell, sr., collapsed in his hotel shortly after the jury began deliberations.

Sobbing, he cried, "my son, my son—when the other children came home for the Christmas holidays my son was not among them."

Girl Misses Plea.

Young Kennamer smiled nervously at relatives as Gilmer concluded. Miss Wilcox remained away from the courtroom for the first time in several days.

Gilmer, 33, and an assistant Tulsa County prosecutor, ridiculed the dual defense plea.

"This defendant himself denies he is insane," Gilmer cried. "I believe he is right."

The insanity plea was introduced by defense counsel over Kennamer's objections in the trial.

The prosecution chorused the accusation Kennamer killed Gorrell because the boy was "running out of a plot" they had hatched together.

The Pink Slips.

A movement is under way in Congress to secure repeal of the publicity or so-called "pink slip" section of the revenue act of 1934.

As matters stand, on or before March 15, millions of citizens will be compelled to fill out pink slips accompanying their income tax statements, showing the amount of their gross income, their deductions, their net income, their total exemptions and the tax paid, if any.

Representative Bacon points out that the publication of such details, made mandatory upon the Treasury under the present law, could work great injury to thousands of persons engaged in small commercial enterprises. In other cases, individuals will suffer needless embarrassment merely for the sake of satisfying the curiosity of idle or malicious persons.

Against the patent evils of this kind of obnoxious probing into private affairs, few positive advantages are to be found. A limited number of cases of tax evasion may be dragged into the open. But the returns will not be worth the heavy price exacted from a harassed citizenry subjected to such inquisitorial methods as those contemplated. Indeed, the Treasury is more apt to be hampered than helped by the information tendered to it on the basis of the returns. It has all the published information, and more, in its possession. The House Ways and Means Committee and the Senate Finance Committee also have access to income tax returns, when desired, and they can be utilized by State and municipal authorities in checking local returns.

Under the circumstances, insistence upon publishing details of individual returns for perusal by the general public is, as members of Congress have testified, chiefly an aid to those who seek to take illegitimate advantage of this information. To persons with large incomes, such publicity offers an invitation to blackmailing, kidnaping and other crimes. To persons of limited means, who constitute an overwhelming majority of those affected, publicity means petty annoyances and often business handicaps.

For these reasons it is hoped that the Treasury will respond promptly and favorably to requests that it give its support to bills providing for repeal of the "pink slip" clause.

The Shoemaker's Last.

If there is any truth in the old sayings, distance lends enchantment and, presumably in a corollary manner, absence makes the heart grow fonder. Not so happily, however, do time and space affect the affairs of Mr. Tugwell. A fortnight ago his recent visit to Florida is reported to have precipitated several summary dismissals in the Department of Agriculture. Now the sudden resignation of Mr. Christgau, assistant administrator of the AAA, is announced. Again this summary turn of events took place during Mr. Tugwell's absence.

More than idle curiosity would prompt an inquiry into the whereabouts of the Undersecretary when this last coup took place. It develops that he has been in Chicago confounding the naive assumption that when the Undersecretary of Agriculture is not in his office he must be attending to urgent matters of agronomics. As mop-up followed purge Dr. Tugwell was in the girdered canyons of the Windy City, there discussing social security before—you have three guesses!

All wrong, the audience was the Chicago Dental Society.

Suicide By Plane.

This Machine Age of ours, which is the Age of Speed, is commonly believed to take the romance out of life. Sometimes it takes the life out of romance.

Two young British aviators, on their way to Singapore, descended at Naples about four weeks ago and there chanced to meet two charming American girls. Engagements were rumored. On February 15 the aviators continued their journey. Almost immediately, they were killed when their craft crashed and burned on a mountainside.

Yesterday the girls chartered a plane in London. While it flew toward the English Channel, they stepped out of it, arms locked. Their broken bodies were discovered half-buried in an Essex cabbage-field.

All suicide is surrender. Except when it occurs among the very young, as in yesterday's instance, it is nearly always an unheroic surrender. But, though tragedy attaches to any suicide, there attaches to these suicides from the air a peculiar horror that merges into the deepest pathos.

Selection of agencies of progress for self-destruction illustrates the most profound problem of our time: the bafflement of the race before the civilization which it has created, but can not master.

Justice Stone's Contribution.

The indefinite character of the Supreme Court decision on the repudiation of the gold clause in Government bonds has aroused much speculation as to whether or not the Administration will act to prevent the possibility of further claims for damages. Under the circumstances, such claims by bondholders resident in the United States are scarcely conceivable in the predictable future. But owners of Liberty bonds resident in Holland or Switzerland, where the depreciation of the dollar in terms of gold is most apparent, have some chance of proving the actual damages which the Court said must be precedent to any claim against the Government of the United States.

Such cases, however, are too hypothetical as yet to warrant any defensive action by the Administration, even if it were clear what form such action could take. The suggestion of a huge conversion operation to retire all Government issues carrying the gold clause is entirely fanciful. For one thing, the totals involved are too big, and for another an attempt to convert faster than the normal schedule might easily defeat its own end. Holders of gold-clause securities would certainly cling to them if the Administration indicated any belief that it could be successfully sued under the Supreme Court decision.

At present there are no grounds for that belief, either on the part of the Administration or elsewhere. As was pointed out by Mr. Elliott Thurston in The Post yesterday, there would have to be a literally enormous rise in prices before domestic holders of gold-clause bonds could properly claim damages. Probably there would have to be quite a substantial further domestic price rise before any resident abroad would have a case, even assuming that price levels were the only factor to be considered here.

The practical effect of the Court's decision, therefore, is to strengthen the anti-inflationist stand of the Administration without forcing it to seek special safeguards. The issue left unsolved by the Supreme Court will remain academic unless there is some such rise in the price level as only currency inflation is likely to bring about.

None the less, reflection can only deepen the conviction that the issue left unsolved by the Court is as real in the theoretical field as it is unimportant for immediate practical purposes. And the trouble with unsolved theoretical problems is that they may arise to plague in unexpected quarters. As Mr. Justice Stone pointed out in his notable individual opinion on the Liberty bond case, the action of the majority might operate "to interpose a serious obstacle to the adoption of measures for stabilization of the dollar."

The country is deeply indebted to Mr. Justice Stone for showing so clearly that this case was of great importance from the standpoint of our political evolution, an angle which has been too much subordinated in considering the obvious implications of the decision. Alone among the nine Justices, he has shown that the Court is dodging on the basic issue of sovereignty, and that it has sown seeds of future trouble in refusing to state clearly how far Congress may and may not go in the field of monetary regulation.

That issue is not really settled. And clarification may yet require a further case of even greater constitutional importance than the last. Until that time, however, it is clear that the Administration need not and should not; take further action to implement a decision which leaves so large a field of shadows for eventual definition.

Free Seeds To Plow Under.

Under the agricultural adjustment program the Government has applied sales taxes in order to pay farmers several hundred million dollars for reducing their crops. In view of the decline in farm exports, no end is in sight for the curtailment of planting and the payment of benefits. Yet Congress has just passed, and the President has signed a bill appropriating $60,000,000 to assist farmers in producing crops.

President Roosevelt signed the bill reluctantly, suggesting that the fund be taken from the proposed $4,880,000,000 appropriation for public works and relief. He regards this grant of credit "for crop production and harvesting" as a relief measure, since part of it will be used in the drought area. But it is impossible that the President can have overlooked the fundamental inconsistency of financing submarginal farmers on the one hand while curtailing all basic crops on the other.

When the President signed a similar bill last year he expressed hope that it would be the last measure of its kind enacted. Under his order the Crop Production Loan Office was transferred to the Farm Credit Administration with the view of liquidating loans of this type then outstanding. An elaborate new system of production credit associations was organized to supply any legitimate demand for credit to finance the growing of crops. But Congress has acquired the habit of cultivating the good will of unsuccessful farmers through "seed" loans. And the President has once more permitted expediency to supplant sound policy.

In the early days of the New Deal conflicting objectives were excusable because the emergency seemed to demand immediate action. But what excuse can the Administration now offer for a policy that encourages crop production while at the same time taxing the people to reduce the aggregate farm output? Considerable sums are being spent to buy up land and take it out of cultivation. Secretary Wallace insists that 50,000,000 acres of farm land will have to be diverted to other uses unless export markets can be restored. Yet the Government continues to finance farmers who are cultivating this submarginal land, thus defeating its own purpose.

Only One Alternative.

Disregarding an appeal from the White House, the Senate voted yesterday to sabotage the Administration's public works program. If the McCarran amendment remains in the bill the entire scheme of putting 3,500,000 men to work on public projects will be upset. The Senate must have visualized that result. Yet 44 Senators—a majority of one—lined up against the President.

In some respects this is the most significant defeat the present Administration has suffered on Capitol Hill. It came after Senator Glass had read a letter from the President in which he promised his support for maintenance of prevailing wage scales. Moreover, the Senator bluntly told his colleagues that the President might veto the bill if the controversial amendment, requiring payment of prevailing wage rates on public works, should be included.

The result is to entangle the public works bill in a morass of confusion from which it may never emerge. Expenditure of nearly $5,000,000,000 on public works under the bill as it now stands would multiply the blunders of the CWA by twelve. In fact the Senate's decision is so grotesque that we must look deeper than the McCarran amendment for an explanation. There are indications that a number of Senators deliberately supported the demand for prevailing wage rates with the object of frustrating the public works program.

However that may be, it is evident that the President's grandiose employment venture has sustained a destructive blow. At no time has the Administration presented a clear-cut program to Congress. Consequently, impossible schemes have been devised to fill the vacuum in administrative planning. Since the Administration has been found extremely vulnerable, new demands will now be pressed with greater ease. The President faces the alternative of abandoning his unplanned venture or risking enactment of an intolerable measure.

In the circumstances the advice of Senator Byrd to defeat the bill and turn "calmly from the treatment of the crisis to making our recovery sound and permanent" stands out with compelling force. Reversion to the policy of providing really urgent relief funds, without risking the Government's credit in a wild "pump-priming" experiment, now seems imperative.

A Striking Contrast.

Last November an automobile struck and killed a boy on the Bladensburg road. The driver was released on bond, being charged with manslaughter. It is alleged that he was drunk at the time of the accident. Moreover, on two previous occasions this same motorist had been convicted on charges of intoxication. To cap the climax, when the case was called a few days ago, the defendant was so drunk that the judge postponed the hearing and ordered the man locked up to insure his sobriety the next day.

Though it would be unfair to generalize from this case, it contains a strong indication of laxity in the laws designed to protect the public on the highways. Plainly, stricter enforcement of existing laws, together with more searching examination of each driver's qualifications and responsibility, is needed to stem the ever-mounting toll of automobile accidents and fatalities.

Of interest in this connection is a report from England of a case wherein the judge sentenced a driver to nine months' imprisonment and disqualification from holding a license for two years following a fatal accident admitted to have been unavoidable.

The court discovered no indication of "such aggravating matters as over-indulgence in drink or anything of the kind." The defendant's lawyer argued that such an accident might be expected at any moment on a slippery road even though the driver was operating his car carefully and properly. "I hope that is not correct," said the judge. "If it is correct, then the sooner we go back to the old days of a man waving a red flag in front of each motor-car the better, because it is too horribly dangerous apparently otherwise."

The red flag, of course, would be a last-resort measure. Not so improbable, however, is the day when license requirements and highway regulations will disbar any and all who demonstrate the slightest disability to control their machines. No further study is needed to establish the necessity of denying driver's rights to individuals who are known to be a menace on the highway.

The Bootlegger Stays With Us.

From the New York Journal of Commerce.

Since the resurrection of the "rum row" last summer, the Administration has made determined efforts to halt the inflow of smuggled liquor. High taxes and high prices encourage bootlegging everywhere, just as did prohibition. Conditions are reported similar to those prevailing here in the Canadian provinces, where liquor control schemes have been in operation some time. The Quebec Liquor Commission reports that its gross sales have fallen sharply, and provincial revenues from this source are quite disappointing. The commission's chairman attributes this decline to high Dominion excise and sales taxation.

The multiplicity of Federal and State excise and license taxes imposed in this country similarly encourage illicit manufacture and sale, and Government revenues from this source here also have fallen sharply below earlier estimates. The problem has been brought repeatedly to the attention of the Administration. Failure to take action because of fears that it may bring a temporary small drop in total tax collections, or because of inability to coordinate Federal and State programs, has been short-sighted and wasteful.

Boulder Dam Exhibit.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

At this moment when so much attention has been centered on Boulder Dam it is of particular interest to your readers to know of the exhibition, which will continue through the remainder of February, of lithographic drawings of that dam under construction, now on view at the National Gallery of Art.

William Woollett, the artist who made the drawings, is a Los Angeles architect possessing a strong flair for expression in the graphic arts. He draws well, has a lively sense of pictorial composition and a true knowledge of perspective. As pictures they are attractive. As documents related to one of the great engineering enterprises of modern times they are of permanent value.

There are 40 large prints, under each of which is a typewritten paragraph describing the subject rendered. This adds materially to the ease and pleasure of the visitors, for they are thereby enabled to comprehend the enormous difficulties under which the engineers had to work, and the significance of the project to the territory it will serve.

Aspens In Roanoke, Too.

To The Editor of The Post—Sir:

From "The Post Impressionist" column, February 11, I quote: "Angelica Bothers Benche * * * she who invented the phrase 'trembling like an aspen leaf.'" If the lady mentioned invented that phrase, she must have done so many years ago.

I have used this phrase myself several times in the last fifteen years or so, having picked it up from my mother. It is one of a number of favorite expressions of hers which I have heard her use as far back as I can remember. My mother was raised in the vicinity of Roanoke, Va., and I believe you will find the expression "trembling like an aspen leaf" a well-known colloquialism among the older country people of that section, and quite possibly elsewhere.

Or were you only joking?

I. L. O. Membership.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The attention of your readers should be called to a valuable treatise on our recovery program issued by the International Labor Office under the title "Social and Economic Reconstruction in the United States." It is the only complete survey which has been made of our vast and rather complicated recovery efforts and is a most impartial and helpful study.

The only thing comparable to it is the report made last fall to the President by Mr. Richberg, as coordinator of our recovery efforts. Mr. Richberg's report, useful as it is to those who are trying intelligently to understand the Administration's program as a whole, is a very slim affair compared with the detailed survey recently completed by the International Labor Office.

Such a survey by the I. L. O., to my mind, indicates one of the great contributions which an impartial, research organization, existing independently of national administrations, can make to the success of national programs. President Roosevelt stated in "Looking Forward:" "The country needs and, unless I mistake its temper, the country demands, bold, persistent experimentation."

The country needs also frank and impartial analyses of its experimentation. This great need the International Labor Office has been supplying since 1919. We should consider ourselves fortunate to belong to it and the present Congress should not hesitate to appropriate our share of the money necessary to continue its valuable work.

Anti-Tory Jibe.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I have read so many Tory blasts at this Administration in the Washington newspapers that I can not let this opportunity get by to sling one back from the man in the street.

It is reported that at the Lincoln Day dinner rally in New York, at which Herbert Hoover was the guest of honor, and at which Mr. Hoover received more encomiums than Abraham Lincoln ever did during his lifetime, the big laugh of the evening was evoked by Governor Hoffman. He said that the difference between Woodrow Wilson and the White House incumbent is that the World War President was "a professor surrounded by politicians."

The man in the street has known for some time that the incumbent's predecessor was surrounded by neither.

Sending Filipinos Home.

Such unemployed Filipinos in California as want to go home would be well returned by the Government, as is proposed by a bill now in Congress. It would be cheaper for the Government to pay their way back to the islands than to give them relief. In fact, the transportation might well be a charge against relief funds.

There are also social and economic reasons to justify the support of voluntary repatriation. The little brown brother has had a difficult problem of adjustment. Conditions of the last several years have been particularly hard on most of the casual workers. They have suffered in race and labor disturbances and have been a people apart. They would be happier in their own land and California would be better off.

The Copyright Convention

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The copyright treaty now before the Senate has been adhered to by 40 countries as members of the International Union for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works.

Artists, authors, composers and dramatists of each member country are guaranteed in all the other countries the rights and remedies accorded in each such country to its own intellectual producers without compliance with any formality.

The grant is based on national treatment; it is reciprocal, but not necessarily equal protection. The copyright accorded by the domestic legislation of the member nations may differ, but the wisely formed text of the treaty allows for such variances while aiming to secure as time passes more and more uniformity.

The basis of the union is that each country must "assure legal protection of the rights which are the object of the convention," i. e., the rights which are accorded to authors and other intellectual producers. The classes of works to be protected are enumerated and for all of them automatic protection must be assured from the time of their creation without any formality. The convention includes three classes of works not now protected under our copyright laws and they must be provided for—works of architecture, choreographic works and pantomimes.

To the list of author's rights accorded under our laws must be added the exclusive right "to communicate the copyrighted work to the public by means of radio broadcasting."

Another right of importance to all authors must be provided for in our new copyright legislation. The convention declares that "independently of the copyright in any work, and even after its assignment, the author retains the right to claim the authorship of the work as well as the right to object to every deformation, mutilation or other modification of the said work which may be prejudicial to his honor or to his reputation." This does not preclude necessary and innocent modifications of a work when agreed to by the author in a contract or license.

A final obligation of utmost importance is the enactment of legislation to meet the stipulation of article 18, which declares that "the present convention applies to all works which, at the time it goes into effect, have not fallen into the public domain of their country of origin because of the expiration of the term of protection."

We must agree that all such foreign works in which copyright is subsisting, which heretofore have not been protected in the United States, must be assured full legal security from the date of our adherence to the convention.

This is not ex post facto legislation. It is simply a matter of honest and honorable concern that foreign authors who have been heretofore unable to secure any remedy for the unauthorized use of their works, shall, after our adherence, have statutory right to insist that further use of their works shall be only with their consent.

Legislation must be enacted to safeguard persons who have previously used such works, prohibiting actions against them. This was done in the Vestal bill (H. R. 12549), which was passed by the House of Representatives on January 13, 1931.

The Post Impressionist

From Penzance To Titipu

Post Office, Friday.

To dissent from almost universal praise is to shoulder a terrible responsibility.

But it does give the dissenter a tremendous sense of importance.

Therefore this Column contends that the commendatory critics are wrong about Gilbert & Sullivan.

"Gilbert and Sullivan were the perfect partners because they were alike." In words of such sort the commendatory critics — with eminent exceptions like Nelson Bell's—write of those distinguished performances now too soon to conclude (for the present season only, we hope) in Washington.

Well, these critics are wrong.

Gilbert was all but always a satiric artist; Sullivan was all but always an artist of sentiment. The gentle Sullivan was only sometimes a humorist; only occasionally did the super-sophisticated Gilbert give free rein to his genius for the artfully unsophisticated lyric.

Gilbert was one of the cleverest of men, but he was also one of the bitterest.

In his personal relations, not even James McNeill Whistler, of West Point and Chelsea Bridge, more ably mastered "The Gentle Art of Making Enemies." It was Gilbert, not Whistler, who, when a friend had submitted to him the manuscript of a play, wrote back:

My Dear Mr. Smith: I have read your play. Oh, my dear Mr. Smith! Yours truly,

W. S. GILBERT.

And what he could be as a man he was, with complacent consistency, as an artist. He ridiculed the pomposity of the House of Lords, the nepotism of the British Navy, the banality of the bench. When "The Mikado" was first presented, his jeers at Japan drove the Japanese embassy in London to formal protest. In these respects, Gilbert was a Victorian Juvenal, a nineteenth century Junius.

Yet how many readers today read Juvenal?

And how few fail to go to every possible performance of the Gilbert & Sullivan operas!

One reason for this phenomenon is—Sullivan. The erosion of time has worn away many a rude barb from Gilbert's satire, leaving as keen and bright as ever the tempered steel of that wit of his which, unerringly directed against very slowly improving human nature, is well-nigh timeless. But to these same uses the lovely music of Sir Arthur has outfraveled time.

Gilbert & Sullivan are a classic largely because they are not what the critics say. Gilbert and Sullivan were perfect collaborators for the same reason that some married couples are perfectly married: they were opposites.

There is a large part of the true explanation why any Jellicoe can joke about "Pinafore"—why, at the National Theater on Wednesday night, Japanese could laugh at Darrell Fancourt's Emperor—why, last night, parents from Fort Humphreys made much of John Dean as the son of a Yeoman of the Guard—why, this evening, his "Lord Tolloller" will delight, instead of wounding, the very newest among United States Senators—and why, on Monday, just after the Supreme Court had completed its last labors over the gold clause, "The Gondoliers'" quips concerning a "legal fiction" brought merely a smile to the lips of Mr. Justice Roberts, merely a professional pink to the cheeks of Chief Justice Hughes.

Moreover:

That is a large part of the true explanation why, after so many decades—when their political irony has passed into history, when some of their social satire recalls nothing except suns long set, when last season's best Broadway bit is old stuff—the Gilbert & Sullivan operas remain an unending rapture for all of us who belong to the run of the mine.

Gilbert & Sullivan have dual citizenship. They are English literature, but they are also American literature. They are American and English music. They are one cult of culture, not the least—one portion of a liberal education, and one of its pleasantest portions. A meager clown once said that the English and Americans "have everything in common, except, of course, a language"—but Gilbert & Sullivan have so invaded the speech of the Republic and the Empire as to have become about the best asset of the English-Speaking Union.

Were we a schoolmaster—which, thank Heaven, we aren't—Gilbert & Sullivan would be a compulsory course in our curriculum. Were we a dictator—which, alas, it seems we aren't likely to become, even in these days—we should order semiannual sprayings of Gilbert & Sullivan for every branch of the Government, for both (or is it now "all"?) limbs of the military service.

* * *

However, orders are unnecessary. There is compliance without order. Despite the fact—we mean exactly because of the fact—that Gilbert & Sullivan were temperamental antonyms.

Alabama's Bankhead Scores In New York

By Ralph E. Renaud.
(Special Correspondence of The Post.)

New York.

THE current revival of "Rain," with Tallulah Bankhead in the role of "Sadie Thompson," which catapulted the late Jeanne Eagels into fame, is now definitely the outstanding event on Broadway. Apparently there are two reasons for its success. The old play evokes in New Yorkers nostalgic memories of an older and certainly a happier day. And it has created a second star which, of course, establishes it as a classic.

Talulah was a star before "Rain" was revived. But not a fixed star. The Bankhead longed to be a luminary of the American stage. But her London reputation remained persistently greater than the uncertain and variable fame she managed to achieve in her native country. Her Hollywood venture was not exactly a success and "Dark Victory," her last undertaking before the plunge into "Sadie Thompson," had a certain artificial unreality which left the public only mildly interested. It was not realized, perhaps, what an effective actress was required to turn it into even a moderate box office success.

Miss Bankhead herself describes her American record as "a flimsy comedy, six bad pictures and 'Dark Victory.'" But now all is changed. If she has not extinguished the memory of the tragic Jeanne Eagels she has at least equaled it. Some critics who have seen both performances say she surpasses the earlier creation, vivid as that was. They say Miss Bankhead's performance gathers strength as it proceeds toward the end of the play, whereas Miss Eagels stamped her perfection upon the earlier scenes.

• • • •

TO challenge a dead artist is a dangerous thing. The Bankhead is nothing if not daring. But it so happens the challenge was rather to herself than to the restless spirit of Miss Eagels. "Rain," though it is a present victory for Miss Bankhead, was one of her earlier defeats. Ten years ago Miss Bankhead was chosen to play "Sadie Thompson" in London. She rehearsed the part one day and then stepped out on the urgent advice of Somerset Maugham, who wrote the original story of the emotional inundation at Pago Pago on which the play is founded.

The Bankhead denies that this experience rankled in her bosom. She now counts Maugham as one of her best friends and only regrets that he is no longer writing for the stage, and incidentally, as he might be, for Miss Bankhead. She holds that she simply wasn't ready for "Rain" at that time. Now she believes she is, and the plaudits of the public seem to indorse her opinion. Nevertheless, it will be a personal satisfaction if the present performance of the play is carried to London after its run here. That is the plan of the producer, indorsed, incidently, by Miss Bankhead.

Miss Bankhead possesses the power, equaled by none of the other American stars, of evoking the glamour of the stage for others. Her followers both in London and New York are legion, all youngsters, of course. The other afternoon a crowd of admiring fans was waiting for her at the stage door following a matinee. They were still there when she returned after dinner. After the evening performance they had not left. One of the bolder members of the group sidled up to her and asked: "Are you going home now, Miss Bankhead? We're so tired."

There is no doubt whatever about it, the Lady from Alabama has definitely arrived and from now on will be a major light in the theatrical firmament.

• • • •

THIS even seems to be true of the play. The swift movement of Broadway technique has not dated it and it holds the double power to move one and recall the past. "Rain" was the overwhelming success of 1922-23. How along ago that seems! It will seem even longer if one stops to consider the Broadway attractions which were current at the time.

Henry Miller was still alive and was co-starring with Ruth Chatterton in "La Tendresse." Now his son, Gilbert Miller, is one of the great producers of London and New York, though he has scarcely yet demonstrated his father's shrewd gift for picking the play of the moment, such as "The Great Divide" and "The Servant in the House," both pioneers of their time and makers of theatrical history.

Don Marquis' "The Old Soak," the uproarious career of a homespun liquor fancier who found Bible support for his propensities, was running to big houses. Up to then the bibulous gentleman had been merely a funny character in Don's daily newspaper column. Karel Capek's "R. U. R.," the play which introduced the word "robot" into the English language, was warning the world of what the Russian revolution might do to it. John Galsworthy's "Loyalties" was packing in all the nicer people.

Other plays of the period which will be readily recalled were Philip Barry's "You and I"; Jesse Lynch Williams' "Why Not" (and Williams, too) "Mary the Third"; Channing Pollok's "The Fool"; and one of the first of the Connelly-Kaufman combinations, "Merton of the Movies," founded on Harry Leon Wilson's novel.

Successful stars of the period were Ina Claire, Jane Cowl, Leonore Ulric and Frances Starr. Some of them still have their names in the big lights. Alfred Lunt was just beginning to make a reputation in a forgotten play.

Chauve Souris was wafting a Russian mood from the Century Roof. "Better Times" was inviting the public to cheer up at the Hippodrome. But perhaps the thing that will characterize the period more vividly than anything else was the unchecked triumph of "Abie's Irish Rose."

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW'S "The Simpleton of the Unexpected Isles," about which the Theater Guild threw such an atmosphere of mystery, is now exposed to the public gaze with its whiskers stripped off. Though exploited as a typical Shavian comedy it is apparently destined to take its place as one of the theater's minor tragedies.

One of the reviewers describes it as "a brilliant bore." Another labels it as "labored, loquacious and soporific." It must be admitted that the years have not dealt kindly with the jester with the beard. Though he is still probably the foremost man of letters of his day his work seems to date itself more definitely with every effort. It may be that the world is no longer in the Shavian mood that what would have been regarded as excruciatingly stimulating 20 years ago merely sounds garrulous today.

The Simpleton of the Unexpected Isles is a half-witted clergyman who finds himself on one of Great Britain's mythical possessions in the South Seas involved in a eugenic experiment.

Four Britons of more or less consequence have been collaborating with a couple of natives to produce four half-breed children. The clergyman enters whole-heartedly into the experiment but doesn't get very far because of physical limitations. He is rather a Gilbertian clergyman, having been chaplain to a fleet of pirates before beginning his experiments in practical biology, and his former flock affectionately call him "Iddy," which is supposed to be short for idiot.

There is considerable dignity to the native priest and priestess (Nazimova and Mackay Morris) and not much to any of the Britons. The children, unfortunately, illustrate all the vices of the current day and when the Judgment Day dawns are promptly removed by a silver-winged angel who, in his auditing process, rubs them out together with the larger part of the population of London, including Sir Ruthless Bonehead, the Premier.

The Unexpected Isles, of course, are a microcosm of the whole world and a platform from which Mr. Shaw addresses the universe. It proves too big an audience for what the aging but wise-cracking prophet has to say. Even the Theater Guild audience seems a little large for the message for they appear to be but mildly moved. However, the Guild is committed to Shaw for the rest of its natural life—and his.

Coin Collectors Can Bid on Hoard Boys Unearthed

Baltimore, Feb. 21 (AP).—Collectors and souvenir hunters will have a chance to bid on the 3,558 old gold coins unearthed by two boys in a cellar here and awarded the finders, Henry Grob and Theodore Jones, by Judge Eugene O'Dunne.

Tentative plans for an auction, either here or in New York, were made today after a Government representative said the coins could be kept by buyers, despite the gold restrictions, provided they brought more than face value.

As a result, Judge O'Dunne predicted the gold hoard would have a value in excess of a previous estimtae of $28,000. The face value of the coins, dated from 1834 to 1858, is $11,427, but their antiquity makes them worth more to collectors.

Nurses Hear Talk About Holy Land

Martinsburg Pastor Speaks at District Gathering.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Nurses of the Eastern Panhandle District Nurses Association held a quarterly business and social session here yesterday, at which they heard a description by the Rev. Paul L. Powlese, Trinity Episcopal rector, of a trip to the Holy Land a year ago. Miss Bessie Diefenderfer, superintendent at a local hospital, presided.

The nurses heard discussions by Miss Marguerite Litten, Miss Alice Marsh, Morgan County; Miss Hilda Lovett, a dietician at a local hospital, and professional discussions by Drs. William A. Wallace and Nevins B. Hendrix, of Martinsburg.

The session closed with a tea given by McSherry Student Nurses Chapter of King's Daughters Hospital in the nurses' home.

Carlisle Bargeron

Hugh's Award.

THERE'S one statement in Mr. Roosevelt's NRA message which must have had Hugh Johnson in mind. Maybe the President will cut it out, autograph it and forward it to the man. Just draw a ring around it and out on the margin inscribe: "Hello, Hugh, here's to you. F. D. R." It would make him feel mighty good. He could enlarge it and stick it up on the walls for all visitors to see. The statement reads:

BARGERON.

"• • • we are apt to forget today that the national industrial recovery act was the biggest factor in giving reemployment to approximately 4,000,000 people."

It is to be noticed that Mr. Roosevelt doesn't say the NRA was this. He says the National Industrial Recovery Act which embraces Mr. Ickes' PWA and his $3,000,000,000.

• • • •

But everybody will think it is the NRA Mr. Roosevelt is referring to. Hugh can insist this is so. It is probably the impression intended to be conveyed, just as, when he approved the cigarette code recently, Mr. Roosevelt said it had been approved by the NRA 4 to 2, with an interested member not voting. It had not been approved 4 to 2. The NRA had deadlocked on it 2 to 2. Mr. Roosevelt got his two majority by the expedient of counting two non-voting members of the board.

He was talking about the NRA in his message, so it must be that he wants the impression to go out that it was the biggest factor in the reemployment of 4,000,000 men.

There was some difficulty, apparently, in arriving at the figure of 4,000,000, but the explanation clears up one thing we have never been able to undrestand.

• • • •

Back in the days when the NRA, the PWA and the American Federation of Labor were all issuing periodical employment statements they could never be made to jibe. The NRA would come out with the claim it had brought about reemployment of 3,000,000 persons, the PWA would follow suit a few days later with the claim it had also put a couple of million to work. Even assuming they were the same persons the total would be 3,000,000, and then the federation would confound us with the statement there were still 11,000,000 unemployed.

The figure of 12,000,000 is the highest unemployed we had ever heard. Nobody ever knew where this figure exactly came from, but it is the one which the Democrats and Progressives used to try to drive home. Or rather, they pitched the total at 10,000,000, but somebody put on another 2,000,000 to take care of the casualties of the banking crisis.

It looked then that as fast as the Administration put men to work the federation would add to the unemployed.

Mr. Roosevelt explains it all in his message, though. "It is now clear that in the spring and summer of 1933 many estimates of unemployment in the United States were far too low," he says.

That settles it. If we can't reduce unemployment to a satisfactory extent, we can at least show progress by advancing the number originally agreed upon to represent the unemployed.

It is perhaps noteworthy, however, that Mr. Roosevelt leaves the door open on this. He doesn't now set the original figure of unemployed at 14,000,000 or 15,000,000. Maybe it's an ace he is holding up his sleeve like the 9 cents leeway in the dollar.

And in heaping the credit upon the national industrial recovery act he can tell Mr. Ickes he means him and the general that he means him. There is this light to be had: They were always complaining over at the NRA that Ickes couldn't get his PWA employment program to working and that this was what was causing the NRA to break down. Yet the NRA was supposed to be creating additional employment itself—this and taking the "chaos" out of business. "Chaos" is what they said they were taking out.

"Gee, the general needs a shave!"

No End Of Books

First Roars Of The 'Thunderer'—The London Times Begins To Tell Its Own History.

By Theodore Hall.

IN 1785—when there were already in London eight morning daily papers, and nine evening papers published three times a week—a member of the coal exchange bankrupted because coal ships he had underwritten went down before American privateersmen and hurricanes, set out to retrieve his fortunes by founding one more newspaper.

To be sure, the Daily Universal Register was a by-product. John Walter owned the patent to the "logographic" printing process (a rudimentary forerunner to linotyping.) He bought the old King's Printing House in Blackfriar's. And to advertise the process and his press, he set up the newspaper. At once, though he did print books, the paper began to absorb his energies. Three years later he changed the name to The Times for simplicity's sake—Times "being a monosyllable, bids defiance to corrupters and mutilaters of the language." For 150 years, that paper, which entered the field by the back door, has been the most famous and respected in the world.

To celebrate their sesqui-centennial anniversary, past and present members of the Times staff now issue the first number of a three-volume chronicle, "The History of the Times." Entitled "The 'Thunderer' in the Making" (Macmillan, $5), it covers the years 1785-1841—from the founding to the death of the first great editor, Thomas Barnes. And just as the Times flies the banner of anonymity over its writers, so does this book. No name is responsible for this studied, antiquarian, quietly entertaining narrative of journalistic beginnings.

Before we get into it, let me remark that it is one of those admirably printed books which are a sheer sensory joy to touch and read. Any number of portraits, caricatures and facsimiles of crucial letters add to the book's palatability.

OF the first number of the Register, January 1, 1785, but one copy survives. It had an ornate heading with the king's coat of arms (from the facade of the Printing House), four pages of four columns each, and it sold for twopence halfpenny. "Ads" (they were thus called even in the eighteenth century) occupied part of the front page—a habit still surviving in English and some Boston papers. Here we see that the Covent Garden will offer a new comedy, "The Follies of a Day, or the Marriage of Figaro," to which will be added a new pantomime, "The Magic Cavern, or Virtue's Triumph." The ship Nancy "will absolutely depart on Saturday the eighth instant" for Genoa and Leghorn. A new novel out is "A Lesson for Lovers, or History of Col. Melville and Lady Richly." Most surprising item—the "Chamber of Commerce" in Cornhill, is "open every day for Consultation, Opinion, Advice, Mediation and Assistance in matters of trade." And the rest of the front page is Walter's announcement.

He had hard sledding with his new paper. Twice he was sentenced to prison for libel. Sales which had risen from 2,500 to 4,000 a day went down to 1,700 in 1795, when John Walter 2d took over the reins. And though the son was bookish, and though he longed to retire as a country gentleman, Walter 2d did great things for the Times. He put it in the front rank of journalism by recognizing the talents of such vigorous writers as Leigh Hunt, by fighting the post-office for the swift and unhampered transmission of foreign dispatches, by making use of the first steam printing press in 1814 (1,100 copies an hour), and especially by making Thomas Barnes the absolute and responsible editor.

IN 1829 a certain Lord Graves was found with his throat slit, in circumstances which even aside from that were peculiar. When the coroner's inquest turned in a perfunctory report, the Times made a strong protest for careful investigation. Other papers leaped upon the Times for this, and the Times, in restating its position, remarked: "then we thundered out that article in Tuesday's paper which caused such a sensation."

And the nick-name was born. But it was not always taken respectfully, as witness this series of epithets in a rival paper, the Morning Herald: "The Great Earwigger of the Nation, otherwise the Leading Journal of Europe, otherwise the Awful Monosyllable, otherwise the Thunderer—but more commonly called the Blunderer."

Still, roar the Times did. At everything from bad plays (1807: "Mr. Cherry is undoubtedly the lowest dramatist of this wretched day") to Chartism and Socialism (1840: "Of the vile propensities professed by the execrable monsters who style themselves Socialists—for, to dignify their appetites with the name of doctrines were a gross perversion of language—we can not allow ourselves to speak except in the most vague and general terms"). And when, in 1834, the Chancellor of the Exchequer proposed "War With the Times" to the Lord Chancellor, the paper battled back doughtily. It was already a power to be reckoned with.

TRUE, William Hazlitt had bitterly accused the Times in 1823 of being "vain, swaggering and insolent," but, nevertheless, of trimming its sails to the nearest wind. That was what you might call a criticism from the left. But, though the Times did stand for the conservative, commercial classes and though it deplored harsh labor laws chiefly because they made bad feeling and tended to upset the status quo, it must be noted that its great achievement was to raise the newspaper into a commanding and unified voice. In 1785 no newspaper had an editor in that vocal sense—in 1834 Lord Lyndhurst, the Lord Chancellor—designate, could remark: "Why, Barnes is the most powerful man in the country!"

That span in growth, that revolution is journalism, is the theme of this first volume. However, the power of the press may now seem to be a matter of specialists' bylines, it is well to remember that it grew up in an anonymous corps of Times writers 100 years ago. Even Barnes, the guiding hand, had his name in his paper but twice—three lines when he died and a few words a year later when his name came up in a suit.

Washington Appraisals

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps

IT is not often remembered that Lord Byron paid a tribute to Washington—here it is:

"Where may the wearied eye repose
When gazing on the Great;
Where neither guilty glory glows,
Nor despicable state?
Yes—one—the—first—the last—the best—
The Cincinnatus of the West,
Whom envy dared not hate,
Bequeathed the name of Washington,
To make man blush there was but one!

• • • •

I know of no better appraisal of Washington than an essay by the late distinguished constitutional lawyer and publicist, Frank Bergen, of New Jersey. In his book "Essays and Speeches," Vol. I, Mr. Bergen, after discussing the vexed question as to the real nature of Washington the man, said:

Some students of Washington's career, apparently in despair of discovering the secret of his power, have ventured to put the question: Was he a great man after all? Did he owe his wonderful success to ability or to the cooperation of fortunate circumstances? Before a satisfactory answer to these questions can be given, we must agree on a definition of greatness by which he can be fairly tried.

No sane man would think of comparing him with Marcuh Aurelius, or with Dante, or Bacon or Shakespeare. Now and then some indiscreet admirer of Washington attempts to rank him, as a military man, with Julius Caesar or the first Napoleon. It would be wiser and more instructive to contrast the American with the Roman or the Corsican. Caesar or Napoleon would not have put aside the crown offered to Washington at Newburgh; they would have taken it long before. Washington at the head of the Roman legions, or of the imperial army, could not have played the role of a conqueror.

It is only fair to compare Washington with men who devoted their lives, not to the slaughter of the human race, but to the benefit of humanity along the lines of endeavor that he pursued; to compare his resources with his achievements; the difficulties that beset him with the results he accomplished, and to consider the permanency of his work. Judged in this way, it would be found, as the most competent judges agree, that Washington is without a peer among the leaders of men. By supreme merit he was raised to a lonely eminence in history. This is probably all the mystery there is about him . . .

But the most profound tribute to the character and memory of Washington is not to be sought in the casual, or even in the deliberate, remarks of historians, orators or statesmen. A deeper significance may be seen in the impression which he made on his contemporaries and on posterity. Shortly before Washington's death he had been appointed to command the American armies in a war with France which then seemed unavoidable, but which happily did not occur.

• • • •

When the news of his death reached Paris, a solemn funeral service was performed by order of Napoleon, and the orator of the occasion, chosen by the first consul, then trying to play the role of Washington in France, declared: "A sorrowful cry has reached us from America, which he delivered. It belongs to France to yield the first response to the lamentations which will be echoed by every great soul." In sorrow for the same even the flags of the British fleet in the Channel were lowered to half mast, and that act within 20 years after Yorktown, seems to have been a true expression of public sentiment in Great Britain . . .

The career of Washington is unique in the history of the world. It is not surprising, therefore, that critics are constrained to confess their inability and failure to form a satisfactory estimate of the character and ability of a man able to gain such victories over such haughty and arrogant adversaries.

Six Men Rescued From Wrecked Boat

Cutter Saves Oyster Crew in Chesapeake Bay.

Baltimore, Feb. 21 (AP).—Six men were rescued late today by the Coast Guard cutter Apache from a dismasted and leaking skipjack in the Chesapeake Bay near Gibson Island. The wrecked craft was towed into port at Annapolis.

The skipjack, an oyster boat equipped with sails, was damaged by high winds late yesterday and floated about helpless until this morning, when a member of the crew made his way to shore and summoned help.

Taken from the craft by the cutter were John Jones, the master, who lives at Chance, and five Negro oystermen.

Hoover's Challenge Turned To New Deal

Now Addressed To Roosevelt Rather Than To Liberty Or Postertiy.

By Elliott Thurston.

NOW that Herbert Hoover has again broken his self-imposed silence, in public, by commenting on the gold cases, all politicians, who are nothing if not suspicious, will detect in Mr. Hoover's 1935 recovery program the symptoms suggestive of that yearning which all Presidents who have suffered defeat after one term come, explicably enough, to feel.

Mr. Hoover is still young enough to be a candidate. He remains, nominally, the head of his party, or what was his party. At this writing prospective candidates for the Republican nomination are few and far between. When those who appear to have the not easily defined qualifications which go to make up "availability" are approached, they involuntarily turn their gaze first toward the golden gate. Some of them behave in a manner usually described as coy.

For example, most politicians would say that Arthur Vandenberg, of Michigan, is a shade coy, though the truth is that he becomes very much irritated, to all outward appearances, by the talk linking his name with the unbounded opportunity to be the next Republican nominee. The word unbounded is meant here in the sense that politicians have not as yet been able to ascertain whether the opportunity is large or small.

Anyway, if it were possible to bring the subject up with Senator Vandenberg without having him foreclose discussion by insisting that he is highly annoyed by all this talk of his availability, he would turn sharply on his heel, face in the general direction of Palo Alto and assume the posture and gestures necessary to convey the idea of a large question mark.

• • • •

WHEN other Republicans, to whom the subject of the next nominee is not so unpleasant, are approached they invariably counter by asking what Mr. Hoover's intentions are. The conversation either ends on this note of interrogation or assumes (1) that Mr. Hoover is a candidate, or (2) that Mr. Hoover is not a candidate. It must be said, in all truth, that the majority of Republicans make the first assumption, and that of these fully 50 per cent then display a preference for talking about the weather or some other as yet nonpolitical topic. Among the other 50 per cent there is a noticeable absence of exactly fervid enthusiasm. After all, Mr. Hoover never was a hero to the rank and file of the politicians and after 1932 his standing with them was even more — well, impaired. This has nothing to do with coldly abstract justice. It is merely a political fact.

One finds rather more enthusiasm among certain Democrats than among most of the Republicans. As Will Rogers has put it, speaking of the gold cases, the Democrats were more scared over the outcome than they have been at any time since they feared the Republicans would not run Mr. Hoover in 1932. A somewhat cursory survey among Democrats at present discloses almost no expectation that the Republicans will run Mr. Hoover in 1936, or vice versa. The notion prevails that the sort of Republicans who will probably go to the next Republican convention will incline toward some other candidate.

ALL this might be changed, however, if Mr. Hoover were to answer the question himself in words less susceptible of misinterpretation than Mr. Coolidge's justly famous "I do not choose to run" utterance. When Mr. Hoover appeared in print and book form, with his "Challenge to Liberty," which was his first extensive breaking of the silence, the political fraternity quickly deduced that this was, indeed, a challenge. But ever politically minded, they were skeptical about William Allen White's explanation that this was written for posterity. Or, rather, they imagined that the posterity referred to by the Emporia editor, would be of voting age by 1936.

When Mr. Hoover came East for a Lincoln Day dinner all political ears were attuned to his words and even his unqualified indorsement of the Great Emancipator had a political ring to these incorrigibles. So that when Mr. Hoover paused at Tucson, Ariz., long enough to make public a prepared statement which he telegraphed to leading news agencies in New York, it was bound to convey to the politicians a certain familiar ring not usually associated merely with the sense of duty which, Mr. Hoover explained, led him to publish his views of the gold decisions and what the Nation should do next.

• • • •

THEY noted that what Mr. Hoover felt the Nation should do does not harmonize closely with what Mr. Roosevelt appears to be doing for, or to, the Nation. They detected signs of an issue—approximately return to a fixed gold standard versus the New Deal's managed currency. A few were confused by Mr. Hoover's assertion that "the dollar should immediately be made convertible at the present 59 cents of gold, making it payable in gold bullion," because the dollar already is convertible at the present 59 cents of gold in bullion, though this, to be sure, is limited to bullion for export. Would Mr. Hoover also make bullion available at home right now? Rather, it is already available for the arts, etc. Would he make bullion available in bars and large lumps for "specie payment," as he put it? This is a bit confusing. Also, a few Republicans, at least, who had never conceded that the New Deal's dollar devaluation was effective were surprised that Mr. Hoover appeared to believe that it was.

However, these are extraneous minutiae. What struck the politicians was that Mr. Hoover, very promptly considering that he was on the road and had to digest the decisions, was able by the time he reached Tucson to issue a fairly long, carefully prepared statement which sounds much more like a challenge in the New Deal than to liberty, or posterity.

Once Overs

By H. I. Phillips.

Washington.

A funny man was he, my son,
This fellow known as Washington;
He lived in times of great distress
And never sent an SOS—
He faced ordeals by night and day
And never had an NRA.

His soldiers starved at Valley Forge
And so, the record shows, did George;
His men they seldom had a dime
And often they worked overtime—
There was no FERA, no,
To move the ice and clear the snow.

Their shacks across the fields were blown
(No HOLC then was known);
They had no socks upon their feet,
They had no bread, they had no meat;
They saw things through in weather bleak
Without a stated sum per week.

They had no undershirts or shoes,
They often had the bluest blues;
Hardships they knew and bitter grief
But didn't bellow for "relief;"
They stood the cold at ten below
And lacked harangues by radio.

They had to cross the Delaware
When there was ice enough to spare;
The night was cold and it was snowing—
They didn't ask more pay for rowing!
They rowed and rowed and rowed and rowed
Without a thought about a code.

They had to save a weary Nation
Without a lending corporation;
And Washington through all the strife
Was speechless on "the broader life;"
Scores of crises this leader met
Unaided by the alphabet.

But that was many years ago
When tougher backbones seemed to grow;
They knew tough breaks in all dimensions
And didn't shout for widespread pensions;
They lacked all things except their health
But didn't bellow, "Share the wealth!"

Oh, Washington, of thee we sing—
You're lucky you're not here, old thing.
For this is quite another day
When all we want's more time to play
If you were here today you'd rue it—
The slogan now is, "Let George do it!"

A Thought for Today.

T. E. J. says that Washington was the Father of His Country, but that this was back in the days before the Nation seemed to want nothing but mothering.

An Ohio man says that onions forecast the weather. That's the first time anybody has had the courage to call weather observers a name like that.

Granges Plan Joint Meeting At Middletown

Frederick Pomona Will Be Guest at Quarterly Session March 2.

Middletown, Md., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—The Middletown Grange will act as host to the Frederick County Pomona Grange at the quarterly meeting scheduled for March 2, with morning and afternoon sessions. Representatives from the nine subordinate bodies at Jefferson, Ballenger, New Market, Lewistown, Braddock, Mount Pleasant, Myersville, Creagerstown and Middletown, will attend the sessions, which will open at 10 o'clock.

Edward F. Holter, Middletown, Pomona master and secretary of the Maryland State Grange, will preside at the morning session, which will be devoted to business. One of the principal items of business will be a report of the legislative committee.

Seek Tax Reforms.

The committee is expected to recommend a number of changes in certain laws of the State, especially with regard to the present system of taxation. It is also expected that the committee will recommend that the Grangers adopt a resolution opposing the diversion of gasoline taxes to the general funds of the State and urging that these funds be used only for the construction and maintenance of highways. A general discussion will follow the report of the committee.

Another important item of business will be the adoption of a program of work for the year, which will include the holding of a school of instruction on grange work, a field day, State-wide in scope; a schedule of visits to be arranged by the subordinate bodies, plans for a membership campaign and a State-wide contest among the county granges.

LeGore to Speak.

At the close of the morning session, the entertainment committee of the local grange will serve lunch to the visitors.

John Renn, of the Ballenger Grange, Pomona lecturer, will have charge of the afternoon program. State Senator Harry W. LeGore, of Woodsboro, will be the speaker, and is expected to discuss matters now before the General Assembly, especially that which might affect rural communities. Other numbers arranged for the afternoon program include a vocal solo by Miss Marjorie Adam, Middletown; a playlet, by the Creagerstown Grange, and a musical number by the Myersville Grange.

Berkeley Jury Shelves Fund Diversion Case

W. Va. Probers Refuse to Open Inquiry Into Alleged Transfer.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—An alleged diversion of city funds from one fund to another, disclosed in a State audit and the subject of an exchange of correspondence between the State tax commissioner and Prosecuting Attorney Herbert E. Hannis, of Berkeley County, was refused an investigation by the February grand jury yesterday, it was learned on good authority.

Unanimous sentiment against probing the case was voiced, it was said.

Speculation as to whether the grand jury would act was widespread in view of Hannis' suggestion that the session could be a starting point for any action contemplated by the State tax commissioner. Hannis' suggestion was called to the matter by a letter from the tax commissioner with a copy of the audit.

The audit showed that the general fund of the city owes the sinking fund $78,290.04, representing an erroneous distribution of $13,900.75 in taxes. The transfer or borrowing of funds from the sinking fund amounted to $64,388.26, according to a letter of the prosecutor to the tax commissioner.

City Gets $251,667 More From the FERA

Relief funds, totaling $251,667, were granted to the District yesterday by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration to cover needs for the rest of this month. Of this sum, $31,667 is for transient relief and the remainder for work and direct relief programs.

The grant raised the total awarded to the District for the month to $745,601. Earlier in the month grants of $268,460 and $225,474 were made. The partial grants were given because of depletion of relief funds in the FERA.

Grants to Maryland totaled $1,708,971, the Administration announced, while Virginia's share amounted to $1,564,310.

'Refinancing Machine' Embroils Its Inventor

President Roosevelt yesterday missed the opoprtunity to see the "refinancing machine" to end the depression, but Adam E. Neu, 45, of Milwaukee, Wis., and the 900 block of New York avenue northwest, the alleged inventor, spent the night at Gallinger Hospital.

Neu was arrested at the Capitol by Capitol Police Chief W. S. Orthman and Detective William Wright, of the District police, assigned to guard the lawmakers, after he said he wanted the "Senator from Wisconsin" to take him to see the President so that he could get financing for his refinancing machine.

Woman Fatally Burned By Flames From Stove

Mrs. Catharine Purcell, 70, 1000 block of New Jersey avenue northwest, was fatally burned early yesterday when flames from a gas stove she was attempting to light ignited her garments.

Her nephew, William O'Connor, 38, who lives in the same house, was attracted by the smell of smoke. He beat out the flames.

An Emergency Hospital physician pronounced Mrs. Purcell dead.

Mrs. Fisher Rites Today.

Waynesboro, Pa., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at the home here for Mrs. Mary V. Fisher, 84, widow of Jacob S. Fisher, and a native of Shepherdstown, W. Va., who died yesterday morning of heart trouble.

Says Mrs. George Barnett, Popular Washington Hostess, Who Refutes Charges That Breed Is Delicate and Bad Tempered, Praising Pets.

Charges that the Pekingese are "delicate" and "bad-tempered" are refuted by Mrs. George Barnett, widow of the former commander of the Marine Corps and a well-known Washington hostess. Mrs. Barnett is an able defender of the Peke, speaking from 20 years' experience with this toy breed.

"Everyone makes fun of you for having Pekingese," Mrs. Barnett declared, as she discussed this breed, sitting in the living room of her home at 1622 Rhode Island avenue. Surrounding her were beautiful things, collected from the four corners of the world. "The Pekingese is, in fact, a big dog in a little body. He is as brave as a lion, which he is called in China—lion dog. And they are almost human in their understanding of words."

As Mrs. Barnett talked, she stroked the fluffy ball of pup which answers to the name of D'ing Hao, meaning "very good." Hop Toy, a beautiful orange and white from the kennels of Gen. William Connor, frisked about the room.

"I do not think the Pekingese is a delicate dog, although I suppose he might be if a person pampered him. I never put any coats on my dogs and they go out in the snow. Nor do my pets get any special diet. They eat raw meat and garlic. When they are in the country, they romp around like any dog does. As for the Pekingese being bad tempered, well, all I can say is that I never had one that was and I have raised the breed for 20 years. I will admit that I have seen plenty of bad tempered Pekes, but I think it must be something to do with the way that the individual dog has been trained."

This dog is one of the oldest known breeds in the world, being the royal pet of the Celestial Empire, where Mrs. Barnett first made their acquaintance. For many years, it was almost impossible to obtain a Peke, so jealously were they guarded in the palaces. At the looting of the summer palace at Pekin, during the occupation of that city by the Allies in 1860, five of these carefully guarded mites were found, forgotten in the hurried flight of the court. Admiral John Hay and another naval officer each secured two and the fifth was obtained by Gen. Dunn, who, on his arrival in England, presented it to her majesty, Queen Victoria.

The standard for the breed emphasizes a massive broad skull, wide and flat between the ears, and well shaped, but bowed forelegs. The dog has a long, straight and rather coarse coat, with a thick undercoat, of almost any color. His eyes are large, dark and lustrous; his ears heart-shaped, drooping and well feathered; his muzzle wrinkled, very short and with level lips; a profuse mane and a tail set high, slightly curved on back to either side.

Nazi Christians Demand Mueller Resign as Bishop

Berlin, Feb. 21 (AP).—The executive board of the Nazi German Christians tonight advised Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller to resign immediately in the interest of church harmony.

But the 52-year-old former army chaplain was reported to have replied:

"As long as Reichsfuehrer Hitler stands by me it is my duty to stay at my post."

The German Christians retorted: "Then go to der Reichsfuehrer and find out where you stand—he will tell you."

It was expected Hitler and Mueller will meet soon and the Reichsbishop will learn his exact position. Ever since 1925 Mueller has been a close friend of Hitler. It was Mueller's hatred of communism which brought them together.

Hitler is indebted to Mueller not only because he was one of the first men of the cloth to turn Nazi, but because the army chaplain in 1927 hid Hitler in his Koenigsberg home after the opposition threatened to beat Hitler.

Press Club Building Financing Is Probed

Financing of the National Press Club Building is being investigated by the House Bond Investigating Committee, it was disclosed yesterday, along with the Mayflower Hotel, the Shoreham Hotel and Wardman properties.

An investigator for the committee headed by Representative Sabath (Democrat), of Illinois, explained that several newspaper men who held bonds on the Press Club Building had called attention to the financial status of the investment. The committee is gathering data on the properties and will open hearings within two or three weeks.

Quarantine Is Lifted At Transient Lodges

The last of the men held under quarantine at the Transient Bureau lodges because of an outbreak of spinal meningitis in January were released yesterday by order of Acting Health Officer Edward J. Schwartz.

The quarantine was ordered on February 5, when a number of cases of epidemic spinal meningitis were discovered among the transient wards. Prompt action by District Health and Transient Bureau officers curtailed the spread of the illness.

Mrs. Day Free on Bond In Shooting of Husband

Mrs. Gertrude Day, 41, accused of shooting her policeman-husband, James P. Day, 35, during a domestic quarrel Tuesday, was charged with assault with a deadly weapon yesterday and released in $1,000 bond.

Day, shot through the abdomen, was reported in a "fair" condition at Sibley Hospital last night. Mrs. Day told police she shot in self-defense. Her husband, she said, attempted to strike her.

Greek Parley Strikes Snag

Committee Declines 35 Per Cent Offer to Service External Loans.

Eliot Wadsworth, the representative of the American bondholders on the League Loans Committee (London), of which Sir Austen Chamberlain is chairman, has received a cable informing him that the conferences which have taken place in London between the Greek minister of finance and representatives of the League Loans Committee (London), the Council of Foreign Bondholders, London, and the Association Nationale des Porteurs Francais de Valeurs Mobilieres, Paris, have not led to a satisfactory result.

The Greek minister of finance offered to continue the transfer of 35 per cent for the service of the Greek external loans during the financial year ending March 31, 1936.

The representatives of the above committee, after examining the financial position of Greece, and noting the improvement which has taken place since 1933, were of the opinion that it was within the capacity of the Greek government to transfer 50 per cent for the service of the external loans. The minister of finance stated that in his opinion Greece could not comply with the committee's demands and has returned to Athens.

Oil Stocks Fall Off But Output Increases

(Associated Press.)

The Bureau of Mines reported yesterday that stocks of domestic and foreign crude petroleum on February 16 totaled 321,822,000 barrels, representing a decline of 1,222,000 barrels from the preceding week. Stocks of domestic crude decreased 1,286,000 barrels, and foreign crude increased 64,000.

Daily average production during the week averaged 2,620,000 barrels, an increase of 60,000, most of which was recorded in Oklahoma. Imports increased, the daily average being 73,000.

Daily average crude runs to stills was 2,570,000 barrels, the peak for the year, and an increase of 120,000 barrels over the preceding week.

Week's Bank Clearings Near New High Mark

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—Bank clearings for the past week approached closely the high level established in January, Dun & Bradstreet reported today. The total of the leading cities was $5,256,048,000, a gain of $5,305,101,000 for the corresponding period last year. The figures showed a gain of $1,016,637,000 over the returns for the previous week.

At New York City clearings were $3,455,459,000, a loss of 7.5 per cent from the amount reported last year, while the aggregate for centers outside of New York of $1,800,589,000 was 14.7 per cent higher.

France Honors First Channel Balloon Fliers

The 150th Anniversary of Crossing Celebrated in Paris.

Paris, Feb. (U.P.).—The 150th anniversary of the first balloon crossing of the English Channel, accomplished by a Frenchman and an American, who had to throw their wallets and clothing overboard to lighten the load, is being commemorated in France this year with a series of lectures and the erection of statues to the pioneer birdmen.

The American is recorded in history as being Dr. J. Jeffries, a physician, while the Frenchman was Jean Pierre Blanchard, a professional aeronaut who already had gained fame as the inventor of an ingenious mouse-trap in which the mouse killed himself after being ensnared.

Joking at Take-Off.

The take-off, which was made at Dover on the British coast, created a sensation. Hundreds of doubting people, laughing and joking, gathered there to watch the fun.

Just as the stay-ropes were being cut a man jumped into the basket of the balloon and, flourishing a sword, defied anybody to remove him. After a free-for-all skirmish he was ejected. Legend has it that this man was Napoleon, but historians declare this to be untrue. The date was January 7, 1785.

Owing to the delay in getting started, the hot air in the balloon began to cool shortly after Blanchard and Jeffries got over the channel. They threw everything, including all of their clothing, overboard.

Fortunately a strong wind was blowing in the right direction and just as Jeffries was about to jump overboard, they found themselves over the French coastline. They landed on the edge of a forest near Calais.

Blanchard became world famous overnight. He was made a Citizen of Honor of Calais. He was accorded an audience with the King. He was lionized by high society and was rewarded by the French government with a large sum of money and a pension.

After spending his fortune and continuing with his experiments in the air, he died here March 7, 1790, as the result of an attack of apoplexy, brought on by a balloon crash a few weeks before at The Hague.

Raw gold exported in the ten months ended January were valued at $3,227,639, in comparison with $1,904,864 last year.

High Value Placed On Hearty Laugh

Big Help in Depression, F. R. Comstock Says.

Hollywood, Fla. (U.P.).—F. Ray Comstock, Broadway producer, today gave "good hearty laughs" a large share of the credit for carrying the United States through the depression.

The theatrical executive places a high valuation on laughs. Some of them, if rollicking enough, "are worth ten grand any day."

Comstock is wintering at the Hollywood Beach Hotel. "Just lying on the beach in the sun and thinking about the stuffy offices along the grand canyon of Broadway brings a smile that's worth $1,000," he said.

When the masseur strikes a tender spot in his ribs while he is sunbathing in a solarium, Comstock says, "There goes another thousand."

The "satisfied chuckle" that follows the landing of a "whopper" in the gulf stream—"well, that must be worth $5,000."

"It was courage, combined with laughs, that carried us through the depression. We're coming out of that period. You can tell it by watching the faces of people everywhere. They're not smiling—they're laughing out loud these days. It's good for them. Just think of all the dough they're spending in laughs."

Bank of England Increases Reserves

London, Feb. 21 (AP).—The weekly statement of the Bank of England shows the following changes in pounds: Total reserve increased 1,729,000; circulation decreased 1,685,000; bullion increased 43,000; other securities increased 915,000; public deposits increased 7,964,000; other deposits decreased 6,520,000; notes reserve increased 1,750,000; government securities decreased 1,167,000.

The proportion of the bank's reserve to liability is 49.25 per cent, compared with 28.61 per cent last week.

Rate of discount is 2 per cent.

Power Output Increases.

The power output of the electric subsidiaries of the American Water Works & Electric Co. for January totaled 171,709,758 kilowatt hours, against 146,767,278 kilowatt hours for the corresponding month of 1934, an increase of 17 per cent.

New Deal at the Belasco Places Washington in 12-City Foreign Film Circuit

Chain Extends From Boston to The Windy City

10-Year Lease Involved; Loew Spring Festival; Theater Jottings.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

When the Belasco Theater tonight is transmogrified from a citadel of the living drama, with an honorable record of some four decades of useful service, into a permanent home for foreign-made motion pictures and such other studio product as may be looked upon as cultural rather than commercial, it will become one of a proposed chain of 12 such houses with links extending from Boston to Chicago.

This was disclosed to the drama desks yesterday by Matty Radin, executive head of the new project, at a supposed "luncheon" in the Carlton, which turned out to be a meticulously appointed and complete turkey dinner.

Mr. Radin for several years has conducted the two foremost foreign film theaters in New York—the Cameo and the Acme—and now, among others, has the Majestic in Boston, the Auditorium in Baltimore, the Belasco here, and expects to have the full, round dozen in operation within a month.

Mr. Taylor Remains.

In adapting the Belasco to its new uses, Mr. Radin is wisely retaining the services of the veteran L. Stoddard Taylor to preserve those gracious contacts which he has established and solidified during almost a third of a century of guiding the destinies of the Lafayette Square property. Mr. Taylor, however, will not serve in the capacity of house manager. Those duties will devolve upon a young cum laude university graduate who will bring the viewpoint of modern youth to the councils of the more experienced executives. Benjamin Radin, son of the mainspring of the new enterprise, will direct advertising and publicity and the theater's promotional activities.

Capacity Cut in Two.

Under its new seating arrangements, with the first and second balconies discarded, the Belasco's seating capacity has been approximately divided by two. The seats commanding satisfactory sight lines will number a total of 720. These are all located on the orchestra floor and in the mezzanine tier of boxes.

After tonight's reserved seat inaugural, orchestra seats will be sold at a top of 55 cents with the mezzanine 65 cents, and showings will be continuous on the "all day grind" system from 11 a. m. to closing.

Mr. Radin is making an experiment here that has been much discussed and long awaited. The outcome will be watched with utmost interest by all who follow the development of the cinema at all closely.

That Mr. Radin expects it to be eminently successful is evidenced by his statement that he has taken a 10-year lease on the Belasco and is prepared to present 52 foreign films a year there, if necessary.

After having his hopes buoyed to a high point by New York representations that Dennis King in "Petticoat Fever" might open in the National next Monday night and a new attraction be secured for the week of March 4, Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran of the E street shrine of the drama was desolate last night upon having received late afternoon advices to the effect that "Petticoat Fever" will not be played here at all and no touring attraction can be booked for either the week of February 24 or the week of March 4. Thus are high hopes dashed to earth without warning in these hectic days of "show business."

In the On and Offing!

With today marking a calendar date that is said to have something to do with the arrival of spring, the Loew executives are beginning to make noises having to do with a "spring festival" of superspecials and hyperstage shows that is practically on its way.

"Sequoia," opening Friday at Loew's Fox, it seems, is the first of a succession of highly touted pictures that will eventually embrace Janet Gaynor and Warner Baxter in "One More Spring," the second release of "The March Time," Shirley Temple, Lionel Barrymore and that incomparable hoofer, Bill Robinson, in "The Little Colonel;" Helen Hayes and Robert Montgomery, in "Vanessa;" Charles Butterworth, in "Public Enemy, No. 2," and Will Rogers, in "Life Begins at 40."

One looking for spring hits at Loew's Palace will stumble upon such items as Ronald Colman and Loretta Young in "Clive of India," Claudette Colbert in "The Gilded Lily," the world premiere of Marlene Dietrich's new vehicle, "The Devil Is a Woman;" Bing Crosby and W. C. Fields in "Mississippi;" Wallace Beery, in "West Point of the Air;" Mae West, in "How'm I Doin'?" and Jean Harlow and William Powell, in "Reckless."

Oh, see the pretty box-office lines!

Speaking of Loew's Fox, the management announces that a prize of $5 will be awarded to the person suggesting the most appropriate name for the deer now occupying the wire-screened maternity ward in the lower lobby of the theater. The contest will close Saturday midnight. Replies should be addressed to the manager of Loew's Fox Theater and not to this newspaper.

First Aid Note.

"Sequoia," in case you haven't heard, is pronounced "redwood!"

Will Reopen the Belasco Tonight

When the Belasco Theater reopens its doors tonight for the inauguration of its new policy of presenting foreign-made motion pictures, the principal screen feature will be "Chapayev," or The Red Commander," an Amkino production filmed in Soviet Russia. Pictured above are Barbara Miasnikova and Leonid Kmit, who, one suspects, provide at least a part of the romantic interest of the picture's development. Beginning tomorrow, "Chapayev" will be presented continuously from 11 a. m. to closing at a popular scale of prices.

By Nelson B. Bell.

The miracle of their week of repertoire at the National Theater was wrought yesterday by the D'Oyly Carte Opera Co., when, at both the matinee and evening performances, they imbued "The Mikado," the time-honored Gilbert and Sullivan operetta that has been manhandled and mutilated by more amateur singing societies than any other work ever written, with the shimmer and sheen of newness, freshness and novelty.

This they accomplished by a strict and dignified adherence to the lines and score of the piece that has been a favorite since 1883, or thereabouts, as they were originally written and intended to be spoken and sung; by deft introduction of little comedy touches strange, but welcome to American audiences and by bits of "business" and choral groupings that seemed, somehow, to exalt a work which by every right should have been hackneyed and threadbare from overuse and incompetent interpretation.

The familiar songs—more familiar probably than any others Gilbert and Sullivan ever wrote—were thunderously encored; individual performances were enthusiastically greeted by an audience that packed every available inch of standing-room in the theater and most of the concerted numbers had to be repeated before the action could progress.

Those who brought the full measure of their generous gifts to the enactment of the pivotal roles in this comic fantasy of Old Nippon are catalogued in the small-type paragraphs preceding these observations. I especially commend the Pooh-Bah of that versatile artist, Sydney Granville; the Ko-Ko of that inimitable comedian, Martyn Green; the Katisha of Dorothy Gill and the Three Little Maids of Eileen Moody, as Yum-Yum, Marjorie Eyre, as Pitti-Sing, and Elizabeth Nickell-Lean, as Peep-Bo, for the exceptional merit they revealed.

The secondary roles were played with equal, but less conspicuous, finesse and the costumes and settings designed by Charles Ricketts, R. A., once more enhanced the beauty and effectiveness of an authentic and colorful production.

Tonight the bill will be "The Yeomen of the Guard."

Waynesboro Has Mumps Epidemic

45 Homes Quarantined; Other Diseases Gain.

Waynesboro, Pa., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—With 45 homes already quarantined, Health Officer P. H. Snowberger said today Waynesboro is experiencing its worst epidemic of mumps in four years.

Epidemic proportions were reached the last few days.

The health officers' records also show 12 homes quarantined for chicken pox, one for measles and nine for scarlet fever.

Mr. Snowberger also said the number of contagious diseases this year surpasses any in the last four years.

Foreign Films Get New Home In Washington

Belasco Becomes a Picture House; Other New Bills for Holiday Week.

With first Washington screenings of "Chapayev, or the Red Commander," tonight at 8:30, the Belasco Theater takes its place among the Capital's motion-picture houses as the home of foreign-made films and such domestic studio products as may meet the requirements of a cultural rather than strictly commercial outlet for screen entertainment.

Tonight's dedication of the Lafayette Square playhouse as a temple of the cinema is expected to attract a typically representative Washington first-night audience. High officials of the Government, the Diplomatic Corps and other notables have been invited to be present at the opening performance.

"Chapayev" is described as one of the most notable films ever produced in Russia. It will be followed by other foreign product representative of France, England, Poland, Austria and other countries where talking pictures are produced. For tonight's performance, seats will be reserved; beginning tomorrow at 11, performances will be continuous.

Beginning tomorrow morning, the screen attraction at the Earle Theater will be "Sweet Music," a new Warner Bros. musical in which the stellar role is played by Rudy Vallee, who in this subject is said to have found his most effective vehicle to date. The stage portion of the program will be headlined by Carmela Ponselle, with additional acts by Peggy Taylor and others.

"Sequoia," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of Vance Hoyt's story of "Malibu," will be the major screen offering at Loew's Fox Theater beginning tomorrow, with Jean Parker and Russell Hardie in the principal human roles. On the stage a diversified program will be headlined by Frank Parker, one of radio's favorite vocalists.

Inaugurating its run with a special preholiday preview tonight at 11:26 o'clock, "The Scarlet Pimpernel" will take possession of the screen at RKO-Keith's for the week normally beginning Friday morning. A capable supporting cast appears in the contributory roles. Prior to the midnight screening of "Pimpernel," Margaret Sullavan, Herbert Marshall, Reginald Owen and Frank Morgan will occupy the screen-in Ferenc Molnar's "The Good Fairy."

• • • •

Chester Morris and Virginia Bruce are the costars of "Society Doctor," the screen play which will begin a week's engagement at the Columbia Theater tomorrow morning. In the supporting cast are such stage and screen luminaries as Billie Burke, Robert Taylor, Raymond Walburn, Henry Kolker, Robert McWade, Donald Meek and Louise Henry.

• • • •

Lyle Talbot and Mary Astor are the featured players in "Red Hot Tires," coming to the Metropolitan Theater tomorrow as chief feature of the screen bill for the new week. Talbot appears in the role of an auto racing driver—hence the title. Others in the cast include Roscoe Karns, Frankie Darro and Gavin Gordon.

• • • •

"David Copperfield," Metro-Goldwin-Mayer's superlatively fine film version of the Charles Dickens novel, will remain a third week at Loew's Palace, beginning tomorrow. The cast is headed by Freddie Bartholomew, W. C. Fields, Lionel Barrymore, Edna May Oliver, Roland Young, Madge Evans, Frank Lawton and Maureen O'Sullivan.

Dorothy Sands will make a single appearance on the stage of the National Theater on Sunday night in "Our Stage and Stars," a one-woman entertainment in which the star proves her right to a place in that limited field of theatrical endeavor to which Ruth Draper and Cornelia Otis Skinner have brought distinction.

Virginia to Pay Police Reward

Eight Apply for $2,500 Offered for Capture of Mais and Legenza.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 21 (AP).—The reward for the capture of gangsters Robert Mais and Walter Legenza, electrocuted February 2, is ready for the Philadelphia and New York detectives who caught them after their escape from the Richmond Jail last September.

The city put up $2,000 and the State added another $500.

Eight detectives, six in Philadelphia and two in New York have applied for the reward, and Maj. R. B. Jordan, chief of Richmond police, has replied that the money will be sent to them as soon as proper affidavits are filed.

James H. Malone, captain of Philadelphia detectives, named Detectives George Richardson, James P. Ryan, Harry E. Peltz, John V. Hardy and Clarence Ferguson, of Philadelphia, and Lieut. Walter Sullivan and Detective Bernard Carney, of New York, as the men who with himself, captured Mais and Legenza in New York January 17.

The gangsters were returned here for execution for the murder of E. M. Huband, Federal Reserve Bank truck driver.

Rotarians Hold Birthday Party

Waynesboro Organization Is Ten Years Old.

Waynesboro, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—The tenth anniversary of the organization of the Waynesboro Rotary Club was observed tonight jointly with the thirtieth anniversary of the founding of Rotary International at a banquet at Fairfax Hall School. The event also served as the annual "ladies' night" affair of the club. Delegations from Staunton and Charlottesville clubs were in attendance, as well as all but one of 24 living charter members of the local club.

E. M. Quillen, president, acted as toastmaster of the club banquet. Invocation was made by Dr. Charles F. Steck and Col. Morgan H. Hudgins, first president of the Waynesboro group, gave an outline of the history of Rotary. Those presenting the entertainment program, features of which included a fashion show and beauty pageant, were Miss Emily Wells Smith, Dr. Andrew H. McLaughlin, James Bush and Cullen Chew. Presentation of the birthday cake was made by little Miss Amelia Quillen, daughter of the club president.

Frederick Phone Line Dismantled by Firm

Winchester, Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Dismantling of the Frederick County Mutual Telephone Co., owned by M. Lloyd Hite, of Lantz Mills, Shenandoah County, and H. S. Schell, of Charlottesville, has been virtually completed, it was said today.

The company, which served many rural patrons in the southern end of Frederick County for many years, was unable to stem the adverse economic tides of the last few years. The present owners acquired title to the company during the past summer and assumed control October 1. They attempted to continue operating the company, but when only 19 patrons paid their bills on January 1, it was announced the lines would be dismantled.

Waynesboro, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.). Chief R. L. In 1934 there were 449 arrests for drunkenness and 60 arrests for drunken driving as opposed to 310 drunk arrests in 1933 and 33 drunken drivers. The report showed that the increase in arrests over former years began in the latter part of 1933 after the establishment of a State liquor dispensary here, according to Chief Switzer.

Claims to Free Water Halt Rent Collections

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 21 (AP).—Claims of 29 persons to free water from the Hagerstown main along the Cavetown pike today delayed action in collecting rents from water consumers.

City Attorney E. R. Roulette said the city's plan for instigating suits will be decided following a check of the claims of those persons who, it was claimed, have declined to pay water rental for three years. Their petition claimed the right to free water in return for allowing the main to pass through their land.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

While the Camera Isn't Looking

Hollywood, Feb. 21.

A LITTLE trip about the various studios, making brief notations of things about your favorites that you can't see on the screen.

You always know when Mae West is in her dressing room; there is a large black limousine, with bullet-proof glass, parked outside her door. Often Mae will come to the screen door and give the studio street the once over. Mae looks very good in a cream-colored bathrobe, which she keeps closed only with her hands . . . That tough fellow, George Raft, has a dainty dressing room. The furniture is white and the woodwork is yellow. No matter how bright the Hollywood sun is shining, if the electric lights are turned on, Raft is in. George used to have his walls covered with autographed photos of every girl he ever held hands with. Now there is only one photograph in his room. A neatly framed picture of Virginia Pine—with one of her fingers in her mouth.

When you enter the lobby of the United Artists studio you will see, if you are observant, a huge photograph of Norma Talmadge—a relic of those days when she was a United Artists star and the wife of the studio owner, Joseph Schenck. People walk into this studio daily without recognizing the face of the lady on the wall . . . Cecil B. DeMille has his own private entrance, guarded by a special studio policeman, at Paramount. These exclusive offices formerly belonged to B. P. Schulberg. When DeMille moved in, the first thing he did was to throw out the sunken bathtub. C. B. likes tubs only in pictures. He takes a shower.

IF you're anxious to find Al Jolson and he isn't on the set go to the first floor of the Administration Building at Warners. There you'll find Al in the studio barber shop getting a shave, a haircut, a manicure, a massage and a shampoo. This barber shop has only one chair and one barber and when you see Jolson about make your reservation for tomorrow . . . Over at United Artists part of the swanky Douglas Fairbanks bungalow is now a barber shop, where S. Goldwyn, D. Zanuck and lesser executives go to get a once over lightly. The Fairbanks bungalow features a steam bath and a swimming pool which is now used by the executives, the players and press agents and—when no one is around—an office boy. The sign on the lawn outside this bungalow proudly states: Mr. Douglas Fairbanks. This bungalow was furnished and equipped by Fairbanks. Yet, when Doug was in Hollywood he had to take another room at this studio when he wanted privacy.

Ernst Lubitsch now has two offices at Paramount. A small, two-room office in the writers and directors building, where his name is printed on the glass door with removable ink. His other office is the grand suite recently occupied by Emanuel Cohen. On being admitted to this office, you walk, or stumble, down two stairs, and there, almost hidden by a huge desk and a supply of telephones and a set of buzzers, sits the other Lubitsch, the production chief of the studio. When one of the phones ring or one of the buzzers click, Ernst becomes mystified and puzzled. He will leave his desk, dash up the two steps, open the door and shout to his secretary: "Please come in here and show me what phone or buzzer you are ringing." Lubitsch says that this is the only part of his new job which puzzles him.

SHIRLEY TEMPLE practically lives in a huge doll house, for that is what her spacious, white bungalow at the Fox studio is. And to make Shirley more comfortable, a swing was built to the tree standing in front of her doll house. Shirley claimed that the only thing her dressing room didn't have—which she desired—was a swing. The property department erected one for her. But when an executive saw Shirley enjoying herself by flying high in the air, he immediately ordered the swing removed. He didn't want the biggest box office draw on the lot to hurt herself. If Shirley went boom, so would Fox . . . William Powell always eats in his dressing room, and he's one star who brings his own lunch to the studio. He likes good food and knows where to get it . . . Josef von Sternberg has the name of every flicker he ever directed printed on one of the walls of his office. The names of the hits are printed in blacker ink than the names of the flops.

Marlene Dietrich's dressing room features a large and comfortable couch and a large portrait drawing, in colors, of Marlene Dietrich. You can tell when Marlene is in the dressing room, for she always has a phonograph in action and she generally plays Bing Crosby records. This greatly annoyed Lanny Ross, who used to have the room across the way. One day he sent her a batch of his records . . . Garbo has a phonograph in her dressing room and recently has been playing only one record, "You're the Top." She plays, over and over, one part of this ditty: "You're the National Gallery—You're Garbo's salary . . ."

Action Likely Soon on a New Virginia Judge

Approval of Montague Bill by Sub-Committee of House Seen.

(Associated Press.)

Early approval by a House Judiciary sub-committee of the Montague bill to create an additional Federal judgeship in the eastern Virginia district was predicted yesterday in authoritative quarters.

The sub-committee chairman, Representative Gregory (Democrat), of Kentucky, just informed of the contents of a report by Attorney General Cummings on the measure, said his group would take action within a few days.

The Attorney General made no recommendations regarding the bill, but merely forwarded to the committee a report on the business transacted in the district, where Luther B. Way, of Norfolk, is the only Federal judge.

Comprehensive Report.

Cummings disapproved the bill last year, but Gregory's sub-committee disregarded the Attorney General's report and passed on the measure to the full committee with a favorable report. The sub-committee has practically the same membership as last year.

Cummings' report to the committee covered not only by Rrepresentative Montague's bill but a dozen others for various parts of the country. However, it did not include a report on the measure of Representative Burch, of Martinsville, to create a "floater" judge to preside in both the Eastern and Western districts of Virginia.

Burch Bill Pending.

The Burch bill, introduced some weeks after Montague's measure, also has been referred to Gregory's sub-committee, but Gregory said it had not yet been taken up. It will be acted upon after the report on it is received from Cummings.

The Attorney General's report on Montague's proposal showed slight increase in the number of pending bankruptcy and private civil cases in 1934 over 1932 but decreases in both criminal and civil Government business.

It did not mention the Federal receiverships in the district which members of the Virginia bar had asserted are consuming a large part of Judge Way's attention.

CCC Camp Pair Held In Looting of Mails

Woodstock, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Justice Day and LeRoy Harvey, both of Washington, colored members of the Wolf Gap CCC Camp, 16 miles west of here, are in the Shenandoah County Jail, Woodstock, charged with robbing the camp postoffice last night of registered mail. Officers said they found a wrist watch hidden in the lining of Day's coat and $10 sewed in the lining of Harvey's coat. The men are being held pending Federal investigation.

Housing Act Clarified In Virginia Meeting

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Representatives of 12 Virginia counties today heard the Federal housing act discussed by several out-of-town speakers.

With approximately 100 persons present from the counties of Essex, Spotsylvania, Stafford, King George, Caroline, Orange, Culpeper, Prince William, Fairfax, Frederick, Loudoun and West Moreland, the group heard Miss Virginia Baylor, of Essex County; Miss Maude E. Wallace, home demonstration agent of the V. P. I. extension division, and V. R. Hillman, farm representative of FHA, tell how with the proper amount of backing they might improve their homes at once through Federal loans.

Official Files Suit For Pay Deducted

Salisbury, Md., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Contending a reduction was made in his salary without legal authority or his consent, County Treasurer Charles W. Bennett has entered suit against the Wicomico board of county commissioners to recover the difference between the amount he received and his stipulated salary when elected in 1930.

The treasurer petitions the court to issue a writ of mandamus compelling the county commissioners to include in the next budget the sum of $342, which Bennett alleges is the difference.

For seven months of 1933 and the entire year of 1934, the treasurer declares, the commissioners deducted $18 monthly from his salary without his consent. None of the members of the board named as defendant was in office when the reduction was made in all county departments as a measure of economy.

Drexel-Gundry Wedding Held In the Bahamas

Governor of Islands Serves as Groomsman for Brother-in-Law.

Nassau, Bahamas, Feb. 21 (AP).—A society wedding linking two prominent American families was solemnized last night when Miss Marjorie Drexel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel, jr., of Philadelphia and New York, became the bride of Mr. John Munton Gundy, jr., of Cleveland.

The ceremony was held by candlelight in the flower-bedecked drawing room of the Drexel winter home, with Sir Bede Clifford, governor of the Bahamas, acting as groomsman. Mr. Gundry is a brother of the governor's wife, Lady Alice Clifford.

There were no bridesmaids. Atlanta Clifford was the flower girl. Two other daughters of Governor and Lady Clifford, Pandora and Ann, carried the train.

Sixty guests, prominent in society here, attended the ceremony.

Carrying lilies and carnations the bride was dressed in a simple white satin gown, with train and yoke of rose point and Duchess lace. She wore her mother's bridal veil and was given in marriage by her father. Mrs. Drexel wore a pale gray lace.

The Rev. Andrew Douglas, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, officiated.

Following the ceremony a buffet supper was served on the terrace which overlooks the sea and afterward there was dancing.

The couple will spend their honeymoon here. They have a cottage by the sea.

Numerous Bachelors in Congress Are Answers to Prayers of D. C. Social Hostesses

Wit and Youth Enhance Charm Of 74th Session's Unwed Group

Ages Range From 31 to Substantial Sixties; Guffey the Masterful Type; Reilly Good Cook; Holt "Too Busy" for Girls.

By Mary Greiner Kelly.

THE SEVENTY-FOURTH CONGRESS is an answer to the social hostess' prayer. Presenting a greater number of bachelors than ever before, this year's list also boasts a variety of choice heretofore undreamed of. Lawyers, farmers, newspaper editors, business men and scholars distinguish the group.

Then there's the matter of age. Ranging from Baby Congressmen of 31 to those in the substantial sixties, the unmarried members of House and Senate offer an interesting kaleidoscope of background and experience.

For those who prefer the masterful type—the man who can command action through sheer force of will and personality, there is Senator Joseph F. Guffey, Democratic Napoleon from Pennsylvania. The first candidate to capture a Democratic seat from that rock-ribbed Republican State since the Civil War, Senator Guffey, handsome in a dominant sort of way, is already one of the greatest powers in Congress. His hobby, if any, is walking. So far, feminine sighs mean nothing to him.

Witty Wisconsinite.

Witty, affable, with a touch of blarney in his conversation, Michael K. Reilly, of Wisconsin, has never ceased to interest feminine Washington. Silver-haired and blue-eyed, Representative Reilly is now serving his sixth term in Congress, his first beginning in the prewar days of 1913.

"My hobby?" echoed the lawyer-Congressman from romantic Fond du Lac, "why it would be beautiful women, if they'd pay any attention. But they don't—they're all so elusive," he sighed amidst the belying guffaws from fellow Congressmen within hearing distance.

"Don't believe him," said one of his secretaries later. "His hobby is contract bridge. He is an excellent player and generally brings home first prize. He is also a good dancer and has a really charming singing voice," she added.

The most "accomplished cook in Congress" is how Representative Marion Zioncheck, handsome 32-year-old attorney from Washington, unblushingly described himself.

Supplies a Recipe.

"Here," he exclaimed enthusiastically, "I'll give you my original recipe for liver dumpling soup." And overriding all protests, he went through it.

"Make a paste of calves' liver, butter, eggs, toast crumbs, chopped parsley and ground onions," he said, without even pausing for breath. "Throw in a little ground garlic (when no one is looking). Form this into small balls and cook in a pot of consomme until well done. Believe me," he added, "there's a dish that never fails to click even with the most discriminating. They always come back for more."

Keen-humored, versatile, Mr. Zioncheck began making political history when a student at the University of Washington. A non-fraternity man (by choice), he organized the Independents for the first time in 1924. Becoming a power among them he was able to name and elect his own candidates with little effort. He later became student body president in the midst of one of the stormiest administrations on the campus.

The ideal girl in Representative Zioncheck's mind does not necessarily have to be beautiful. She does have to be attractive, slender and intellectually honest. He would prefer having her able to cook, but says it isn't essential, what with his own talent along this line.

Coffee in "Early Forties."

The most beautiful girls in the world (outside of Nebraska) live in Washington, believes attractive Harry B. Coffee, curly-haired, blue-eyed Representative from Chadron. Admitting that he is in his "early forties," the Nebraska Representative will be another delight to the eyes of unattached femininity. This is his first term in Congress.

Golfing, horseback riding and dancing are among the accomplishments in which this congressional bachelor excels. President of the Coffee Cattle Co., Inc., one of the most extensive ranch holdings in the Middle West, the Nebraska Representative has plenty to occupy his time when not attending sessions.

His ideal of women? Representative Coffee admits he never gave the subject much thought, but——

"Well, she'd have to be a good sport to marry me," he said modestly, then added, "I'd like her good looking, although not too beautiful, interested in a variety of things, and above all, intelligent."

Career Holt's Chief Interest.

Senator Rush D. Holt, of West Virginia, whose talents are prodigious and whose assets include a young and beautiful sister, Jane, is too busy launching a career to worry much over the fair sex.

Only 29 years of age, he must remain this side of the Senate door until June, when he reaches the required maturity. In the meantime, he is going through all the motions of being an Upper House Congressman, even to preparing bills and dictating letters to constituents. Many of the latter are handled by Jane, who finds being his voluntary secretary more of a lark than attending college.

His principal hobby is public speaking, at which he is singularly adept. His conversation is sparkling and clever, and according to members of Washington's young social set, "he dances divinely."

Red-haired, blue-eyed and unafraid of hard work, Senator Lewis B. Schwellenbach is another interesting addition to the Congressional Bachelor's Club. In high school he tried unsuccessfully to make the debating team for three successive years. Then he got a break when a new professor came into the school.

It was C. C. Hill, who preceded him to the Senate. His mother, he says, is still his "best girl."

A high school economics instructor whose students managed his campaign for Congress, Representative Byron N. Scott, of California, 31, holds a unique place in the bachelor line-up. Tall, slim and wavy haired, this young degree holder from two universities (Kansas and Southern California) is apt to find his soul mate in the realm of amateur theatricals. They're his special hobby.

Southern gallantry, patent leather hair and a "perfect" disposition set Representative A. L. Ford, of Mississippi, aside as one of the matrimonial plums of the session. Thirty-two years old, this former district attorney is said to be an engaging conversationalist and a brilliant public speaker. His hobbies are outdoor sports, drama and musical shows.

Another attractive member of the "baby Congressman" group is Thomas C. Hennings, jr., 32, of Missouri. A former college track star, Representative Hennings is fond of all college athletics and spends much of his spare time attending events around the District. He possesses a splendid sense of humor, is a good mixer and isn't particularly girl shy.

Massachusetts presents probably more bachelor Congressmen than any other State. Included in the list are David I. Walsh, veteran Senator, and Representative A. Piatt Andrew, both noted for their scholarly accomplishments; Representative George Holden Tinkham, whose silver-streaked beard is a triumph equaled only by his career of big game hunting in Africa and French Indo-China, and Representative Joseph W. Martin, black-haired, blue-eyed newspaper publisher.

Others on the list of interesting eligibles include the colorful Senator Bronson Cutting, of New Mexico, who was a Phi Beta Kappa at Harvard, and Representative James P. B. Duffy, of New York State, who is said to be a charming personality and gifted conversationalist.

REP. A. L. FORD, 32, Mississippi, gallant, sweet.

SENATOR JOSEPH GUFFEY, Pennsylvania, forceful, charming.

Underwood & Underwood.
REP. MARION ZIONCHECK, 32, Washington, cooks for fun.

Harris & Ewing.
SENATOR RUSH HOLT, 29, West Virginia, dances divinely.

Harris & Ewing.
REP. MICHAEL K. REILLY, Wisconsin, excels in contract.

Harris & Ewing.
REP. JOSEPH W. MARTIN, Massachusetts, talks well.

Fortitude of Two Women Spies As They Faced Death in Reich Bespeaks New Feminine Ideals

By Malvina Lindsay.
(Woman's Page Editor.)

THE TWO GERMAN noblewomen beheaded for treason are reported to have gone to their barbaric executions with faces calm, heads high. Women generally will take pride in this. For happily today the ideal of feminine valor is supplanting that of feminine pusillanimity.

• • • •

No one questions that there have been many physically brave women in all ages. But women as a class have never been distinguishd for intrepidity. This has been partly due to the genteel tradition. Even up to recent years a woman's femininity was questioned if she were not afraid of mice, spiders and cows; if she were not afraid to go home in the dark; if she did not get panicky every time she heard a noise in the basement; if she did not assume all strange men who came to her door were Bluebeards—and more recently if she did not weep under the ordeal of getting a permanent wave.

• • • •

Fortunately no premium is any longer set on such childish cowardice. Even more fortunately, hysteria is no longer in good form. Take the matter of death—life's major tragedy. It was not so long ago that a woman's grief in bereavement was measured by her emotional outpourings. Today's code of civilized behavior requires that women as well as men meet personal sorrow with dignity, fortitude and philosophy.

WOMEN'S more recent activities outside the home have helped materially to develop new feminine ideals. Thanks particularly to aviation—to its Amelia Earhart, Anne Lindbergh, Mrs. Jean Picard and other gallant trailblazers—the feminine heroine of today is a woman of controlled nerves and adventurous soul.

• • • •

Her bravery is not a matter of foolhardiness but of brains and character; not a matter of instinct but of conscious direction. Much light is thrown on the psychology of feminine courage in Miss Earhart's recent summing up of her flight philosophy: Don't worry until there is something to worry about—and then it's usually too late."

• • • •

Few women, no matter how theoretically intrepid they are, but who still quake in their souls at the thought of setting out alone into the cold darkness above the Atlantic or faring forth into the mysterious gloom overhanging the Pacific. Often questioners have sought to explore the state of mind of the young woman pilot as she faced these hazardous ventures. Always Amelia Earhart has replied in her serene, casual voice, "I didn't let myself think about the danger after I had once decided to do the job."

THE FEMININE habit of worrying about what might happen and the feminine habit of diverting constructive energy into neurotic foreboding have handicapped women in the development of physical courage. It has handicapped them in all achievement requiring the element of venture. Centuries of petty and self-devastating fears hang over them. The ingrained fortitude of men is not theirs. Courage can come to them only through intelligent effort.

• • • •

Why, it might be asked, should women seek to be brave? Well, for one thing that they may cease to bear the stigma of being cowards and weaklings, that they may no longer flaunt childishness, hysteria, cravenness and selfishness under the guise of coquetry and effeminacy.

• • • •

For another thing they should seek to be brave—physically as well as mentally and morally, for all are inevitably interlinked—that they may defend the privileges they have already obtained and that they may seek dauntlessly after fuller and more adventurous living in the future.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Is There Such a Thing as Congenital Lack of Vitality?

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Thank you. Your comment on my letter printed Monday was kind, even though devastatingly right, and I appreciate especially your warning for the future. It had never occurred to me I was about to do the same thing all over again.

• • • •

I've always excused myself by assuming that my lack of vitality was congenital. Now it suddenly seems that I have simply dissipated my energies through lack of conviction and self-confidence.

• • • •

When I had written that letter, even before I read your reply, I felt as if a weight were lifted from my spirit. It's true, then, that "the truth shall make you free."

• • • •

I don't know whether it takes me longer than most people to grow up. But I am nearly 28 and just beginning to understand what it means to "lay hold on life." It used to be grand "just to be alive." Now perhaps it will be more so to live!

Sincerely,
BEWILDERED.

Question for Scientists.

DEAR BEWILDERED: Perhaps your lack of vitality is congenital. One reads a great deal nowadays about chromosomes and hormones and the effect on personality and vitality of gland secretions and so on. It's all very scientific and I would be the veriest poseur to pretend to comprehend the subject in part or in whole—but we do know that our physiological inheritance brings a more powerful influence to bear on our destiny than even our moot free will.

• • • •

If you have failed, therefore, to achieve certain objectives in life, it does not necessarily follow it is because you have dissipated your energies, or are handicapped by lack of conviction and not enough self-confidence. It may simply be, as I said in answering your earlier letter, that your ambitions outstrip your talents and energies.

• • • •

I urged upon you the importance of being honest with yourself, to the point of refraining from placing responsibility for a given failure on others' shoulders. On the other hand, I would not have you assume too much blame yourself. Most of us will always be able to see farther than we can reach—and that through no fault which we can correct in the course of our lifetime.

M. H.

Arms Problem To Be Studied

Vote League Will Present Control Proposals to Congress in Spring.

INTENSIVE study and analysis of the munitions control problem will be made by the membership of the National League of Women Voters in order to reach by April 1 conclusions as to the most effective measures for control of the traffic in munitions.

This, according to announcement yesterday by Miss Marguerite M. Wells, president, is the league's preparatory action in anticipation of proposals to be presented to Congress this spring. These will take the form of legislative recommendations from the Senate Munitions Investigating Committee and the special presidential committee, and an international treaty. State and local leagues have been asked to report to the National League headquarters here their conclusions on types of control, and desirability and practicability of government ownership of the industry in order that the "well-considered sentiment" of league membership may guide support or opposition to proposed legislation.

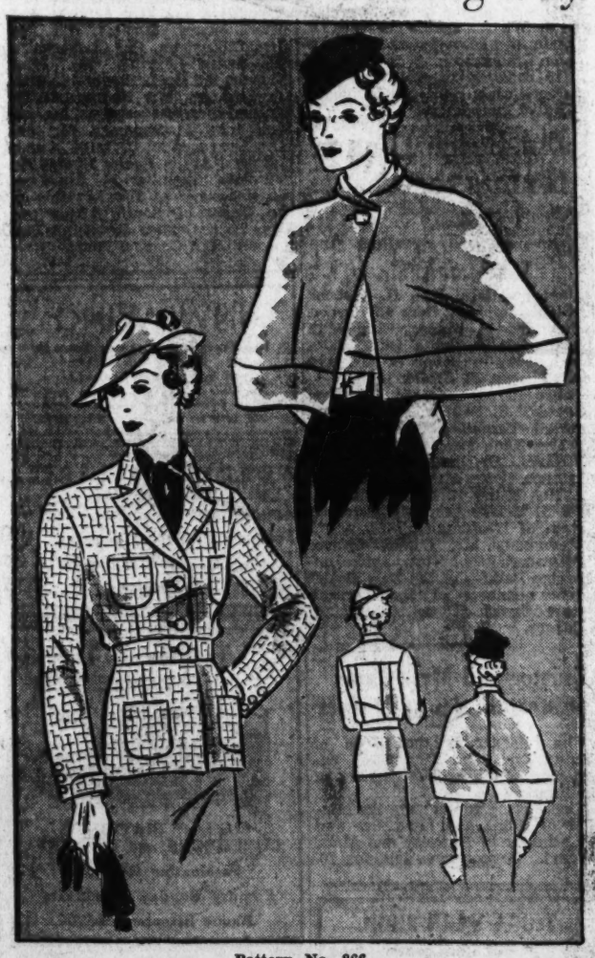
Cape and an Extra Jacket Make Small Wardrobe Go Long Way



Pattern No. 866.

HERE are two tricks to make a small wardrobe go a long, long way. A little cape, for example, will be both smart and practical. This new model, in size 18 (36), requires only 1½ yards of any 54-inch material, and it presents no sewing problem.

An extra jacket will double the usefulness of your spring suit. In a different color or weave, it makes two suits out of one—one matching, one contrasting. The yoke back of this model, with its double pleats, is new. In size 18 (36), this jacket requires 1⅞ yards of 54-inch fabric. Both patterns come in the same envelope, in sizes 14 to 42, and are accompanied by a large clear instruction chart.

Proof There's Magic Offered In Shoe Clinic

Footwear Troubles Fly, Old Becomes New—and Different.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

YOU MAY NOT believe in magic now, but you will after you've paid your first visit to a local shoe clinic. Here there's a group of magicians who have all the abracadabra of shoe magic at their finger tips. Any ills that beset a shoe they can banish with the wave of a wand. Or maybe it isn't a wand. You don't see them work, so you don't know what they do. But you do see the results and that's what matters. When you give them an old pair of shoes to fix over and then call for them and find you've a new pair—at least they look new—you'll know it's magic and you won't care whether it was done with a wand or not.

If your shoe is too long, they shorten it; if it is too short, they lengthen it; too narrow, they widen it, or too wide, they narrow it. They rebind shoes that gap, cut down vamps that cut, and build up "turned out" shoes that have lost their original shape and comfort.

But wait—that's not all. They can transform dingy and down-at-the-mouth-looking suedes into smooth leather shoes that look like kid, dye dark shoes light colors, and light shoes dark colors. Gold and silver slippers can be regilded so they're as gleaming as the day they were bought. Or they can be dyed, changed from evening slippers to street slippers. And, believe it or not, if you take them a quarter of a yard of material they will cover your shoes to match your gown!

But the magicians are very work-a-day, too. They come right down to earth and do all kinds of repair jobs, such as resoling, relasting and reshaping. And, tell your husband—or your brother—or your best beau—they're just as versatile with men's shoes. Furthermore, the cost of the work is amazingly reasonable.

No Excuse on Nails Now.

There should be no such thing as nails you're ashamed to own. Science has taken titan steps in the last few years in bringing all manner of fingernail aids to light. One of the most recent discoveries is a cream which does three things at one time. It removes the cuticle, clears and bleaches stains and supplies the and blemishes natural oils that are needed to prevent the nails from becoming dry and brittle. It may also be used with a soft brush to cleanse and whiten the hands and end the greasy feeling that follows dish-washing.

The nail cream is delightfully easy to work with. You simply take a little—ever and ever so little will do the job—and rub up a lather on the nails. Push back the cuticle working the lather into it. The cream removes the dead skin and leaves a smooth, soft line at the base of the nail. You also may apply a little under the nails to clean and whiten them. If you want to do a quick "manicaring" job, just put a little cream on your nail brush and rub briskly.

Puppy Feed.

You can make saving pennies, or nickels or dimes into a game that children like if you have a "Scottie" bank. These are little metal Scotties—red, green, ivory, or black—with a slit in the mouth for coins. Dropping loose change takes on the aspect of feeding the puppy and a child will adore giving him a penny for breakfast, and maybe three or four for dinner. The banks cost little—and they save a lot.

Chic Chapeaux.

Hat shopping loses its budget-breaking aspect when you visit the hat counter in a local store. Here you can find chic little softies, becoming turbans with scarfs to match, the ever-so-adaptable berets and dozens or other type hats—for as little as $1.

Just bear in mind, a little inexpensive hat on your head saves two expensive hats in your closet!

When it rains or snows you'll be glad for a little softie than can stand the wear and tear and still look smart.

If the color problem worries you, you'll find the answer here, for these little chapeaux come in pastels, bright shades or dull browns and blacks, in solids, or in plaids.

New Recipe for Tasty Pineapple Pie Uses Unsweetened Juice of the Fruit

The pineapple juice pie is the latest good news to pie lovers—first, a delicate crust, then a filling made of unsweetened canned pineapple juice and crushed pineapple, and last of all a covering of snowy meringue. Try it for the Sunday dinner dessert.

Delicious Flavor Imparted to Filling; Cover With Meringue.

By Dorothea Duncan.

HERE is the latest use for fruit juice and it is a mighty good one, too. Use pineapple juice, not the kind that is drained from the sweetened fruit, but the unsweetened canned juice, to make an unusually delicious pineapple juice pie. The pineapple flavored filling, combined with a delicate, flaky crust, and snowy meringue will make an enticing dessert for this week-end's Sunday dinner. Here is the recipe.

Pineapple Juice Pie.

3 tablespoons flour
3 tablespoons cornstarch
2 egg yolks
Grated rind of one-half orange
1 cup sugar
1¾ cups Hawaiian pineapple juice
1 lemon and grated rind
¾ cup crushed Hawaiian pineapple

Mix flour, cornstarch and sugar. Add the pineapple juice and bring to a boil. Cook in a double boiler until mixture is clear. (It will take from 30 to 40 minutes.) Pour over the beaten yolks, beating all the time, return to the double boiler, add the lemon juice, lemon and orange rind, grated, and crushed pineapple and cook until it thickens. It should be stirred all of the time that it is cooking. When cool, pour into a baked pie crust and cover with meringue. Use egg whites from the two yolks, beat until light and stiff, but not dry, add sugar gradually, two tablespoons for each egg white and continue beating until whites will stand in peaks. Pile lightly on filling and bake to a golden brown in a moderate oven (325 degrees F.).

Consomme julienne is a clear broth which has been made of veal and beef (lean), which has been simmered in water or half water and half chicken broth and flavored during the last part of cooking with sweet herbs, parsley, carrots, onion and celery. The clear broth is strained. To this, carrots, onions, celery and turnips are added. The vegetables are cut into shreds as thin as a match and cooked in clear water before being added to the consomme.

Suggested Menus for the Week-End; a Formula for Waffles.

Plain Waffles.

1½ cups sifted flour
½ teaspoon salt
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 cup milk
2 eggs
1 tablespoon shortening

Mix the flour, salt and baking powder, and sift; add the milk gradually, then the egg and yolks beaten until light, and the melted shortening. Lastly, add the beaten egg whites which are stiff, but still shiny. Be sure that your waffle iron has been preheated according to directions. If you use a waffle iron that is heated on the stove, be sure that both sides are hot and that it is well greased. After baking each waffle, let the iron heat one minute before putting batter in for the next one.

SHADOWS in PARADISE

By INEZ WALLACE

After many heartbreaking disappointments, Helen Burns attains a leading place in the Hollywood movie world. She is married to Jim Nelson, former cameraman, now an important director. But due to a misunderstanding, Jim has left her and institutes divorce proceedings. In the midst of that pathetic situation Helen learns that Winnie Green, rival for her husband's love, is going to star in a picture in France and that Jim will go with her to direct the production.

IF you're ever in a jam and can find someone who's in a worse one, that'll be good for you because it'll make you forget yourself. Something like that happened to me now, as Lawson said in a low tone, as though apologizing for thinking of himself—"This hits me, too, you know." His hands looked suddenly thin and old and I noticed for the first time that his gray hair was thinning at the temples and I could see through the transparency of his ears. Impulsively I reached over and patted his shoulder.

"Surely it hits you, Lawson—worse, in a way than it does me."

"Oh, I didn't mean that," he said quickly. "I realize that it gets you on two counts. We'll do another big picture together, girlie — only it won't be 'Maid of Lyons.'"

A sudden, uncontrollable fury swept over me as the meaning of it all came home. "They've done this for spite," I cried resentfully.

Bothered by Doubts.

"No, Helen, I don't think so. We're disappointed but let's try not to be bitter. Neither a star nor director can be appointed to a production without the head of this company knowing about it. I think this came right out of the executive office. As I told you, before we started for the mountains on that awful trip, I had them sold on you as the star. There was plenty for Green to do here that wouldn't fit you. But when an inkling of what happened to you leaked out and then Jim left you—well, the front office is awful fussy about this morality business. With thousands tied up in you stars, they have to be—and they just couldn't risk it. That's what happened. We may as well face it."

"But Lawson, you know me so well. You're the only director I've ever worked for, on big stuff, I mean. Why didn't you go up and tell them it wasn't true?" Then, as realization dawned on me, "Or have you lost faith in me, too? I thought maybe from what you said that night——"

Appearances Count.

"Listen, Helen, I believe in you like I believe in heaven—and I went right in there and told them so. They have all the confidence in the world in you, too—but you see that is not the point. In this business it's not what you did, but what it looks as though you did, that counts. If the papers of the country break into headlines just as this picture goes into production—well, you can't imagine an immoral Maid of Lyons, can you?"

"I see it, Lawson," I said. "Thanks for putting me straight. Besides, considering the way it must look, I think it's darn decent of the company to keep me on. I hope you'll tell them so."

"That's the spirit. Don't let this affect your work. Hurry now, and get made up. That crew waiting out there will think we've died."

Maybe it was the heat. The rugged mountain clothes used on interiors of "The Canyon of Gold," combined with the arcs and lights, made it insufferably hot on the set. When I went to remove my make-up, my dressing room was going around in a circle—or I was—I couldn't tell which. I was just tired out, I guessed. No wonder. I went home and had some tea and toast in bed and by 9 o'clock, when Vera dropped in unexpectedly, I was almost myself again.

Gribson Was Dead.

She came right up, unannounced, and I knew the minute I caught sight of her that something had happened. First thing I thought of was Jim. "Vera," I began, "is it Jim?"

"No, it isn't. Haven't you seen the papers?"

"No. I was so tired I told Florette not to bother. She took them to her room, I guess. What's happened?"

"Gribson cracked up this afternoon in a plane just out of Salt Lake and was killed instantly."

"Oh, Vera; how awful! What'll you do?"

"Me? Oh, I don't know. A firm of architects in Frisco would take me tomorrow. So don't worry. Right now I'm on my way to town to make some arrangements. I was going to take you with me, but I guess not—you look pretty comfortable where you are."

Could Not Work.

"I'm going right to sleep. I have to be on the set at 9 o'clock and must look rested."

But when morning came, I felt terrible. Try as I would, I could hardly get dressed and at 8:30 I called Lawson at his hotel to tell him I couldn't go to the studio.

"Can you possibly shoot anything other than my scenes today?" I asked when I got him on the wire. "I hate to let you down, but really, I'd be no good to you. You ought to see me. I look a 100. I just feel as though I could stay in bed forever."

"That's all right, child," he agreed promptly, "all except the staying in bed. I've been fearing a nervous breakdown after all you've been through so I'll tell you what we'll do. I'll excuse you today with the understanding that you see your doctor before tonight. Is it a bargain?"

"Oh, all right—though all I need is rest. But I'll go see him if it'll ease your mind."

Another Dilemma.

When I came out of the doctor's office that afternoon I was facing a new and appalling problem. Calamities, it seems, happen to me in threes. Winnie Green had taken the big role I had been promised by the studio. Also, she had taken my husband. And now I was going to have a baby, who would be without a father, since Jim was divorcing me.

Outside of that, everything was just dandy!

"Listen, Dr. Britton, and try to understand. I can't have this baby. I wouldn't know what to do with it if I did have it. Mr. Nelson and I have just separated and are getting a divorce—that is, he is going to. What would I do with a baby?"

"I find your attitude a bit unreasonable," Dr. Britton said. "You can well afford to care for this child and it will be grand company for you. You go home now and think it over. I'm sure you'll see the light."

But I didn't go straight home. Instead, I drove around by way of Vera's bungalow. When I saw her sorting papers on her little patio I realized how lucky I was to locate her always in times of trouble—like a port in a storm. She looked tired from the strain of the last few hours and I felt guilty adding my troubles to those she already had. But this couldn't wait. I'd have to know. And if I decided to go through with it, very soon I'd have to tell Lawson.

Vera Was Practical.

Sitting there on her wicker divan, I poured myself some lemonade—needed it, too. But in an effort to be polite, I didn't mention my trouble immediately. I was surprised to find her in such a businesslike mood and said so.

"Why not?" she asked surprised. "I never idealized Gribson during his life you know, so why should I be hypocritical now that he's gone? But tell me what you're doing around here in the middle of the afternoon. Don't they ever work at that studio?"

"Yes, they work. But I had to go to the doctor."

"I thought you looked kinda peeked last night. Nothing serious?"

"Not very. I'm expecting an addition to my shattered family."

"Jumpin' Joseph!"

CULBERTSON on BRIDGE

1329.

Laws for Everyone.

Many persons have the peculiar idea that the laws of contract bridge are only for experts. This is absurd. The laws which have been adopted and used by the leading bridge clubs of the United States, and other countries, are for everyone who plays the game whether he be a beginner or a national champion. Nobody is exempt.

The penalty for a revoke is just as much a part of the game as the point value of two hearts bid and made. If any player makes a bid out of turn and a penalty is applicable, the enforcement of such penality is part of the game. It does not imply personal punishment. To insist upon a penalty whether you must pay it youself or exact it from an opponent is playing the game correctly, according to the rules.

Unbiddable, But Made.

North, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

North	East	South	West
1◇	Pass	1♠	Pass
4♠(1)	Pass	Pass(2)	Pass

The Culbertson system of slam bidding enables players to reach most makable slams. Some slams, however, can not be bid because their making depends upon a lot of fortunate accidents in the lay of the cards. To this group belongs today's hand on which, through careful play, declarer made an entirely unbiddable slam.

1—A strong bid when made by a player who has opened the bidding himself. Inherently, it is a mild slam try.

2—With very nearly a minimum takeout and no fit in the diamond suit, South sees no great prospect of more than game.

The Play.

West opened the King of clubs, which was taken by dummy's Ace. Declarer decided that there was plenty of time to set up the diamond suit and tackled the trump suit first. Playing a hunch, he led the Queen of spades with magnificent results. The Jack of spades was picked up by the Queen, which was allowed to hold and declarer next finessed the nine. Two high diamonds and a diamond ruff produced another fortunate result, the suit breaking 3-3. It was now simplicity itslef to lay down the Ace of trumps, ruff a club and run dummy's three diamonds, declarer discarding his remaining three losers. The Ace of hearts and a trump took the last two tricks.

Although seven was made through the declarer's carefree gymnastics, I doubt if even six should be bid. A heart opening followed by a more normal method of tackling the trumps will see the declarer making only five-odd.

Child Whose Health Is Guarded Misses Serious Ills in Later Life

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

IN these days of so much public health education, even though some of it may be very good or very sound, there can not fail to be aroused a consciousness that health is the most valuable asset that man possesses.

We must begin by safeguarding health at its source—childhood. Stubbornness, ignorance, or carelessness on the part of parents may pave the way for lifelong physical handicaps. Some parents do not believe in the removal of diseased tonsils even though their children suffer from repeated attacks of tonsillitis followed by rheumatic infections. We often hear it said: "I want to toughen my children. I give them little attention when they are ill as I want to make them self-reliant; they must wait on one another." Those who survive this heartless regime may emerge with kidney or heart damage. If the child is to survive and remain in good health far more attention and care must be directed toward every minor illness.

We can not subscribe to the oft-expressed sentiment: "My children will have such-and-such a disease anyway, why not let them have it now?" Any disease, no matter how mild, may be attended with serious complications and the rule must be: "Avoid disease of every kind and of every character.

It is often difficult to convince a father or mother that an attack of influenza, if not properly managed, may permanently damage the heart or the kidneys.

Heinz makes delicious soups hard to make at home

CREAM OF MUSHROOM SOUP takes skill and care in the making. Mushrooms must be carefully selected, picked over one by one, washed very clean, then chopped fine. Seasonings must be the finest and carefully measured. Cream must be sweet and rich, and the soup must be cooked watchfully at right heat and to the very minute. All these things Heinz does, and so Heinz Cream of Mushroom Soup is a rare and excellent treat—a perfect "party" soup. It is a whole soup, all there, and because the mushrooms are brewed right into the cream the superb flavor permeates every spoonful . . . Serve Heinz Cream of Mushroom Soup today.

NOODLE SOUP WITH CHICKEN takes hours to make. The broth must be slowly simmered down till it is rich and redolent with flavor. Tender chicken, chopped in dainty bits, must be used generously. And fine, thin-cut noodles, cooked until delicately tender. This is the way good home-cooks make noodle soup—and the way Heinz makes it. Heinz Noodle Soup with chicken comes to you all ready to serve, ready to awaken the family's appetites, delight them and leave them comforted and satisfied . . . Keep it on hand as a main dish for lunches, and as a robust starter for dinner.

Know-Your-City Campaign Will Fit Boys to Guide Visitors.

District commissioners from the 19 sections of the District of Columbia Council, meeting at the home of Commissioner Dr. Camp Stanley Monday evening, took up the question of the National Jamboree to be held in Washington August 21 to 30 of this year. It was pointed out that the most important part of the local council's participation would be the provision of 1,000 Scouts to man the information booths, serve as special police, and act as guides for the visiting Scouts. To be effective in these capacities, it was further shown Scouts must have a complete and thorough knowledge of Washington and its interesting points. Therefore, the first step, it was agreed, would be to set up a training course in knowledge of Washington. It was agreed to enlist the services of men active in Washington affairs to assist in this training and to ask the Eagle Scout Association of the District Council to take the responsibility for enlisting and training 1,000 older Scouts.

The Eagle Scout Association, under President Richard Miller and Adviser George G. Whitney, met Tuesday and after discussing the challenge given them by the Board of Commissioners, agreed to get behind the "Know Your City Campaign." A committee was appointed composed of Harold Jeans and Joe Morgan and Scouts Smalling, Ellinger, Amante and Kimball, who will outline the action to be taken and report at the next meeting.

Field Trip Planned.

The training course which was agreed upon for the "Know Your City Campaign" will include five indoor sessions and one field trip, and the first section is expected to get under way in March. The course includes three phases of knowledge of Washington:

First, where things are in Washington; second, what things are in Washington; third, human interest stories about things in Washington.

The Scouters' Story League of Washington, which met Tuesday evening, February 19, also was challenged to assist in the "Know-Your-City Campaign" and immediately started work on their duties, which will include the discovery of human interest stories about the interesting points in and around Washington. These stories will then be taught to the 1,000 Scouts who will act as guides.

The men who are taking the Scout training course at the Wilson Teachers College left Thursday evening for a two-day trip to Camp Roosevelt on the Chesapeake Bay.

Several training courses for leadership in scouting are now in operation or scheduled. The elements course has been meeting Monday evenings at the training center. Another elements course with a membership of about 25 men started last Tuesday evening at Fairfax, Va., and will continue for the next five Tuesdays.

Story League Offers Course.

The Scouters Story League announced a specialization course in story telling to be held Tuesday evenings in April.

An elements course for the six division Scouters is also scheduled to begin Thursday evening, March 14, at the training center, 1018 Vermont avenue.

Several hundred Scouts of Washington and vicinity are leaving the Zero Mile Stone at 10:30 a. m. today in buses for the annual Scout pilgrimage to Mount Vernon. Each year at this time the Scouts of the City of Washington place a wreath on the tomb of Washington in the name of the Boy Scouts of all America.

Scouts interested in fencing are invited to an exhibition at the Y. M. C. A., Eighteenth and G streets, tonight at 8:15 under the direction of Maj. E. L. Dyer.

The quarterly court of awards will be held at the Powell Junior High School Saturday evening, March 23. At this time awards will be made to Scouts reaching Star, Life and Eagle ranks during the past three months; to Scouters who have qualified for training certificates, and to troops which have earned the certificates of better appearance. Other miscellaneous awards will also be made. The next court of honor in Washington will be held Saturday, March 2, at Christ Church, 620 G street southeast.

Itinerary of Hikers Includes Visit to Colvin Run Village

Community Boasts Grist Mill Which Is Still in Operation.

By Robert Shosteck.

The 7-mile hike up Difficult Run, planned for Sunday by the Wanderbirds Hiking Club, includes a visit to Colvin Run Village, a picturesque community which boasts of the only grist mill now believed to be in operation in this part of the country. The return route lies along Captain Hickory Run, along which may be seen the ruins of two other grist mills which ceased operation several decades ago.

Club members and readers of The Post planning to go on this trip will meet in front of The Post Building at 10 a. m. Buses will take the hikers to Elkins, Va., a crossroads hamlet about one-half mile beyond Difficult Run bridge on the Leesburg road. The round-trip fare will be 50 cents and reservations must be made in advance at Nat. 4200. It is advisable to carry lunch and a cup for coffee.

The trail from Elkins Station rambles for over a mile through pine woods, descending to Captain Hickory Run at its junction with Difficult Run. The trail follows the right bank of Hickory Run for about a mile, passing the ruins of an old grist mill. Some of the rusted machinery is still in place. Crossing the stream, the route is along a trail uphill to a dirt road which leads to the county road to Colvin Run Village.

Several old colonial homes are to be seen here as well as the grist mill which is still in operation. Nearby is the millrace and the dam across the stream. This region is very scenic and rocky and the trail is open and fairly easy going. The path follows the left bank of Difficult Run for nearly 2 miles through meadows, woods, a rocky gorge and past the ruins of another grist mill. A number of spring flowers, including hepatica and spicebush, possibly arbutus, will be seen along the route.

About a half mile beyond a wooden bridge the trail turns left up a small stream and thence along a dirt road near Fairview Station. Elkins is but a short distance from here. A campfire will be built in the woods nearby and coffee served to the hikers. The buses will return to the city by 6:30 p. m.

The schedule of spring trips will be distributed Sunday. Club emblems will also be available to those who have not yet received one.

Autoist Found Guilty in Death Of Capital Boy

Lester E. Athey, Virginia, Waiting Sentence for Manslaughter.

Lester E. Athey, of Alexandria, Va., was convicted of manslaughter in the District Supreme Court yesterday. He was remanded to the District Jail by Justice James M. Proctor to await sentence next week.

The charge against Athey was that he drove an automobile while intoxicated at a rapid rate of speed and ran down and fatally injured Floyd C. Jackson, 12 years old, November 13.

In his defense, Athey, represented by Attorney Denny Hughes, said that he drove his automobile away from the curb to escape hitting another machine. He denied he was intoxicated, but under questioning by Justice Proctor he admitted having a few glasses of beer and taking a drink of hard liquor.

Assistant United States Attorney Samuel F. Beach, prosecuting the case, charged that Athey was driving 40 miles an hour when his automobile struck the boy and hurled him several feet. He pointed out that even after the mishap, Athey had been pursued by another car out Bladensburg road at an excessive speed.

The defendant gained some notoriety Wednesday when he appeared in court to stand trial only to have Mr. Beach order him held because he was reportedly too intoxicated to stand trial. In court yesterday, four men and one woman, prospective jurors, were left off the jury when they admitted they had read stories telling of Athey's alleged intoxication.

The penalty for manslaughter is a maximum of 15 years, with no minimum provided by law.

Man Is Acquitted In Perjury Case

District Court Quickly Absolves Defendant.

A jury in the District Supreme Court yesterday returned a verdict of not guilty for Roy Hugh Jarvis, of Morgantown, W. Va., tried on a charge of perjury.

Jarvis, according to Assistant United States Attorney Irvin Goldstein, swore in a civil proceedings that a conditional bill of sale for an automobile did not bear his signature. He was charged with knowingly swearing falsely.

Attorneys Nugent Dodds and Neil Burkinshaw contended Jarvis could have been honestly incorrect in denying the contract had been signed by him. A jury in Justice Jesse C. Adkins' court deliberated only a few minutes before absolving Jarvis.

Assessment Fight Looms In Maryland

Section Lines Drawn on Proposed Delay in Revaluation.

Split Among Counties Develops in Senate and Association.

By Laurance F. Stuntz
(Staff Correspondent of The Post).

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 21.—Maryland counties formed battle lines today as the first sectional fight of the session developed simultaneously in the Senate and at a meeting of the County Commissioners Association on the question of postponing this year's reassessment of property until 1937.

Generally, the western counties seemed to favor a reassessment this year. Southern Maryland and most Eastern Shore counties are against it. But Senator Milton L. Veasey, who represents the Eastern Shore County of Worcester, is leading the fight against postponing the reassessment.

The battle lines were drawn in the Senate on a favorable report on a bill to put off the assessment. Trying to delay a vote on the report, Senator Veasey substituted a motion to make the balloting a special order of business next week. This motion was lost, 17 to 10. The favorable report was adopted, 21 to 6.

Senators who supported Senator Veasey's motion and thereby hinted they would favor reassessment this year, included Clifford Friend (Republican), Garrett; Robert B. Kimble (Republican), Allegany; Harry W. LeGore (Republican), Frederick; O. Straughn Lloyd (Republican), Wicomico, and Ernest W. Miller (Republican), Washington. Three Democratic senators also joined the Veasey ranks.

Senators Kimble and Lloyd deserted those who favored delay on the vote to approve the favorable report.

Eighteen counties were represented at the meeting of the county commissioners association, held here today. Twelve of these wanted to postpone the reassessment, while the other six wanted property revalued this year.

Vote By Counties.

The commissioners' vote was: For reassessment this year, Allegany, Caroline, Frederick, Montgomery, Washington and Howard; against reassessment this year, Anne Arundel, Calvert, Wicomico, St. Marys, Baltimore, Cecil, Carroll, Dorchester, Kent, Queen Anne, Harford and Talbot. Counties not represented were Charles, Prince Georges, Somerset, Worcester and Garrett.

Senator Veasey opened the fight in the Senate on the committee report by pointing out a reduction of 25 per cent in the assessed value of county property would cut the State tax bill by $620,000. This burden, now borne by real estate, could be shifted to beer, income, or sales taxes.

Senator J. Allan Coad, Democratic floor leader, answered that all the direct State tax revenue now goes for debt service on the State bonds. Furthermore, a reassessment would mean practically a new budget, which could not be made up until the new assessment is completed, he stated.

Senator Harold E. Cobourn (Democrat), Cecil, author of the bill, said the counties would gain nothing by the reassessment, but would lose the cost of making it. Senator Veasey reported Cecil County would lower its State tax payment by $88,000. This is not a saving, because the State tax rate would be increased to make up for it, Senator Cobourn replied.

Senator Prescott (Democrat), of Montgomery, told Senator Veasey his figures were wrong—that Cecil County would save only $8,800 a year. He said the reassessment, which everybody agrees will be lower, might have a bad effect on the market for Maryland bonds.

Supporting the Veasey stand, Senator Miller declared the people of Washington County want a reassessment with the lower direct tax revenue to be made up by heavier taxes on sportsmen and gamblers.

Option Move Lost.

Edward Peter, of Rockville, counsel to the Montgomery County commissioners, proposed at the commissioners' association meeting that the reassessment be made optional with the counties. The motion was lost.

The association supported a motion to put the county share of gas tax funds under control of the county boards by a vote of 16 to 1. Only Kent County favored a continuation of the present arrangement, by which the State roads commission spends the money allotted to county roads. Dorchester County did not vote. All 18 counties voted in favor of a proposal they keep the fines levied for violation of motor vehicle laws, money which now goes to the State. Nine counties favored a full-time assessor to be appointed by and responsible to the county commissioners, while three counties were against it and six did not vote.

After brief sessions in both Houses, the members adjourned until tomorrow and devoted themselves to committee hearings. William A. Codd, chief auditor for the State roads commission, told the House ways and means committee that Gov. Harry W. Nice will give the commission $4,900,000 more in his supplemental budget. The provision for a special assistant attorney general also will be restored in the supplemental budget, Codd said. Provision for this post was not made in the original budget.

The additional funds for the commission will come from the $10,000,000 bond issue on which both parties are agreed, Codd said. The commission will get $2,040,000 in 1936 and $1,860,000 in 1937. The $123,000 cut from road employes salaries in the original budget will be returned, but not to pay salaries, Codd revealed.

Four minor Washington County bills were among the new grist fed into the legislative mill today. Others were measures increasing the pay of the Calvert County commissioners and authorizing a tax for fire protection in Colmar Manor.

Bond for Sheriff.

One of the Washington bills would bond the county sheriff for $10,000. Another would direct the county treasurer to collect taxes levied on autos by incorporated towns in the county. Hagerstown now has this arrangement and the new bill would extend it to all towns. Two acres of State land now used for a forest preserve, a part of the old Fort Frederick farm, would be sold to the Evangelical Church of Mount Carmel for cemetery purposes by the terms of a third bill. A fourth would authorize the town of Boonsboro to pay $100 per year to the library there.

Colmar Manor will be permitted to levy a tax of up to 10 cents on $100 to pay for fire protection under the bill introduced by Delegate John S. White (Democrat), Prince Georges. The bill does not direct to which of the nearby volunteer companies the money shall be paid.

The annual pay of the Calvert County commissioners would be increased from $400 to $600 under another measure. No allowance is made in this for traveling or other expenses.

The Senate received a bill to repeal the "Jim Crow" laws, providing for separate seating of white and colored passengers on public vehicles. This measure is one of those hardy proposals which appear at each session, but never yet have gotten out of committee.

500-Gallon Still Seized, 4 Held In Federal Raid

4,000 Pounds of Sugar Confiscated by Agents Near Westminster.

Westminster, Md., Feb. 21 (Spl.). One of the largest stills ever found in Maryland was demolished by Federal agents here today after a raid last night in which four men were arrested. Inspection revealed the still capable of turning out 500 gallons of liquor a day.

The men, operating the still full blast when surprised by the agents, gave their names simply as Anderson, Stein, Miller and Bruge. Anderson and Bruge are reported to be from Asbury Park, N. J., while Stein and Miller gave Baltimore addresses.

The extensive equipment, which included a 65 horsepower boiler, was located on a farm belonging to Lionel Lockhard. Agents report that the vats were capable of preparing 25,000 gallons. When discovered by agents 6,500 gallons were being fermented, they said. Sugar weighing 4,500 pounds also was confiscated.

Maryland Rebuilding Washington Monument

Middletown, Md., Feb. 21 (Spl.). Work on reconstruction of the original Washington monument on South Mountain, five miles west of Middletown, which was halted because of bad weather, was resumed yesterday by CCC boys from the base camp at Fort Frederick. This is the first monument ever erected to the memory of Washington in the United States.

The boys are finishing the mile of road to the monument site. The surfacing is now under way, as grading is completed. The monument has been restored to a height of 15 feet, with 15 more feet to complete. The entire project probably will be finished by some time this summer and turned over to the Federal Government as a military park.

'Cherry Tree Incident' to Be Reenacted at 'Exact Spot.'

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—The legend of George Washington and the cherry tree, known and taught in nearly every public school in America and in England, will be revived here tomorrow afternoon when a cherry tree from the famous orchards of Michigan will be planted by George Steptoe Washington, of Philadelphia, as nearly as possible in the exact spot where legend says the boy George took his father's hatchet and chopped down the young cherry tree on the Washington farm across the river from this city.

The exercises, first ever to be held on the George Washington boyhood farm, will feature the celebration of the 203d birthday anniversary of the first President in Virginia. Assisting in planting the tree will be Miss Anna Maeyork, of Traverse City, Mich, the 1934 Michigan cherry queen.

Speeches will be made by former Mayor Jere M. H. Willis, C. O'Conor Goolrick and Mayor R. J. Payne. Representative Albert J. Engel (Republican), Michigan, and other prominent persons are expected to attend. A marker signifying the placing of the tree will be unveiled by Mrs. J. B. Colbert.

At Wakefield, the nearby birthplace of Washington, the restored house in which he was born will be open to the public throughout the day, and visitors will be received by members of the group instrumental in the restoration of Wakefield, in colonial costume. The birthplace now is known as the George Washington Birthplace National Monument.

The day is a holiday in banking, school and government circles.

School Heads Honor Dr. Zook At Convocation

Education Leader Speaks at Washington College Meeting.

Chestertown, Md., Feb. 21 (AP). Following his address at the annual midwinter convocation of Washington College today, Dr. George F. Zook, director of the American Council on Education and former United States Commissioner of Education, was guest at a reception given in Reid Hall.

Twenty-five school superintendents and principals of the Eastern Shore of Maryland and of Delaware attended the reception and the luncheon which was served later in the college dining hall.

The assembly at which Dr. Zook spoke, also was for the celebration of Washington's birthday. Dr. Gilbert W. Mead, president of the college, spoke briefly on George Washington's relation to the college. The first President of the United States was a member of the school's first board of governors.

A processional of all the faculty members in academic robes and distinguished guests opened the celebration in William Smith Hall. The Rev. William Litsinger, pastor of Christ Methodist Protestant Church, delivered the invocation.

Dr. Zook spoke of the condition of the youths of the farm, asserting that approximately 3,000,000 young people now on American farms would have moved to cities and towns if the depression had not intervened.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Dr. Andrew J. Lemaster, 78, nestor of Berkeley County physicians, churchman whose efforts were credited with establishing a Presbyterian Church near his home, died at his home at Bedington yesterday of a heart attack. He had been in ill health a year.

He maintained his practice much as usual until the day before death. An accident to a son, William, Monday, was said by family members to have been a factor in his death. The son was not seriously hurt.

Dr. Lemaster was a son of the late Jacob and Mary Ellen Strode Lemaster, of Berkeley County. He was a member of the first collegiate class at Shepherd College, Shepherdstown, W. Va. After graduation he studied medicine at the University of Maryland, Baltimore, and began practice in this country in 1879 a month after graduation from medical school.

Bethany Chapel near his home, was founded by him and a few fellow Presbyterians in 1908. He had been its Sunday school superintendent since the chapel was started, although retaining church membership and eldership in the parent Presbyterian Church at Spring Mills.

He was a Mason and active member of Eastern Panhandle Medical Association.

His wife and a son survive. Services will be conducted Saturday from Spring Mills Presbyterian Church with burial in the cemetery adjoining.

Wicomico's Products Bring Premium Prices

Salisbury, Md., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Premium prices for Wicomico County sweet potatoes and cantaloupes in New York markets last season were emphasized in the annual report of J. P. Brown, agent of the University of Maryland Extension Service, made public today. He said Maryland "sweets," developed by the Maryland Experimant Station and introduced by him into this county, had proved the most popular variety sold in New York last year. Acreage was cut last season, and adverse weather also affected the yield, he said. High prices were paid for cantaloupes, due partly to the new State law governing that product. Though a 5 per cent decline in cantalope production was noted in the report, tomatoes increased by 50 cent and lima beans increased 10 per cent.

Buck, a Democrat, today replied to Andrews' action contesting the election by offering two rebuttal witnesses at a hearing before Magistrate Drennen. Andrews, Republican, who was defeated for re-election by one vote last November, offered his testimony Thursday.

To Andrews' charge that ballots were taken out of the booth for voters to mark in automobiles, Miss Grace Katherine Lytle, of Providence, and William J. Fenton, of Elkton, said they were unable to get out of their cars because of leg injuries.

Andrews instituted his action on allegtaions of irregularities at the polls. After the hearing, Magistrate Drennen ordered the testimony sent Speaker Emanuel Gorfine.

Kidnap 'Plot' Not a Hoax, Girl Insists

15-Year-Old Caroline Grants Interview, Evades Queries.

Father Has 'Good Idea' Who Men Were, He Tells Officers.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 21 (AP). To bedside interviewers this afternoon 15-year-old Caroline Musante gave answers which left veiled in mystery many of the facts surrounding her third disappearance in as many years which she and her family call a kidnaping, but which Stafford County officers still call a "hoax."

Caroline said "several men" took her away from her home early Wednesday morning when she went to the garden to empty an ash box, held her captive for 20 hours and then left her tied to a tree where her father found her early this morning.

The girl's mother directed the interview, refusing to allow her to answer a number of questions. Her father, who also was present, said he had "a good idea" who abducted his daughter and would "solve the mystery" without police aid.

Several men, who approached before she saw them, overpowered her in the garden, Caroline said, and put her in an automobile, driving some distance northward on the Richmond-Washington highway during the day and returning last night to the vicinity of her home, where they tied her to the tree in woods a half-mile from her house.

She said they were not the same men who kidnaped her last year and the year before last, but were strangers. They did not mistreat her, she said, "but I wasn't treated good."

Mr. Musante said he acted on "a hunch and outside information" in locating his daughter this morning.

Although according to her account Caroline was left tied to the tree for about eight hours wearing no coat or sweater over her thin dress, she did not seem to have a cold or exhibit other ill effects this afternoon, although her parents were keeping her in bed.

Pilgrim's Club Plans to 'Treat' U. S. Employes

Omits Cover Charge Once Each Week for Various Departments.

By Kay Ware.

Pilgrim's Club gives the Government a boost and dedicates its nights to the employes' entertainment. To this effect: The employes, upon identification, will be admitted, minus cover charge, on their particular night.

Here's the line-up.

Monday—Agriculture and Justice.
Tuesday—Navy and Interior.
Wednesday—State and Commerce.
Thursday—Postoffice and War.
Friday—Treasury and Labor.

So, an Agriculture employe may come free to the Pilgrim's Club on Monday; any other night he must pay the cover. Bring your identification cards please, so there will be no difficulty.

The present show features Al Winer and his eight-piece orchestra. Beth Miller, Radio City singer, and Tommy Suiters, acting as m. c. and entertainer.

Hurry up on the "Fare Thee Well, Annabelle" parodies. You'll remember that the winner gets free tickets to Rudy Vallee's picture, "Sweet Music," and supper at Heigh-Ho. The winner will be announced in this column next Wednesday, so get your entries in by Monday night at the latest. Send to the editor or Pete Macias, Heigh-Ho Club.

Marty Rubin has been singing it for all he's worth just so you can become familiar with the tune. And if you hear the tune, it'll haunt you for days. You hum it in your sleep, whistle it over your breakfast coffee, sing it aloud at your work. It's that catching.

Next week's dance team is Wesley Adams and Lisa. More of them later.

Johnny Slaughter added a new note to the Bamboo room. Rather, several new notes in the form of a piano team. They play special choruses with the band, and oblige with request numbers from Bamboo-ites. Ernestine Gardner and Fenton Froom have been going to town with selections from "Love in Bloom." Nice singers, those two.

Apologies to the Shoreham. They explain that their special Washington's Birthday celebration is going on all this week; we thought they planned extra entertainment only for tonight.

The weekly show is out of the ordinary, featuring two fine dance teams, De Angelo and Porter, smart ballroom duo, and Faye and Wellington, with collegiate numbers. In addition, Conchita Moreno, an exotic Mexican lass, shows you a tango flamingo, in which she wears red velvet and clicks castanets.

Talbert Haslett, M. C. and baritone, scores with "Old Man River," "That's Why Darkies Were Born," and others. Griffo, the man of many noises, Barnee and boys complete the bill.

Maryland Club Gardens knew a good performer when they heard one, and now Washingtonians are becoming more and more interested in the French pianist-singer, Charel de Thomee. His repertoire is aimed to please almost any taste—a bit of the classics for the serious musicians, a lighter touch for those who want musical relaxation.

Also featured at Club l'Hiver is Ginger Dewlow, who acts as mistress of ceremonies and impersonates; Charles Mayer, barytone, and Fran Trapp with accordion solos.

Madrillon's line-up includes Berry Lou, elastic little acrobatic dancer, and Scott and Douglas, who catch a little of her technique and do acrobatics in a carioca. Ray Donahue believes he'll be changing his nationality pretty soon, as the "Isle of Capri" is one song he has to sing and sing and sing. All to please patrons, of course. Leon Brusiloff is still looking for an accordion and a man to play it. Leon says he just wants a good player; the accordionists think he's fussy. May the best musician win!

Mme. Pauline Achmatova, blonde vision of the Russian Club Troika floor shows, has an unusual background and varied accomplishments. A grandniece of Sienkevich, famous Polish author, Mme. Achmatova's family have been artists for generations.

She played with the Moscow Art Theater, in Broadway successes, some musical and some straight drama. She played in "Grand Hotel" and the lead in "Clear All Wires."

Now, with her Gypsy Trio, Mme. Achmatova tours the cabarets, a form of work which she prefers to everything but production.

Incidentally, she is an authority on Russian and Gypsy literature, songs and drama, and is responsible, with her partners, for many of the unusual skits which Club Troika has presented this year.

Mme. Achmatova's partners, Vyacheslaw Momonoff and Geize Balabano, have careers quite as impressive as her's. Momonoff is a grand opera singer of considerable reputation. Balabano is a member of that accordian playing family recently seen in local vaudeville.

A buffet supper will be served at the next meeting of the society at the home of the president, Miss Adkins, on March 13.

Talk of the Town

Miami Beach, Feb. 21.

The Yacht Club Boys, headlining with Veloz and Yolanda at Ira's, are telling the best of the race track stories in circulation. It is the story of the two tired business men who went to the race track for an afternoon of relaxation.

On a hunch, they picked a horse in the first race and were about to lay a small bet when a racing tout approached them: "Bet on this one," he said, with authority, pointing to a name on the program. "He can't lose." So they discarded their own selection, played the tout's tip and went up to the grandstand to watch the race. The horse they had selected on a hunch won and the tout's horse finished last.

Much upset, they went downstairs again to bet on the second race. Again they picked a horse, and again the race track tout talked so convincingly of another horse that they took his advice. As in the first race, their selection won and now they were enraged. "Let's stay away from that tout," argued one of them. "We'll sit up here, make our own selections and not go near him, because he is a high-pressure fellow." His friend agreed, but suggested that he first go downstairs and buy some cigars.

In a few minutes, he reappeared with a bag of popcorn. "But, Joe," said his pal, "I told you to get me some cigars, and you've brought back a bag of popcorn." Joe looked unhappily at him and nodded, "I met that damn tout again," he moaned, "and he talked me out of the cigars."

Ritz Brothers, three insane comics, have been the sensation of the winter season here. They clicked first at the Fleetwood Roof, and then clicked again when they joined Helen Morgan and a class show at the Deauville.

They worked for a long time around Broadway after leaving Newark, this trio, but never quite clicked. For some reason or other they reached top form during in the Florida season, and the reason for their spectacular success, I think, was the liberal purchase of new material.

Zaniest of the three Ritz Brothers is Harry Ritz, who must be considered one of the country's top-flight comics on the basis of his work here. He has the same natural instinct for the stage that Jim Barton possesses in such abundance. In such a place as the Hollywood Restaurant in New York, or the Paradise, this trio would be dynamite.

A group of Northern crackpots, sitting about the beach and vainly searching the mackerel sky for a reluctant sun, whiled away the chilly hours by composing telegrams to Jack Dempsey, on the opening of his restaurant in New York.

One suggestion was, "Dear Jack: Now you're really going to hit below the belt" . . . Another was, "Come out of the kitchen and fight like a man" . . . A third proposal read, "The object of your confections can change our complexions from red to pasty white" . . . Still another was, "Dear Champ: You undoubtedly took pains, but the customers got them."

None of these wires were sent to Dempsey. After all, you can afford to be brave when you're 1,300 miles removed from his left hook.

There has been much talk about race track crookedness, particularly the alleged practice of horse owners whispering sinister instructions to their jockeys just before a race. Yesterday, I asked Jockey Sam Renick, one of the better midgets at Hialeah, to tell me the most unusual riding instructions he'd ever received.

"It was my first race," recalled Renick. "Bob Smith, the trainer of the horse, motioned to me and said, 'Listen Jock, get this horse away from the barrier fast and come back soon.'"

We tell time down here, not by clocks or calendars, but by the methodical arrival of Dick Merrill in our midst. He is the crack pilot on the air line that operates between Newark and Miami, a quiet, reserved little fellow who has flown 2,000,000 miles. He left us on the beach about 6 o'clock yesterday afternoon to fly his ship back to New York. On Thursday, he will be back with us again. He rarely talks of his flights. Back and forth he wings in the big Douglas, maintaining a clocklike schedule of eight hours.

I've always been a trifle leery of airplanes, but watching him come and go, quietly and casually, your fear of the air gradually disappears. He makes high adventure appear as commonplace as a motorman's glove.

Jack Waldron, the clown, continues to be the most amusing of the ad lib comics of the town. It was at a dog track the other night that a pest kept intruding on Waldron's party. Waldron, with a heavy cold, was coughing, and the pest, adopting a sympathetic air, expressed his sympathy.

"Yeah, I'm not feeling well," agreed Waldron, winking at his pals. "I'm—a T. B.—a tropical bum."

Swedish Decry Waning 'Skal,' Drinking Rite

Elders Shed Silent Tears Into Wine as Youth Ignores Tradition.

Stockholm, Feb. 21, (AP).—The famous drinking traditions of Sweden are faltering a little, turned to one side by younger generations with more interest in conversation than strict formalities, and the older generatio is beginning to shed silent tears into wine glasses.

The good old word "skal," pronounced as "skoal" in English is involved.

Into this word is packed a good share of the history of Sweden, and one of the most dignified and elaborate drinking procedures the world has ever known. The formula is something like this:

Seat yourself at a table with from one to a dozen good companions, dealing only with one to begin.

Call Out "Skoal."

Begin by catching the eye of some one, or by pronouncing the word "skoal" in a fairly loud and highly determined voice.

Now take your glass firmly in your hand, raise it quickly to about the level of your chin, and at the same time look deeply and intently into the eyes of the person you are "skoaling."

At the moment your eyes meet, incline the head and shoulders forward into a graceful bow. Your "skoaling" partner will do the same.

Now drop your eyes out of the line of contact, raise your glass to your lips, drink, resume the contact of the eyes, bow once more, and put down your glass.

This is the individual "skoal." In the case of a general "skoal," the procedure is the same except that you contrive, holding your glass slightly below your chin, to flick your eyes, left and right, so as to contact all eyes at the table.

There are various other rules:

Wait for Hostess to "Skoal."

Never "skoal" your hostess at a formal gathering. Wait until she "skoals" you.

Never, in a formal gathering, "skoal" a man older than yourself. It's your business to know whether he's older.

Always "skoal" with the same sort of wine. Don't pick up red wine if someone is challenging your eyes with a glass of white wine.

Now what is beginning to grieve the older generations of Swedes is that this procedure is drifting a little to leeward, especially in restaurants and bars.

The old Swedes still hope it is only a passing phase. They still face each other, bound by the traditions of drinking. With a solid, undeviating, one, two, three, four, they drink to the precision of drinking, to the formality of drinking, to the idea that a drink without a "skoal" is no drink at all.

Reich Schools Are 'Nazi-ized;' Texts Revised

Courses Revamped to Instill Party Principles in Students.

Berlin, Feb. 21 (AP).—One of the most intense aspects of the Nazi revolution is in full swing in German schools.

Textbooks are being rewritten to emphasize the new ideology; teachers are being hired and fired on the basis of "ability to help in the upbuilding of the National Socialist Government;" curricula and the term lengths are being radically changed, and students themselves are being tested, not for knowledge but for political acceptability.

The guiding principle in all this is that "the work and tasks of the schools can be useful to the Nazi state," according to a department of education chief.

A fundamental reorganization of legal studies in universities whereby students will attend only those lectures that interest them, do no intensive studying for examinations, and are advised to do independent thinking and work, has been announced by Education Minister Rust.

Cultural Course Out.

Reliable circles believe this will be a pattern for all university work. They say the first university year, devoted hitherto to a general cultural course corresponding to the American student's freshman and sophomore years, will be eliminated—its place to be taken by courses in Nazi principles. The scholar embarking upon professional studies would, under that scheme, enter his career work without the broadening year which always has been associated with the German universities.

An announcement from the education department declares that the Student's League has arranged for a course in political education in the coming semester, and that at the beginning of the spring vacation students will be sent to camps "whose purpose will be to make real National Socialists out of the students."

It further pointed out that the aim of the state is to make the students scientifically, politically and physically fit and that it is not the intention to burden pupils with studies.

Histories to Be Rewritten.

Work is going forward on complete revisions of texts. Officials hope to place new history books—written from the Nazi point of view and approved in contents and bindings by educators and parents—in use this spring.

New regulations for teachers are scheduled for April. These, it has been announced, will provide for a teachers' "land-year" like those of young people, a more thorough-going Nazification of instructors and a sifting of those not party members "who do not have the ability to help in the advancement of the government."

New education department divisions will be those for sciences, education, physical education and national education. The purpose of each has not been fully explained.

Health departments are being established to examine each student physically and make possible "a biological selection of students."

Athletics Emphasized.

Another recent order provides that pupils must have three semesters of physical education, including gymnastics, apparatus work, life saving and swimming.

"In the future," it is announced, "only those who have proved proficient in sports during the three terms will be allowed to take their examinations for degrees or promotions."

To provide new teachers of the required qualifications, 2,000 are to be expected at the teachers technical school during the next semester.

Meanwhile, deep thought is being spent on what to do with 1,200,000 graduates in 1934 and more than 600,000 who will be graduated this spring.

Positions were found early last year—it is claimed—for 75 per cent of male graduates and 50 per cent of the girls, mostly in payless labor camps.

'Eternal Triangle' Now 'Perfect Quadrangle'

Associated Press Photos.

Indiscretions Bared by Friend In Quadrangular Divorce Case

Witness Tells of Finding Beverly Hills Millionaire Disrobed and Wife of Walter Emerson, Film Writer, Lightly Clad in Latter's Home.

Los Angeles, Feb. 21 (AP).—A mutual friend of Walter Emerson, movie actor-writer, and Barton Sewell, Beverly Hills Millionaire, told from the witness stand today how he, Emerson and others found Sewell disrobed and Mrs. Emerson lightly clad in the Emerson home early on the morning of December 11.

The friend, Virgil C. Crites, testified at the trial of Emerson's divorce suit against Mrs. Jane Scholtz Emerson, former Denver society girl, in which Sewell is named co-respondent, and in which Mrs. Emerson, in a cross-complaint, names Mrs. Sewell co-respondent.

The quadrangular case is being heard before Superior Judge Ben B. Lindsey, former Denver jurist and writer on marital and juvenile subjects. Mrs. Emerson is asking $250 a month alimony for support of her three young sons.

Crites said that after the December 11 incident, which Emerson described on thes tand late Tuesday, he remonstrated with Sewell. He said Sewell upbraided him in return for "sticking your nose in my business."

Crites, an electrical engineer, told of reminding Sewell that he (Sewell), had recently told him that "everything Walter has in his mind about Jane and me is all his imagination."

As the discussion became heated, Sewell drew a pistol and Crites ran and got his own pistol, but Mrs. Emerson, who was present, interceded and there was no violence, the engineer said.

Before going on a trip to Palm Springs, Calif., Emerson told Crites Sewell had promised there would be no more indiscretions between him and Mrs. Emerson, Crites testified.

Under questioning of Milton Cohen, attorney for Emerson, who is a nephew of Ralph Waldo Emerson, Crites told in detail of young Emerson's "raid" on his home after returning unexpectedly from Palm Springs.

Vandals Damage Boone Home.

Reading, Pa., Feb. 18 (U.P.).—The historic home of Daniel Boone, in Exeter Township, has been damaged by vandals, who smashed windows and doors and marred the interior of the building. Police estimated the damage at more than $500.

Chicago Moves For Overhead Roads System

May Seek 100 Millions of U. S. to Build Arterial Elevated Highways.

Chicago, Feb. 21 (AP).—Automobiles may soar through the air with the greatest of ease before long in this city.

City Planners, the Association of Commerce, the Motor Club and others today joined in advocating elevated highways to lace above the streets of the city in efforts to speed traffic and to cut motor deaths.

Even officials of one aviation company gave the above the street highway system an "O. K." as a means of speeding transportation from the Chicago Municipal Airport on the southwest side of the loop. Such a highway system, they said, would do away with necessity for construction of an expensive downtown airport.

May Ask 100 Million.

This week Eugene Taylor, manager of the Chicago Plan Commission, put a motion before the street traffic committee of the Association of Commerce asking that the association be represented in a delegation planning to visit Washington seeking Federal funds for the proposed project. The committee approved the motion.

Under the plan, Chicago would seek $100,000,000 of the $4,800,000,000 work relief program to build the arterial elevated highways. The plan commission long has been sponsoring a program for elevated highways.

The commission said that such a system presented the only feasible method of cutting death tolls from motor mishaps and for speeding metropolitan traffic.

Public Aroused.

"The public," said Sidney Williams, a director of the National Highway Council, "at last is becoming thoroughly aroused over the increasing toll of deaths and injuries from motor car operation. The demand for reduction in this toll has become so clamorous that there is every likelihood of putting through corrective measures, such as the construction of an elevated highway system."

Champion Virginians Shift Ring Line-Up on Eve of Tourney

With Shirley Povich

AFTER the way I have abused this column in my time, darned if the thing didn't turn the other cheek the other day and permit me to connect with a rare piece of prognostication. Scarcely 12 hours after I had made so bold as to suggest that Charles Egbert Cornell was something less than a rousing success as a matchmaker for Joe Turner, Promoter Turner announces that Mr. Cornell hereinafter is to be known as his former matchmaker.

AHEARN.

If you have ever taken the trouble to notice, this particular column of type is double measure, so it was quite in keeping that this department reaped a double measure of satisfaction on the day in question. For, it was after I had contrasted the matchmaking abalities of Mr. Cornell and Goldie Ahearn, implying in my own tactless style that Mr. Cornell was not to be mentioned in the same inhalation with Mr. Ahearn as a matchmaker, that Ahearn was the man who stepped into the vacancy created by Cornell's release.

Skipping lightly to the subject of vacancies reminds this department of the disillusioned youth who hoped to gain employment in a newspaper office. Hearing that his pal, one Joe Doakes, had been fired as a copy boy, and thinking to gain his job, the lad presented himself to the city editor. Doakes had been fired, it seems, on general principles. Aside from being a consummate loafer, and utterly uninterested in his work, Doakes was the kind of a guy who fits the description of the fellow who was dead from the ankles up and whose feet, apparently, were asleep.

Anyway, presenting himself for the job, the applicant pointed out to the city editor that Doakes had been fired: "I'd like to fill the vacancy left by Doakes," he said. The City editor flared, "I'm sorry, my lad. Joe Doakes was fired all right, but he didn't leave any vacancy."

THE Ahearn-Turner alliance definitely brings to an end a promotorial feud that had its inception three years ago when Ahearn, a reformed lightweight fighter of some distinction, attempted to muscle in on Turner's wrestling profits. It was the era of big wrestling gates and Turner was turning the customers away at the doors, when Ahearn hit upon a plan to operate at Bolling Field, a site he obtained by the simple expedient of letting the soldiers in free.

It was weak competition for Turner, at best, and Ahearn's profits were derived wholly from his hot dog and soda pop stand which had a peculiar attraction for the soldiers. But that is not the story. The story is that Ahearn, who was afraid the wrestlers would quit any day under the influence of the $62 and the $49 gates, outlasted the wrestlers.

"I couldn't draw no crowds," said Ahearn. "At every show I expected the wrestlers to walk out on me. I was thinking up all kinds of excuses for the small gates. They were working on percentage, you know, and once they split only $28 among eight of 'em. But wrestlers are peculiar. You never can tell how they are going to reason.

"After every show, when I'd count 'em out their measly dough, they'd say, 'don't worry, Goldie, old pal, we'll put on a red-hot show for you next week.' They were actually worring about me, not about themselves. And they'd go in there and half kill themselves the next week for a $65 gate. I don't know yet why they kept coming back to wrestle. Instead of them running out on me, I had to run out on them to keep my self-respect."

Daytona Sands Nearly Ready, Campbell May Race This Week

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., Feb. 21 (U.P.).—The Sir Malcolm Campbell who played golf today (and came in with a 93) was a neat mixture of happiness and indignation.

He was happy because the beach was finally rounding into shape, and indignant because the Chamber of Commerce of Long View, Wash., had circulated reports he was to shift his attack on the world's land speed record to the Pacific Coast.

"Will you please say for me," Sir Malcolm said as he walked through the rough on the fifth hole, "that the talk from Washington is absurd, and absolutely unsporting.

"I am not thinking of going out there for a run, and never have. The whole thing came about rather sillily. The Chamber of Commerce sent me a wire a few days ago, asking me to come there for a run. Courtesy made me answer, and as a gesture of politeness, I inquired as to the specifications of their speedway."

"They rushed them along and to read them will make you wonder if they aren't under the impression I am racing a horse and buggy."

"The beach, they said, is farily smooth and dry. Only fairly, mind you. They said it didn't slope a great deal, and that it was clear of all obstructions save one. The one obstruction is a bit formidable, however, being a creek that runs completely across the beach. I don't know what they planned to do about that. A bridge, perhaps."

Washington's bid for a 300-mile an hour run was made at an unhappy time, too, for Daytona's 11-mile strand today showed definite signs of improvement. The bad spot which Campbell insisted had to be filled by hand, today was perfectly level.

Mule teams and tractors dumped sand in the gully last night and the high tide, riding in front of a stiff northeast wind, smoothed it nicely. The wet patches were drying, the coquina dust was almost gone, and the wind was in the favored quarter.

Let it stay there for another 24 hours and Campbell's belief that he will be able to make a run over the week-end will seem sensible.

His belief is shared by the A. A. A. officials, for they have quit their jaunts about the State and are standing by. Campbell has said his next run again will be only a practice one, but those close to him are sure that, given a decent beach, he will waive a trial and send Bluebird, throttle to the floorboard, out for the 300-miles-an-hour he covets above all else.

Howard Wins, 40-39, To Take Loop Lead

Howard University, tied with Virginia State University, of Richmond, for Colored Intercollegiate Athletic Association championship honors, broke the tie on their own court last nght and forged ahead of their rivals, winning 40 to 39.

The Virginians started off with a 9-point lead, which the Bisons, led by Pinn and Wynne, overcame, to close the half ahead, 22-17. When Tatum came in for Cundiff, however, the tables were turned, and the teams fought desperately at 29-all, until McArthur and Wynne pulled away to win by the single point.

Ashland, Feb. 21 (AP).—Coach Mac Pitt's undefeated University of Richmond Spiders made it 18 in a row tonight when they showed no mercy to Randolph-Macon's basket ball team. The Spiders won, 45-14, in a game in which 11 men played and 9 broke into the scoring.

Louis Elmore, star guard, hopped to the fore and rolled up 14 points—he tied the Jackets alone—to lead his team in scoring for the first time this season.

World's Best Links Aces To Clash

International Field of 138 Stars Invited to Augusta.

Jones to Oppose Rivals From Six Nations April 4 to 7.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21 (AP).—An international field of 138 players from six countries has been invited to participate in the second annual tournament of the Augusta (Ga.), National Golf Club. The event will mark the one and only competitive appearance of the year for Robert J. Jones, jr., the former world champion, and will be held April 4-7.

The list includes all the best known names in amateur or professional golf, here or abroad. All British and American titleholders, past and present, as well as present members of the Walker or Ryder Cup teams, received automatic invitations. The list comprises 93 American and 34 British golfers in addition to four from Canada, three each from France and Japan and one, Jose Jurado, from the Argentine.

Dutra, Little Listed.

Heading the home-bred players are Olin Dutra, national open king, and William Lawson Little, jr., holder of both the British and American amateur crowns. Gene Sarazen has already signified his intention to compete, for the first time, and the professional brigade will be back in force, headed by Horton Smith, Craig Wood and Paul Runyan, leaders of the pack which routed Jones last spring. Smith won the first Augusta national tournament with 284. Jones finished in a tie for thirteenth with Walter Hagen and Denny Shute.

In addition to Little and the group of former American champions, the amateurs invited include the two Texas sensations of the 1934 national championship, Dave (Spec) Goldman and Reynolds Smith; also Zell Eaton, Walter Emery, Leland Hamman, Willie Turnesa, Jack Westland, Don Armstrong, Winfield Day, Ernest Pieper, jr., Johnny Fischer, Maurice McCarthy, jr., Jack Munger, Gus Moreland, Mark Stuart, Eddie Driggs, Tommy Tailer, Fred Haas, jr., and Charley Yates.

Somerville Gets Bid.

Ross Somerville, the Canadian amateur star, who competed last year at Augusta, has been invited to return, along with three Dominion professionals, Andy Kay, Lex Robson and Jules Huot.

It is doubtful whether England will be strongly represented, although invitations have gone forward to a list including Henry Cotton, present holder of the British Open title; Percy Alliss, Archie Compston, Cyril Tolley, Michael Scott, Jack McLean, Ted Ray, Harry Vardon and the Whitcombes, Ernest and Charles.

France's oustanding professional trio, Aubrey Boomer, August Boyer and the veteran Arnaud Massey, have been asked to compete, along with the Japanese trio, R. Asami, H. Murakami and R. Miamoto.

Plan Blows Up; Ruth to Start Training

Appears Much Relieved; Will See Ruppert Next Week.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21 (U.P.).—Babe Ruth moved briskly toward another season with the New York Yankees when he announced tonight, "My big proposition has blown up. I expect to start training next week at Artie McGovern's gymnasium."

Ruth's "big proposition," which had been baseball's momentous mystery since he mentioned it on his arrival yesterday from a world tour, may have been just a bowl of suki-yaki or it may have been on the legit. But anyway, it was reassuring to learn that it had "blown up."

Likewise, it was reassuring to hear from the Bambino's lips, as he sat in an easy chair in his apartment living room, that he intended starting another intensive campaign to remove blubber at Prof. McGovern's establishment.

Seems Relieved.

When Ruth announced that his proposition had gone p-f-f-f-t, he waved his big briar pipe with such a grandiloquent gesture that it almost knocked over the stand lamp at his elbow. And he seemed as relieved as if he had just dispelled a smoke screen, separating himself and the sports writers. They had been jangling his phone all day to find out about the mysterious proposition.

But of ocurse, neither babe nor his wife, Claire, was there to answer the phone. No, sir! They went out and "got the works." Babe spent about four hours in a barber shop, "and they certainly gave me a working over. First time I got

Art Shires to Manage Harrisburg, Pa., Team

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 21 (AP).—Walter Smallwood, business manager of the Albany International League baseball team, said today a letter from Joe Cambria asserted that Cambria had hired Art Shires to manage the Harrisburg, Pa., team of the New York-Pennsylvania League.

It was reported yesterday that Cambria, owner of the Albany club, also had acquired the Harrisburg franchise.

Shires, a Texan, is a one-time big leaguer.

Race on Coast Looms As Richest in History

By Walter Haight
(Post Staff Writer).

SANTA ANITA RACE TRACK, Arcadia, Calif., Feb. 21.—As I sit here, a couple of orange groves away from the Sierra Madre Mountains, which loom through the mid-afternoon haze like a stage setting for a 1917 Western movie, I am reliably informed that a field of 18 horses will start in Saturday's 1935 version of the California gold rush.

Providing 17 or more answer the bugle, the $100,000 added Santa Anita Handicap will be the richest purse that ever went to the owner of a thoroughbred race horse. The present record is $105,000, garnered by Whichone for his historic stretch run in the Belmont Futurity of 1929.

I begin to suspect that it is the unusual distance between the dollar sign and that last cipher which has served to allow California to kidnap the winter turf spotlight, for among the ultra-ultra which have their horses fit, or as fit as crippled legs and ailing hoofs will allow them, I notice several who heretofore have shown a preference for the golden sands of Old Miami shore.

Another Kentucky Derby.

But $100,000 is $100,000, whether you sell newspapers at Fourteenth and F streets or discuss billions in the Senate, and California has set that figure for a few seconds more than two minutes of horse racing. California hopes to have planted the seed of another Kentucky Derby, and it is only fitting that the Whitneys, the Bostwicks, the Woodwards, the Sloanes and the Algers should be represented.

Thus the uppercrust of horsedom, which at this time of the year is generally wintering on the blue grass, is out straining its collective muscles trying to find that extra ounce of condition which wins or loses horse races.

And where the top-notch horses go, the ace jockeys must trail along. Silvia Coucci, Sonny Workman, Don Meade, Eddie Arcaro, Tom Malley and the other little men who are hoping to have a busy day Saturday, are either here or on their way. And California has but to scrape the surface of this rugged locality to gather a crowd of 100,000—at least that number of persons are expected. All clubhouse and reserved seats have been sold and the regular admissions to the grandstand are on the verge of running out.

Infield Spectators.

It looks as if the only public sale of ducats for the big day will be those which will admit one to the infield, where, providing one is tall enough, one may get a glimpse of the flying blouses of two or three jockeys and possibly a hank of hair on Equipoise's tail.

I would not say that Los Angeles and the surrounding country was as excited about the whole thing as it would be about a freezing temperature in southern Florida, but I will say that there is more than passing interest.

This morning, my first since I glided into a sea of neon signs after being whisked across this Nation by good old Transcontinental and Western Air, I tried to make myself believe that Los Angeles was Louisville, with a Kentucky Derby just around the corner.

I decided to put the question to the man and woman on the street, "What do you think of the big race?" That was my theme song. Here are some of the answers: A rather

Filmland Cash Backing Ekky In Big Race

Cinema Rank and File Is Riding on Favorite All the Way.

By Sidney Skolsky.

ARCADIA, Calif., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—It's Ekky! All the way and no one close enough to dust his flying rump with a shotgun! The standout for the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap—the biggest race in the country—is Equipoise, the one-time Ugly Duckling.

This was the horse that trainers, experts, wardrobe mistresses, elevator operators and shoe-shine touts kept plugging to your inquiring correspondent today as he appeared on the scene of Saturday's race of the winter.

Ekky is 2 to 1 in the future books. He may wind up 3 to 5 if the Hollywood money keeps piling on his sleek shoulders. Extras, ingenues, Voluptuous Veras, Desperate Desmonds, all the cinema rank and file are riding with him. If he loses, the wailing that will go up from the movie lots along Wilshire and adjacent Los Angeles boulevards will be ear piercing.

Cavalcade has been scratched and I went to Bob Smith, Cavalcade's trainer, for some inside stuff. Bob does not think Ekky will win handily. "It will be as wide open as a Mobile crap game," said Bob.

Ekky, owned by the C. V. Whitney Stables, will have Sonny Workman up. The form charts show that this great runner has finished out of the money only 7 times in 50 races and 3 of these were the result of disqualifications.

If you buy a ticket on Ekky you will automatically place a bet on his stablemate, a lightning-heeled little filly named High Glee. She is coupled with Ekky in the betting.

The dark horse of the race is Ladysman. Smart bettors feel that he is worth a play because they will not get enough return for their money if they back Ekky. Twenty Grand is not receiving much support. Twenty Grand was beaten recently by Equipoise although immeditely after the finish Ekky was disqualified.

Blue Ridge Due To Be Helped By Red Sox

Pennock to Confer With Officials of Club at Hagerstown.

HAGERSTOWN, Md., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—The recently reorganized Blue Ridge League entertained high hopes of additional major league support today when it was announced that the Boston Red Sox were evincing interest in the Hagerstown Club as a farm.

Herb Pennock, former pitching ace of the New York Yankees, who in the role of an organizer of Red Sox farms, has already taken over the management of the Charlotte Club of the Piedmont League, will arrive in Hagerstown tomorrow to confer with officials of the local club.

Business Manager Eddie Collins of the Boston Club has communicated to the officials of the Loyal Order of Moose, which is supporting the Hagerstown team, that the Red Sox "are interested" in the local club.

Cambria to Aid.

Red Sox backing would give every Blue Ridge League club either direct or indirect support by a major league team. Pittsburgh is backing Frederick, Cincinnati will operate a farm at Chambersburg, and Joe Cambria, Albany owner, who has the support of the Washington club, will assist Martinsburg.

Cumberland, which is considering joining the league, is dickering with the Yankees for support and Waynesboro is hopeful of enlisting the aid of the Cardinals.

Col. Nelson W. Russler, who served as president of the Cumberland Colts for four years during that team's play in the Middle Atlantic League, declared today that Cumberland is seriously considering joining the Blue Ridge circuit.

Completion of the league's organization is expected at a meeting to be held here on March 3 when the six teams post forfeits and adopt a schedule.

Move Taken To Thwart Maryland

John Noll Is Dropped, Caplin Moved Up as Lightheavy.

44 Young Boxers Start Warfare Today at Charlottesville.

By Bill McCormick
(Post Staff Writer).

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Feb. 21.—The die was cast for 44 ambitious young learned larrupers as pairings were completed here tonight for the Southern Conference boxing tournament which will start at Memorial Gymnasium at 3 p. m. tomorrow.

The fine hand of Virginia's Johnny LaRowe, who is coaching the defending champions from his sick bed, was seen in a last-minute stratagem which dropped John Noll, 175-pounder, from tournament competition, and moved Mortimer Caplin from the middleweight division up to the lightheavyweight class. This move generally was believed designed to offset Maryland's shift whereby Stewart McCaw, a 165-pounder, was jumped up to the lightheavyweight division where there is no Matulewicz.

Because of the small number of entries in the two divisions, all 175-pounders and heavyweights drew byes.

Hahn Faces Williams.

Taylor, of South Carolina, and Maryland's Young drew byes in the 115-pound class. Maynard Diehl, North Carolina's strong contender for the bantamweight bauble, drew Alteman, of Duke. Archie Hahn, Virginia's defending champion, was allotted to do battle with Williams, of Clemson.

Gordon Rainey, another Cavalier champion, will be put to work early in the tournament against Jenkins, South Carolina's 125-pound contender. Maryland's Birmingham will be pitted against Tuttle, of Carolina State, and Altman, Clemson, has drawn the assignment against Eustler, of North Carolina. Lloyd, of Duke, has been assigned the only bye in the featherweight division.

Nedomatsky vs. Brooks.

With seven entries in the lightweight class, Kneipp, of Duke, has been assigned the only bye in the 135-pound division. Nedomatsky, Maryland's knockout artist, who decisioned Brooks, of Virginia, in a dual meet last week, will do battle with the Cavalier lightweight again in the first round of the tournament. Edwards, of North Carolina, meets Dunn, South Carolina, and Dawson, Clemson, will swap swats with Hudson, Carolina State.

Maynard Womer, Virginia's remaining conference titleholder, is the only Cavalier champion to draw a bye. In the welterweight devision, which Womer now rules, Webb, of Maryland, will start action against Penland, Carolina State, and Fisher, North Carolina, has been elected to go to war with Hemphlett.

One Preliminary.

McAboy, Maryland's clownish 155-pounder; Medynski, North Carolina, and Hilton, of South Carolina, will not work in the opening clashes of the junior middleweight milling. McClung, Virginia's southpaw ace, will be called upon to face Mann, of Duke, in the only preliminary battle in the division.

Matulewicz, Duke's sensational 165-pounder, will not be given a chance to unloose his flying fists in the middleweight preliminaries, and neither will Jean, Washington and Lee, or Giddings, of North Carolina. An encounter between Lombardo, of Maryland, and Stoddard, of South Carolina, will furnish the only action above the 155-pound class.

Post Predictions.

115-pound class—Diehl (N. C.) by knockout over Alteman (Duke); Hahn (Va.) by decision over Dunn (S. C.); Dedomatsky
125-pound class—Rainey (Va.) by decision over Jenkins (S. C.); Birmingham (Md.) by decision over Tuttle (N. C. S.); Alteman (Clemson) by decision over Eustler (M. C.).
135-pound class—Edwards (N. C.) by decision over Dunn (S. C.); Nedowatsky (Md.) by knockout over Brooks (Va.).
145-pound class—Webb (Md.) by decision over Penland (N. S. C.); Fisher (N. C.) by decision over Humphlett (S. C.).
155-pound class—McClung (Va.) by knockout over Mann (Duke).
165-pound class—Stoddard (S. C.) by decision over Lombardo (Md.).

Ruth Dislikes French. Why? Better Ask Babe

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21 (Spl.).—George Herman Ruth does not like Paris. He does not like the French. Now we have that straight. I am glad to be able to disseminate this nugget of information for the future of international relations. If ever the war drums sound again, if the freedom of the seas is menaced, if treaties hang in the balance and the balance of power threatens to tip this way or that, remember that I told you, Anno Domini 1935, George Herman Ruth does not like Paris; he does not like the French.

Why? I could not say. And do the French like Ruth? I do not know. I would say, however, if a ball player were picking out some one not to like him, the French were about as safe as anyone. I do not think the French care very much about baseball and, hence, probably were not much concerned about Le Gros Bebe when he was in Paris. All I know is that coming up the bay on the Manhattan somebody asked Ruth how he liked Paris, and Babe answered in 10,000 well-chosen words and never repeated himself once. In short, he does not like Paris.

He does like London. Well, everyone likes London, and he liked St. Moritz. He told us what the biggest thrill of his life had been. I always thought it was that day in Chicago when he pointed out to the Cub pitcher where he was going to park the next pitch, a little to the right of the center-field flag, and then put it there.

But, he said no. He said you ain't never had no thrill until you've gone for a bobsled ride. Apparently in St. Moritz, Switzerland, somebody took Babe down the big slide. I would like to quote his rich and racy language on that trip, but I can not. It seemed that all he could do was hold on, hold his breath and let the world go by. I have never slid down these walls of ice, but they say they go past you powerful fast. And that you even do a little thinking about your past life on the way down, and usually arrive promising to mend your evil ways and live a better life in the future, if permitted.

And Babe went skiing. Boy, he said, is that fun! Never had so much fun in his life. Then he went into a delightful description of some of the things he did to his ample posterior while indulging in this magnificent sport. The Babe will always fill in these little details so charmingly that you can but regret that there is no way to set them before respectable folk in type. Babe on skiis must have been a magnificent and eye-filling picture—those tiny ankles, that burly, towering, bulky figure, that amazing head with the broad nose gen-

Dokas Races to Two-Length Victory in Feature at Hialeah

Boston Brook Drops Back, Second

Hardware Runs Third; Quel Jeu Triumphs in Close Finish.

HIALEAH PARK, Fla., Feb. 21 (AP).—Dokas, winner of his only start at Tropical Park, but a failure in five local efforts, finally made the grade here today when he easily captured top honors in the 7-furlong Pan-American Purse for 3-year-olds. The C. S. Bancroft representative, well ridden by Wayne Wright, led home H. R. Dickens' Boston Brook by two lengths to return $7.20. Mrs. W. R. Flemming's Hardware lost second money by a head. The time was 1:24 1-5.

Six horses started, including Tearout, which was fourth; Brindle and High Image. The first four are rather forlorn Florida Derby eligibles. Dokas was the first successful choice of the day.

Boston Brook was sent into a long early lead by Bobby Watson. Dokas was nicely rated off the pace, with Hardware and Tearout following. The other two never figured in the running. Wright called on Dokas after rounding out of the back stretch. The Dozer gelding drew up to Boston Brook after turning into the home lane and, taking command, moved clear in easy fashion.

Quel Jeu Triumphs.

The Clipper Purse of 7 furlongs, co-feature with the Pan-American, provided one of the most exciting races of the season. The Arden Farm's Quel Jeu, which had not been out of the money in his last seven starts, won by a nose from Golden Fate. The latter was making his first start since being claimed by William Sachsenmaier from J. E. Smallman for $3,000, and was a strong favorite. B. N. Kane's Fidelis was a length behind the pair.

The five horses ran bunched to the first turn, where they spread out as Quel Jeu opened up daylight. Golden Fate went after the leader around the bend, came wide and just failed to catch the winner. Quel Jeu ran the distance in 1:24 and paid $12.60.

Mieletta Is Winner.

Running like and with the wind, the Araho Stable's Mieletta raced to her second victory in as many starts in the dash for juvenile fillies that opened the card. The daughter of St. Henry led by a narrow margin virtually from the start, covering the three furlongs in :33 4-5 to win by a half length from the neglected Beth Bon. Squawker, one of the best played starters in the open betting affair, lost the place by another half length. Mieletta paid $14.50.

Justa Jane ruled a short-priced favorite for the second, in which eleven ordinary 3-year-old maidens clashed. The filly never could catch the leaders and finished out of the money. Slave was the one to graduate. The gelded son of Diavolo caught Sock Dologer in the stretch and lasted to beat the longshot, Chicle Ship, by a half length. He paid $8.10. Sock Dologer was headed for the place.

El Bandido Scores.

Starry Night was supposed to be a good thing in the third race, on the strength of fast workouts and the fact that she was meeting a poor lot of horses in her first start. Like most tips, this one finished a handsome tenth in the field of a dozen maidens. She was made favorite and showed only a brief display of speed. El Bandido, the logical choice on form, ran into a long lead shortly after the start and breezed home by two lengths to pay $7.70. Winged Flight was an easy second over Lucky Turn.

Bright Haven ran 6 furlongs in the fast time of 1:11 flat, to lead home a half-dozen capable sprinters in the fourth. Cleverly handled by Bobby Merritt, the 4-year-old colt possessed too much foot for his rivals. He stole a wide advantage, but had to be hard ridden in the stretch to get home by a head at $14.80 for $2. Cathop, the choice, broke sluggishly. He made up ground steadily and might have won in a few more strides. Quickly tired chasing the winner and lost the place by five lengths.

Old Judge, $10.40, won the last race by a length from Big Show, with Booms Pal third.

Post Staff Writer Reports Twenty Grand in Fast Drill for Classic.

well-dressed, middle-aged man, who tapped a pince-nez on the palm of his hand: "Oh, yes, yes, the race, er-r, pardon me, but when is it?"

A yellow-skinned fellow at a Broadway fruit stand: "Japanese very gracious race."

A fellow with a brown suit, no hat and greasy hair (certainly looked like my best bet): "Never mind that big race. They'll all be trying. What you want to do is to put ten slugs on Bebest today in the fourth. I'll meet you down by the track coffee shop."

A shoeshine man: "Bigga lace, no good. Only gotto little ones."

But to return to that field for Saturday. Equipoise, the probable favorite, is a certain starter. The same goes for Twenty Grand, Ladysman, Mate, Time Supply, Azucar, Head Play, Faireno, Frank Ormont, High Glee, Gusto, Top Row, Fleam, Precursor, Gillie, Good Goods and Sarada.

Although Ted Clark will be rushed into action if the track turns muddy, he may start on a fast course. Mad Frump, Spicson and Thomasville probably will not see action unless the rainmaker does his stuff. Statesman is out, not having recovered from a recent attack of fever.

Riskulus in Trial.

With the exception of Riskulus, the crippled leg brigade, at least that portion not already signed off by the turf writers, has been found fit for barrier purposes. Riskulus' bruised hoof would not allow him to work out this morning. He will be tested tomorrow, however, before a final decision is made.

(Chicasha just stepped home in the fourth race at a $172.20 mutuel right in front of my eyes and me with six bucks—in my pocket.)

Pillow Flight, owned by D. G. David, is definitely scratched. It seems that persons were still betting good money on this horse yesterday in the future book, which has drawn enough cash hereabouts to build three Charles Town race tracks.

At the track this afternoon you could get a different version of the race from 1,000 different people. Perhaps the most interesting came from a colored clocker. He says it will be Equipoise by a length or two. He also said Jockey Coucci tricked the stewards into the disqualification of Equipoise earlier in the week.

Coucci Knew It.

He contends that Twenty Grand was a beaten horse when Equipoise came along in the stretch and that Coucci knew it. The Italian rider, according to my informant, also knew Ecky's habit of bearing over. So he drew Twenty Grand out slightly, stood up in the stirrups and took the purse.

Nine of the eligibles for the big race worked through the fog this morning and five went the handicap route. Twenty Grand turned in the best time of this latter group, being clocked in 2:04 4-5. Equipoise breezed the mile and a quarter in 2:12 and a fraction. The others were Ladysman, 2:05 4-5; Ted Clark, 2:06, and Gusto, 2:09 1-5. High Glee miled it in 1:40 2-5, while Azucar, Fleam and Mate six-furlonged in Marlboro time. And your air-minded correspondent worked six pancakes in 3:09 7-8 handily.

The Santa Anita race track, called "The Track Beautiful" here, runs eight lengths behind Hialeah Park (California State Society members please be tolerant). Of course, Hialeah can't show those snow-capped mountains over across the infield—but, likewise, Santa Anita officials had nothing to do with putting them there—not a lake or a flamingo in the infield—in fact, that part of the track has to bow to Bowie.

Course Still Young.

Of course, this course is young yet—and a crop of movie queens may be planted before another season. Even comparing the two clubhouses is not flattering to Santa Anita— not a palm in sight from the press box. Don't tell Cy Cummings, of Laurel, but this track gets 25 cents for every car parked—and programs are 15 cents.

Jockey Don Meade is called "Ducky"—here in his home State. Jockey Frankie Mauro is suspended—he hit Jockey Westrope in the eye in a fist fight, so I'm told. Sonny Workman is busy denying two rumors—he did not get in a battle with Silvio Coucci after the Equipoise disqualification and he regrets to report that he did not bet $500 on Two Bob the other day.

Bill Bennings says that Sun Monk must be a race horse, after all—ran second to Miney Myerson. Bill will try to select the first three horses in the big race tomorrow night.

If there is a close finish, the crowd will have to wait two minutes for the official placing—they don't call them here, they photograph 'em.

Temple Checks G. W.'s Late Rally in Thriller to Win, 42-38

Score Is Tied 9 Times in First Half

Invaders Rally After Colonial Five Pulls Up to 38 to 25.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

IN a bruising battle of brawn and buckets—the kind of buckets that win basket ball games, Temple's high-powered quintet, administered a 42-to-38 spanking to George Washington last night at Tech High School in the Colonials' final home appearance of the season.

It also marked the downtown dribblers' last game under the direction of Coach Roland Logan, who leaves this morning to assume his duties as trainer of the Boston Red Sox at Sarasota, Fla.

It was a thrill-packed fray, with the lead exchanging hands no less than nine times in the first half, when it seemed that Temple was laboring in the throes of a physical let-down after its exhausting game with Georgetown the previous night. But the Owls rallied and forged ahead as the period waned, grabbed a 20-to-15 lead at halftime and held it high above the Colonials reach throughout the final period.

Off to Early Lead.

Capt. Jim Howell's field goal gave the home team a 2-0 advantage as the game got underway, but Temple tied it up on charity tosses by Jeunger and Brown. Goldfadden's foul put the Colonials ahead again, only to have Fox sink a snowbird sending the Owls back into the lead.

For the next few minutes the score swung back and forth like a coo-coo clock pendulum while the rivals ostensibly attempted to annihilate one another as the game was whipped into the proportions of a small-sized cyclone. But after Hal Kiesel's brace of field goals had given G. W. a 10-9 advantage, the Philadelphians unwrapped their best brand of basket ball and things began to happen.

Casper arched two field goals through the hoop, Brown contributed two more and Jeunger converted a free throw for good measure, and Temple led by an 18-10 count. "Mickey Mouse" Schonfeld, substituting for Walter Bakum at guard, potted a long one for G. W., and Brown sank a foul for Temple's twentieth point. Kiesel's third field goal and Bill Noonan's first foul gave G. W. 15 for a half's work.

Misses Many Fouls.

George Washington missed enough fouls in the second half to tie and then win the ball game. They rallied and managed to overcome all but 3 points of Temple's lead as the Owls' advantage was pared to 28-25, but Temple always had a reserve punch that it used to hold G. W. at bay in critical moments.

Kiesel, Noonan and Schonfeld led the Colonials' counter-attack, while Temple's big punch was entrusted to the capable hands of Jim Brown, who tied Kiesel for scoring honors with 15 points. Messinkomer and Fox also inflicted considerable damage to the home team's hopes.

Babe Ruth Ready To Start Training

entirely spruced up since I left for Japan last October."

Mrs. Ruth spent a large portion of her first day home at the beauty parlor. Neither did much shopping, and, in fact, had not unpacked 18 pieces of luggage at dinner time.

What about that report that Ruth and Col. Jacob Ruppert, Yankee owner, were slated for a huddle with Judge Emil Fuchs, president of the Boston Braves, next week?

"First time I heard anything about it," mumbled the 240-pounder, wriggling in his purple and yellow lounging robe. "Naw—sounds like just one of them things."

To Postpone Trip.

What about his contract? "Oh, I guess it's here. I see a letter from the Yankee offices. But I haven't bothered to open it yet. No, I haven't called Col. Ruppert—and he hasn't called me. Guess we won't get together until next week, because tomorrow's a holiday, and I guess the colonel will go over to his estate at Garrison for the week-end. Looks as if I'll have to postpone my hunting trip up at Monroe (N. Y.) until after I see the colonel."

What about quitting baseball unless he was given a player-manager's berth? Did he still feel the same as yesterday and last October;

"Aw—I guess so. Geez, didn't we go into that enough yesterday"

The Ruths were staying home tonight and tomorrow. "Why not? I'm glad to get home. I can hardly believe it. Boy—oh, boy! I'm glad to be home."

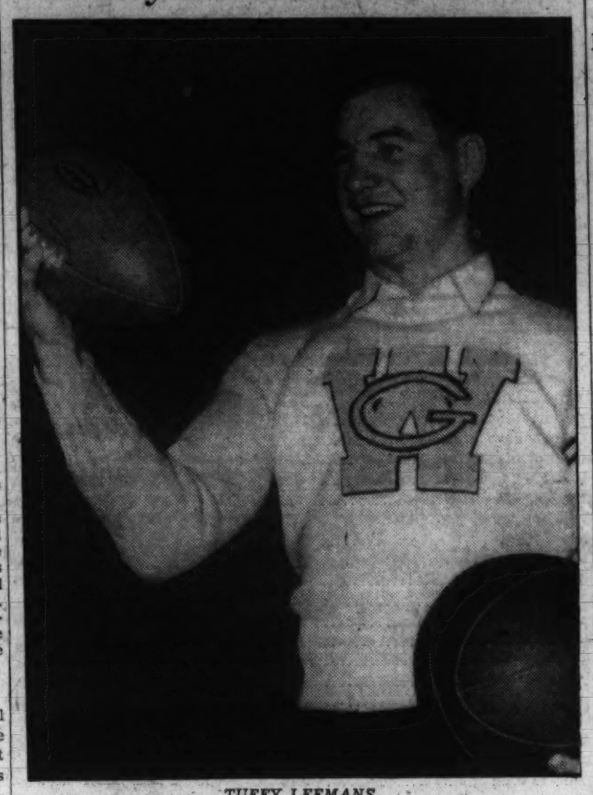
G. W.'s Leemans Sidesteps, And Outdribbles Questioner; Says "I Prefer Baseball!"



TUFFY LEEMANS.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

WE buttonholed Alphonse (Tuffy) Leemans, the 185-pound human thundebolt in George Washington University's back field last season, as he he was coming out of the gym yesterday and asked him right out:

"Which sport do you prefer, football or basket ball?"

Allouez Al looked stunned for a moment—about as dazed as that bleak November afternoon when everybody from Louisiana but Huey Long tried to plant him in the dirt of Griffith Stadium. But he side-stepped, stiff-armed and came through with an answer that left us as dizzy as a merry-go-round nag.

"Why I like them both a lot," he replied. "But I'd rather be a good baseball player than anything else."

Ode of th eMysteries.

My friends, that is one of life's little mysteries. Here's a nice looking chap who'll probably be All-American half back next season, who plays a steady game of basket ball and seems to like both, but who would rather play baseball.

But Tuffy is resigned to his fate, and since he can't be a major leaguer, or refuses to believe he is good enough to be one, he's trying to be as good as he can in football and basket ball. Of the two he prefers football and here's why:

He likes to run hard and for a fair distance, he likes the body contact one gets in football, he likes to kick the cowhide, to throw it, and like any other red-blooded normal youth, he delights in rolling on the turf now and then.

Improves Footwork.

Basket ball, he believes, is an excellent means of keeping fit and of furthering his gridiron ability. It has improved his footwork, his feinting—two important items in football, and has served to keep him in good physical trim without the drudgery of formal exercises.

Tuffy used to think basket ball was merely fascinating, and he didn't play the game in Allouez, but now he wants to be good at it. He thinks "Red" Rosan, of Temple, and Ed Hargaden, of Georgetown, are two of the finest players he's seen, and in his humble opinion the Eastern brand of play is faster and smarter than in the Midwest.

Leemans is no slouch at baseball, either. Two years ago he pitched one game for G. W. and his arm went dead, so he abandoned the sport until the school term ended. Then he went back to Allouez and pitched two-hit, one-hit and no-hit-no-run games in successive weeks.

Incidentally, Tuffy doesn't know how well he would do in track. He's never tried his hand, or if you prefer, his feet at it. As a matter of fact, he's never seen a track meet.

Intercity Fives To Vie Today At Y.M.C.A.

Baltimore, York, the Bronx Will Send Teams to Court Tourney.

WASHINGTON CENTRAL Y. M. C. A. will play host to basket ball teams from Baltimore, York, Pa., and the Bronx, N. Y., today in its first annual invitation tournament.

Thirty-three invitations were sent out to teams of ten States, and at least ten quintets expected for the tournament. Yesterday six of the teams that promised to attend withdrew.

Conducting the four-team tournament will be Louis Holmes, chairman; W. C. Woodward, C. Edward Beckett, Marvin Faris, Russ Slight and Henry Weinland. Dallas Shirley, George Washington basket ball player, and Milton Schoenfeld will referee the games.

Starts at 11 a. m.

Play, starting at 11 a. m., will be conducted in round-robin fashion with the final at 9 p. m.

The Bronx Y. M. C. A., which has won some 30 games this season, looms as the winner, although the home team will benefit by playing on a not unfamiliar court.

Tomorrow an all-day athletic program is scheduled at the Y. M. C. A. It will be topped off by a volley ball tournament in which teams from New York, Richmond, Harrisburg, Pa., and Washington will compete.

Norfolk Baseball Plans Are Held Up

Action on Field Will Be Taken Tomorrow.

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 21 (AP).—Negotiations for the leasing by the St. Louis Cardinals of a baseball park at Maher Field, the fair grounds property owned by the Norfolk & Western Railway, will remain "in status quo" until Saturday morning.

This statement was made today by Oscar H. Beasley, real estate agent of the railway, who said the N. & W. is not in a position to sign a contract until its engineers have made estimates of the cost involved in the two improvement plans under consideration.

The whole question of whether organized baseball shall come to Roanoke in 1935 with a Cardinal "farm" team in the Piedmont League hinges on the playing field facilities.

Oliver French, business manager of the Greensboro club last year, left shortly before noon for Greensboro, but will return here for a conference with the N. & W. official at 11 a. m. Saturday.

Sands' Estate Hunt Scene Today

More Than 60 Horses Are Entered; Large Crowd Is Expected.

MIDDLEBURG, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.). — Thoroughbreds, sinewy and hardened after a season in the hunting fields, will arrive early tomorrow in vans from this and nearby counties to take part in the fifth annual hunter trials of the Middleburg Hunt, which will be held on Washington's Birthday on the Glenwood race track, estate of D. C. Sands, near here.

Hunting has been good during the fall and winter and, with the exception of three weeks when the snow was piled high, the horses have been hunted regularly and are in good shape for the exhibition.

Competition will be keen in all classes between the 60 or more horses that make up the 93 entries. Interest in the awarding of the Middleburg Bowl, feature event of the trials, runs high. This bowl is given the owner of the hunter having the highest score in any class.

Mrs. J. H. Whitney's gray gelding, Bon Diable, is entered again this year. Bon Diable has won the bowl for two years. Mrs. Whitney has 23 other entries listed to go over the mile course.

Others Are Entered.

Dr. L. M. Allen is bringing from his Frederick County farm four of his hunters. Paul Mellon has two hunters to show, and Frederick Warburg is sending over from Fauquier three hunters that have had a good season.

Others who have entries are Gen. William Mitchell, Henry Frost, jr., Jack Skinner, Miss Julia B. Whiting, Miss Charlotte H. Noland, Foxcroft School; D. C. Sands, Miss Betsy Clark, Stephen Clark, jr., Misses Iselin and Howard C. Fair.

It is expected that a large crowd will attend and society folk will gather on the hillside to watch the hunters go over the course with its natural obstacles.

Four classes will be shown, the first to be called at 1 p. m. Judges are William Almey, M. Roy Jackson and Bayard Tuckerman.

Harrison, Third Cavalry, Badger has been successful in numerous Pacific Coast shows. Hope Chest, owned by Lieut. Harry Stadler; Boola and Al Capone are other star horses entered.

Virginia Presbyterian Trounces Woodberry

Woodberry Forest, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—The Virginia Presbyterian School of Danville came from behind in the final quarter here today to defeat the Woodberry Forest quintet, 38 to 24.

At the end of the third period the score stood 22-all, but the sharpshooting of the Winn brothers and Chattin soon put the visitors well out in front.

Metropolitan Court Title At Stake

Alexandria and Bethesda Meet in Feature of Opening Round.

IT will be a case of the city boys against the town boys this afternoon when Eastern High's interhigh champions open a two-day scramble with Alexandria, Bethesda-Chevy Chase and Mount Rainier high schools for the 1935 Metropolitan championship. Eastern, the defending champion, encounters Mount Rainier at 2 p. m., with Alexandria and Bethesda colliding shortly afterward.

According to all indications, the city boys step into action fairly heavy favorites to retain their title despite Mount Rainier's recent impressive drive to the Prince Georges County championship. The winner of the Alexandria-Bethesda battle promises to give Eastern its toughest tussle, tomorrow, in the final, but nevertheless will be something of an underdog.

Strong Teams Play.

The second game today looms considerably more attractive than the opener, with little to choose between Alexandria's powerful five, a strong contender for the Virginia Class B crown, and Bethesda, consistent winner of the Montgomery County title.

Alexandria's victory over Hyattsville yesterday gave the Twins the Intersuburban League championship and established the Twins even more securely as a serious contender. Bethesda-Chevy Chase pushed aside Rockville High's strong team impressively in its push to the Montgomery County title. The Chevy Chase school has twice finished runner-up to the metropolitan champion—to Central, in 1933, and to Eastern last year.

Interest Is Added.

The inter-State rivalry surrounding the second game, together with Eastern's opening of its title defense in the first and the expected presence of the Elks Club Boys' Band at all the games have boosted the tournament promisingly this year.

Chief Charlie Guyon, probably coaching, by his own wish, his last basket ball team at Eastern, has the champions in smooth-working order. The staleness threatened after the interhigh series has been averted and the chief reports his stars, Capt. Lavelle Dean, Chick Hollidge, Orpha Shaner, Reds Scheible, Bill Bucholtz and Gay Edelin eager to get into action again. The tournament comes as a thorough test for the Lincoln Parkers prior to the big Washington-Lee scholastic championships early next month.

Charles Town Downs Hedgesville's Teams

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.). Hedgesville High dropped a double-header last night to Charles Town High on the former's court, the Hedgesville boys losing, 33 to 20, and the girls, 46 to 20.

The Hedgesville boys showed improved form over earlier games, but were unable to muster a full squad owing to illness. Blue paced the winners in scoring while Dirting and L. Donaldson were high for the losers.

Hyattsville High Faces Rockville

Other Game Slated Today in Prince Georges.

Mount Rainier High's title five will be in action this afternoon against Eastern in a metropolitan tourney contest at Tech High.

Amateurs Vie In Ring Again On March 1

Next Show, Promoted by Twomey to Have 12, Not 15, Bouts.

HAVING promoted the most sensational boxing show ever held in Washington, Matt Twomey, whose Olympic Athletic Club amateur boxing card at the Auditorium Wednesday night set a new high for sustained action, plans to stage another program of the same description on Friday night, March 1.

The next amateur show will consist of 12 bouts instead of the 15 that held the crowd of more than 1,000 in their seats from 8:30 p. m. Wednesday until the wee, sma' hours of Thursday morning. Ten of the bouts will be of three rounds' duration and two will be five-rounders.

"If the next card is as successful as the first," Twomey stated, "we will hold shows every ten days from then on. We shall follow the same lines in arranging the bouts, pitting the best local lads against the best competition available from out of town. In some cases, where a local natural has worked up, we shall match the two local lads."

The Wednesday night show, which crept into the Auditorium practically unheralded, drew a surprisingly large crowd of 1,160. The gate receipts were $697—a surprisingly high figure for a program for which admissions were scaled from 40 cents to $1.10.

Eckhart A. A. Elects Byrnes as President

Eckhart, Md., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—John Jerome Byrnes, who served as first baseman of the Cumberland Colts from 1922 to 1930 and managed the club in the Middle Atlantic League for several years, has been elected president of the Eckhart Athletic Association for this year.

Byrnes played part time for Eckhart last year and turned in a batting average of .524 in the Cumberland and Georges Creek loop.

Other officers elected by Eckhart are Thomas E. Porter, secretary; John Groter, treasurer, and John Keller, business manager.

Double-Header Won By Emmitsburg Teams

Emmitsburg' Md., Feb. 21 (Spl.). Emmitsburg turned in a double victory over Thurmont in the northern division of the county high school league, the boys winning, 65 to 2, while the girls triumphed, 29 to 22. It was the final game for the Emmitsburg boys, pennant winners of the northern division.

Ahearn Seeks Jack Doyle For Bout

Will Continue His Policy of Fighting Fighters 'if' He Accepts Job.

PROMOTOR JOE TURNER, who controls boxing and wrestling at the Auditorium, and Goldie Ahearn his newly acquired boxing matchmaker, continued to "discuss terms" yesterday as plans went ahead for their alliance which probably will be officially announced today.

As stated when the dismissal of Charles Cornell as matchmaker for the Auditorium was announced, the new fistic partnership will not attempt to operate next Monday, but will hold its opening show on March 4. Deprived of the return match between Pete Sarron and Joe Rivers for that date because Pete had a fight on a conflicting date in Florida, Ahearn imemdiately began formulating plans for a substitute headliner.

Will Follow Old Policy.

"If I take the matchmaker's job for Turner, if, mind you," said Ahearn, who already has taken the job, "I shall adhere to the old policy I followed at the Riding and Hunt Club of giving the public 'fighters who fight'."

"I shall use big names whenever possible, but the big names must first meet the requirements of the motto, 'Fighters who fight.' I shan't put in any outstanding fighters against pushovers."

Ahearn had considered using Harry Serody, sensational Philadelphia junior welterweight, against Phil Furr for the opening show, but was forced to abandon plans for that bout when Serody was forced from the ring temporarily by illness.

Seeks Jack Doyle.

"I wired Jack Dempsey today, asking him if I could use his new Irish heavyweight, Jack Doyle," Ahearn said last night. "He would make a great attraction and a good fight against Marty Gallagher, if Dempsey would let me use him."

Promoter Joe Turner still was reluctant to announce positively that Ahearn had been definitely signed to act as his matchmaker.

"I talked to Chris Dundee today," Turner said, thus placing himself in a class with 347 other persons who talked to Chris yesterday. "I guess mebbe I'll hook up with Ahearn, and may have a definite statement to make tomorrow."

Jasper Boxers Train Aboard U. S. Ship

Get Winning Atmosphere; Fight C. U. Ringmen Tomorrow Night.

IF atmosphere counts in college boxing, the Manhattan College squad, which battles Catholic University tomorrow night at Brookland, should be a rugged aggregation of ringmen, for the Jaspers train aboard the U. S. S. Illinois, which is now in drydock at New York.

From the Illinois have come a score of top-flight battlers. The ship seems to breed courage, craft and consistency among the leather-pushers, so Coach Frank John thought it would be a good idea to have his boys inhale some of that atmosphere.

John's strategy failed last week when Manhattan bowed to New Hampshire's undefeated team, but it failed by the narrow margin of 2 points. The Jaspers won two bouts by knockouts and another on points. They lost when Capt. Sal Resino was disqualified because of an unintentional foul.

Resino Faces Thibideau.

Resino will box Catholic's captain, Eddie Thibideau, and it looms as one of the best bouts on the program. The Manhattan mauler is fast and a two-fisted fighter. He'll be an even money bet against Thibideau.

Another former Golden Gloves champion will be seen in Tom Bianchi, heavyweight, who knocked his opponent silly last week and has similar designs on Catholic's representative. Freddy Rydewski, who surprised and delighted the fans last week by getting a draw with Tom Pontecarvo, probably will face him.

Rydewski, making his first collegiate appearance, waged a clever battle with the Terrors' ace and showed enough to stamp himself as a promising ring debater.

Fleming Fights White.

Still another bout that should catch the fans' fancy is the 175-pound engagement wherein Red Fleming, C. U.'s undefeated kayo artist, and Jack White will throw gloves at one another. White won by a knockout last week while Fleming took a decision over Ortenzo, of Western Maryland.

Coach Eddie LaFond will send the Cardinals through their tapering off paces this afternoon with a brief workout. LaFond predicts a victory for his men although he has warned them not to expect any push-overs.

Manhattan will arrive tomorrow morning and is scheduled to weigh in at 3:30 p. m.

W. & L.'s Courtmen On Southern Trip

Face Clemson Tonight and Gamecocks Tomorrow.

Lexington, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Seeking to redeem themselves after a series of ups and downs, Coach Cy Young's Washington and Lee basket ball team will travel to South Carolina this week-end to meet the strong Clemson and University of South Carolina quintets. In 12 starts this year the Generals, defending champions of the Southern Conference, have won five games and lost seven. Three of the defeats have been by two-point margins.

The cagers will meet Clemson at Clemson tomorrow night and the next night will go to Columbia to play South Carolina. Young indicated today he would take nine men on the trip, including the veteran Bob Field, who returned to the line-up in time for the Richmond game Tuesday after being out for two weeks.

Coach Mathis' wrestlers, meanwhile, will go to Blacksburg Saturday night to tangle with Virginia Tech in their last match of the season before the Southern Conference tournament here March 1 and 2. The W. and L. grapplers rose to high heights, showed tremendous power and the benefits of hard training and defeated the University of Michigan here, 19-13, Monday night.

Dust Storms Hurt Wheat, Raising Price

Cotton Futures Dull, Declining at 2 to 3 Points Net Losses.

Chicago, Feb. 21 (AP).—Storms of dust extending into five States Southwest and West made wheat prices jump 1½ cents a bushel maximum today.

Acute lack both of surface and subsoil moisture was reported as affecting a total of between 6,000,000 and 7,000,000 acres of wheat territory in Nebraska, Kansas, Texas, Oklahoma and Colorado. Fears were expressed that as a result of moisture dearth and of widespread dust clouds much damage would be done to the new domestic winter wheat crop.

Wheat closed nervous, ¼ to 1 cent above yesterday's finish; May, 97⅜@97½; corn, ⅜ off to ½ up; May, 85¾@85⅞; oats at ¼ decline to ⅜ advance, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 5 cents.

Today's dust storms in some sections were described as the worst yet this season, and of a severity unsurpassed in recent years. Contributing to the resultant upward sweep of the wheat market here was unexpected firmness of quotations at Liverpool, where a somewhat broader demand from consumers was in evidence. Furthermore, Germany's winter wheat acreage showed a reduction of 6 per cent, compared with last year, according to official estimates today.

Canadian Surplus a Bar.

Talk of imports and of the large surplus of wheat in Canada acted as something of a check on price gains. A leading Chicago market authority said that if every one in the wheat trade could be certain Canada would maintain her present export policy the atmosphere would be cleared, but nobody could be certain of this in spite of emphatic assertions that no change would be made. A reason given was that a government engaged in a marketing enterprise must operate on the same basis a private agency would, and that if the marketing method failed to get satisfactory results, the method was likely to be changed.

Relative indifference of cash corn buyers largely explained a dragging tendency that developed in corn and oats. Argentine new crop estimates as to corn were construed as bearish.

Provisions rallied with wheat, despite weakness of hog values.

New Banking Bill Opens Door of Federal Reserve for Any and All Assets, Including Doubtful and Frozen Items, of Member Banks.

New York, Feb. 21.—One aspect of the pending banking bill of 1935 that is being stressed in discussions of the measure among bankers is the greatly changed role that the Federal Reserve banks would play under it during future financial crises and depression periods.

Despite the bank failure epidemic of the years following 1930, the Federal Reserve banks remained in a very strong and liquid position, almost entirely immune from the losses that were being suffered by financial institutions generally. Their losses were of negligible amount.

The strength of the Federal Reserve banks was thus constantly conserved for further amergency use if needed. Only the best of the assets of member banks could be shifted to the Reserve institutions under the eligibility requirements of the Federal Reserve act, generally speaking, so that a buffer was placed between bad banking and the Reserve institutions.

The banking bill of 1935, on the other hand, opens the door wide for the transfer to the Federal Reserve banks during future financial emergencies of any and all assets of the banks. Since it makes all agricultural, comercial and industrial paper of member banks eligible for rediscount, subject to regulations of the Federal Reserve Board, and since the Reserve banks would also be authorized to make advances to member banks on "any sound assets," the Reserve institutions, during critical periods, would be called upon to take over large masses of frozen and even doubtful assets from their hard-pressed members. While these member banks would remain liable for losses incurred on rediscounted paper, their indorsement might prove of little value where member banks suspend payment.

Original Reserve Act Protected Members.

Under the original Federal Reserve Act the system was shielded from the excesses of its members. Under the Banking bill of 1935 the country would have a reserve system that would tend at best to reflect the average strength or weakness of its member banks. In fact, since individual member banks now own and will, doubtless, acquire more assets of a nonliquid variety on a large scale, at times when cash must be raised to meet depositors' demands the Reserve Banks may come to be the recepticle of the frozen assets of the banking system.

There has been criticism of the policy of keeping the Federal Reserve Banks relatively isolated and unaffected during a banking crisis while numerous member banks are being forced to suspend payments. It has been argued that such a policy limits the usefulness of the Reserve institutions at a time when their help on a generous scale is most urgently needed.

The best central banking practice, however, has been to organize separate institutions, especially financed and qualified for the purpose, to undertake the special rescue measures that are needed during periods of crisis. In this country the War Finance Corporation and later the Reconstruction Finance Corporation have played such a role. The German Reichsbank, through extremely trying times since the war, has utilized the Gold Discount Bank on occasion in order to avoid impairing its own position. Even the Bank of England has organized affiliates to make longer term loans which it did not wish to undertake on its own account, thus leaving such less liquid commitments outside its portfolio.

Two Arguments For Restrictions.

There are two basic arguments that may be advanced for a policy of maintaining restrictions on the liquidity and the quality of assets which the Federal Reserve banks are to be permitted to acquire, in order to relieve them from the risk of heavy losses and large frozen commitments during crises. In the first place, once the Reserve system has been thus weakened, it may prove very difficult to free them from their frozen commitments. To avoid deflationary pressure, the Government may want the reserve institutions to nurse along their frozen assets, thus leaving them weakened over a protracted period of time.

Secondly, financial crises sometimes occur in comparatively rapid succession, as happened in 1929 and 1933. If the Reserve banks should have to acquire large amounts of doubtful assets from members at a time when the latter are hard pressed, and if shortly thereafter some new economic catastrophe or a war should intervene, the Reserve system might be in no position unaided to meet the demands that would then be made on them during the second crisis.

Of course, the Government could bring relief to the Reserve banks, through having some Treasury agency relieve them of their frozen assets or by subscribing additional capital. However, the dangers of having the central bank of a country in a weakened condition and requiring special aid from the Treasury are obvious. Quite apart from the effects of its very loose rediscount provisions on future lending and investing policies of individual member banks, therefore, the banking bill of 1935 deserves critical consideration because of the peril that it clearly contains to the soundness of the Federal Reserve banks themselves during future periods of financial stress.

U. S. Treasury Receipts.

The position of the Treasury on February 19 was: Receipts, $6,124,002.68; expenditures, $12,699,427.99; net balance, $2,136,085,772.78; customs receipts for the month, $16,256,394.32.

Receipts for the fiscal year (since July 1), $2,212,176,882.14; expenditures, $4,385,969,991.98, including $2,261,230,797.88 of emergency expenditures; excess of expenditures, $2,177,793,109.84; gold assets, $8,479,506,300.62.

Federal Bonds Reach New High For the Year

Government Issues Account for a Third of Trading.

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—The bond market received another lift from Washington today, when details of the new financing of the Government resulted in a brisk advance in Federal loans and other gilt-edge obligations.

Advices from the Capital that the March 15 note maturity and the redemption of a large block of Fourth Liberty 4¼s on April 15 were to be met by short-term bills, rather than new cash demands, pushed many Treasury issues into high ground for the year.

Gains ranging from 2-32ds of a point to 23-32ds were shown by Federal issues. Home Owners Loan 2¾s sold at par for the first time since issuance and closed at 100.3. Treasury 3s of 1951-55, at 103.14, the 3s of 1946-48, at 103.16; First Liberty 4¼s of 1932-47, at 103.12, and Federal Farm Mortgage 3s of 1947, at 101.28, were actively dealt in at better prices. The Government group accounted for $4,690,000 of the total of all bond transactions of $13,446,000, par value.

A long list of first-grade domestic corporation bonds were quick to respond to the better feeling, and Santa Fe general 4s at 111, American Telephone 5½s at 112⅝, Bell Telephone of Pennsylvania 5s at 117⅜ and Union Pacific first 4s at 111, all closed at new highs for the year with advances of fractions to a point or more.

Secondary rails and bonds of utility holding companies failed to follow the uptrend and losses ranging from fractions to 3½ points shown by American Water Works 6s at 74⅛, Erie 4s at 74¾, St. Paul general 4½s at 55⅛ and Missouri Pacific refunding 5s at 27⅝. Baldwin Locomotive bonds on the curb continued their decline with losses of 2 to 4 points.

Advances of .02 of a point were shown by the Associated Press averages for leading industrials, foreign and low-yield bonds, while the railroad composite was off .05 of a point.

Advances	217	125
Declines	295	486
Unchanged	171	139
Total issues	683	750

Stocks—Gains in long-term Federal issues failed to bolster a market that seems destined to return to its pre-gold decision lassitude. Dividend announcements by Loew's and International Harvester tried to help corporate issues. Baldwin Locomotive slid off further from its previous day's close. Sales volume for the session was 700,972 shares.

Bonds—Details of new Federal finance plans gave the market a lift, many issues forging to new high ground. First-grade domestic issues shared the better feeling. Sales were up to $13,446,000.

Curb—Irregular price movements continued, with a few specialties displaying scattered strength. Sales dropped to 151,000 shares.

Wheat—Dust storms that affected five States boomed grain values. Lack of moisture in an area of approximately 6,000,000 acres caused alarm that damage would be widespread. Close was nervous. May wheat at 97⅜ and May corn at 85¾.

Cotton—Slow trading in a narrow range featured the cotton market. Closes were barely steady at net declines of 2 to 3 points. May at 12.50.

Coffee—Spot coffee was quiet. Rio No. 7 closed at 8¼ and Santos No. 4 at 10 flat.

Sugar—Raw sugar was firmer at 2.95 for large transactions. Refined jumped to 4.70 for fine granulated.

Silver—Bar silver was quiet and unchanged in New York at 55¼ cents per ounce. In London it sold at 1-16 higher, to close at 25-16d. (U. S. equivalent, 55.44 cents.)

Gold—Bar gold was up 1½ pence in London to close at 142 shillings 11d. (U. S. equivalent, $34.92.)

Dollar—The United States dollar was steady in foreign exchanges. It was quoted in New York in terms of foreign currencies at $4.88¼ to the English pound; 6.62 cents to the French franc, and 40.27 cents to the German mark.

Life Insurance Sales Here Lead National Rate

January Production Placed at $4,919,000 by Hartford Research Bureau.

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

Every section of the United States reported substantial increases during January in the amount of life insurance sold compared with the same period last year, the District of Columbia reporting a gain slightly higher than the national average.

Figures released yesterday by the Life Insurance Research Bureau of Hartford place the country's average gain during the month at 37 per cent, while the District increase was set at 1 per cent higher.

Aggregate figures for 1934 also were filed, Washington leading the national average of 13 per cent more business by 4 per cent.

Total sales for the District during the past month were reported at $4,919,000, while sales in the United States totaled $645,334,000. The sales in the South Atlantic District, including the Capital, were $49,671,000 in the month.

In the classification of larger cities, Washington ranked fourth in percentage gain. New York City led with an average gain of 51 per cent. Cleveland was next with an increase of 40 per cent and Boston placed third with a 39 per cent increase.

Stock Trading.

Capital Traction 5s again opened trading on the Washington Stock Exchange yesterday with a $1,000 and $500 lot selling at 95½. Potomac Electric 5½ per cent preferred crossed the board at 112¼ and Lanston Monotype sold at 49½ and later at 50.

Richmond Reserve Bank.

Total net profits of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond in 1934 were $313,346.93, as compared with a net deficit of $328,740 in 1933, according to the annual report presented to stockholders by Governor George J. Seay. The gain of $642,086.37 during the 12 months gives a comprehensive idea of the better conditions in the Fifth District which includes Washington.

The report shows total gross earnings for the year of $1,987,800.85, in comparison with the lower figure of $1,699,190.92 in 1933. Total current expenses were higher in 1934 than in 1933, standing at $1,633,969.02, in comparison with $1,544,617.51 in the previous year, at the same time leaving current net earnings of $353,831.83 against $154,573.41 at the end of 1933.

During the year the Richmond Reserve Bank paid dividends of $299,050.37. Deducted from the year's net profits, this left a profit balance on December 31 of $14,296.56 against a gross deficit in the previous year of $637,127.93.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—Traders on the stock exchange were occupied with heavy week-end settlement business today. New business did not expand due to the absence of fresh favorable factors, while realizations caused a moderate droop in most sections. Foreign bonds, rubber and transatlantic shares were firm exceptions. The market closed dull.

Paris—Weakness in Wall street yesterday was followed by a slump in prices on the bourse today, although losses were small, except in chemical shares. The closing tone was heavy.

Berlin—Favorable reports of industries did not influence prices on the boerse today and the closing was quiet after a small business was transacted.

Curb Divides Gain and Loss In Light Trades

Royal Typewriter Rises 3 Points; Mayflower Also Advances.

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—The curb market continued its irregular price movements today and small gains and losses were about evenly divided at the close. Trading was generally quiet, transfers approximating 151,000 shares, slightly less than yesterday.

A few specialties displayed firmness. These included Royal Tpyewriter, up 3 points, and Mayflower Associates and Montgomery Ward "A," up 2 and 1, respectively. Bunker Hill & Sullivan, Seeman Brothers and Aluminum Co. of America yielded around 2 points each.

Fractional improvement was recorded by Greyhound Corporation, Lake Shore, American Gas & Electric, Swift Internacional and Wright Hargraves, while similar recessions appeared in Hiram Walker, Creole Petroleum, Parker Rust Proof and Electric Bond & Share. Sherwin-Williams lost a point.

Radio Phones For Autos Seen In Near Future

Soon Will Be Commonplace, Young Electrical Wizard Declares.

Berkeley, Calif. (U.P.)—The youthful electrical wizard who equipped Berkeley's "scientific police department" with radio and who provided 22 launches, ground stations and towering piers of the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge with radio telephones, believes it won't be long until automobile radiophones are commonplace.

He is 22-year-old D. Reginald Tibbetts, who designed and installed for the bay bridge engineering companies four complete high-frequency radio telephone systems.

Heard by Experts.

He explained his projects to the Nation's foremost electrical authorities recently at the twenty-fifth convention of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers in Salt Lake City. Six years ago, at 16, he provided Berkeley's police department with the first police radio system. He did the job in time taken from high school studies.

A runner-up in the Edison Intelligence Competition, Tibbetts tells interviewers: "There's really nothing to it," as he spins the dials of his compact radio-telephone.

The telephone employs standard receivers and transmittters connected to a box resembling an ordinary radio receiving set. Special tubes and other standard equipment complete the unit. Six-foot aluminum rods are the antenna. The radio telephones operate on a 4 to 6 meter wave length, compared to the 500 to 1,500 meter wave lengths used by broadcasting stations.

Walt Mason

Swinburne.

Poor Swinburne, in his wild career, seemed lost to every sense of shame, and still he published, year by year, the sort of verse that brought him fame. Fantastic, it was often filled with fervor that was strange and weird, in melody he was so skilled that no one like him has appeared. Original, he handled words in such a style as few can seize; his lilting rhythm charmed the birds and brought them gasping from the trees. Though some were shocked, all men agreed he was a genius, nothing less, and if vain fancies warmed his creed, his higher flights soothed their distress. But he was drinking williewaughts, and beakers large, and stoups of ale, which things distorted all his thoughts, according to the current tale. And then Watts-Dunton came along, a man whose morals were superb; he said, "I'll save this genius strong, his lust for Bass's ale I'll curb. I have a cottage in a dell, remote from haunts of beer and gin, and I will take him there to dwell, I'll take him there and shut him in. Shut off from liquor that corrodes, from publicans and jingled men, I know he'll write the grandest odes that ever came from mortal pen." He shut the poet in his coop, and guarded him by night and day, and hired some guards, a dismal group, to see he didn't get away. And Swinburne labored with his lyre, and turned out reams of tommyrot; his verses lacked the old-time fire, and always failed to hit the spot. The poet's health was much improved, the crimson vanished from his nose; but still his penhand, as it moved, turned out the verse that read like prose.

THERE are several big broadcasts celebrating Washington's birthday today. One, coming over WMAL at 11 a. m., is a series of dramatizations of oustanding events in Washington's career. After the dramatizations, you'll be taken to the scene of the events and the announcer will describe the places as they are today.

Pick-up points include Fort Duquesne, Mount Vernon, Craigie House in Boston, which was the headquarters of the Continental Army near the Washington elm; the sub-Treasury on Wall street and Gadsby's Tavern in Alexandria, Va.

Columbia's most important offering comes to you on WJSV at 3 p. m. This program is a dramatization of highlights in Washington's life, from the time he was messenger and surveyor for the Colonies to his death.

The program, set to appropriate music, includes Washington's first meeting with Martha, his installation as commander-in-chief of the Revolutionary Army, the death of his stepdaughter, his experiences at Valley Forge and his inauguration as President.

Mrs. Roosevelt adds her bit to the Washington celebrations, when on WJSV at 8 p. m. she contrasts her life in the White House to that of Martha Washington. Martha once wrote to her sister: "I lead a very dull life here, and know nothing that passes in the town. I never go to any public place. Indeed, I think I am more like a State prisoner than anything else."

Mrs. Roosevelt will tell you, in addition, that Martha couldn't attend her husband's accession to office because she was unable to endure the two-day trip from Mount Vernon and will describe the first Washington dinner at the White House.

Gov. James M. Curley of Massachusetts speaks on the Jewish War Veterans program, on WJSV, at 2:45 p. m. His subject, "Tolerance as Exemplified by George Washington." William Berman, commander in chief of the organization, will be heard.

At 3:20 p. m. WMAL offers a patriotic program under auspices of the Rainbow Division Veterans. Speakers, Gen. Benson W. Hough, Gen. George E. Leach, Col. Noble B. Judah, Col. Alexander M. Anderson, John A. Clarke and M. Manning Marcus.

"George Washington and the Order of the Red Men," is the subject of Arthur J. Ruland, Great Incohonee, of the Order of the Red Men, at noon on WMAL.

An international broadcast from Germany will be brought you at 2 p. m. WMAL. This program is a symphony concert in observance of the 125th birthday of the composer, George Frederick Handel. The Municipal Orchestra of Halle and the teacher's choir and the chorus of the Robert-Franz Singakademie will participate.

Other high spots:

Frederic March is guest on the "Hollywood Hotel" program, WJSV, 9:30 p. m.

March of Time features the gold decision, WJSV, 9 p. m.

Beatrice Lillie is heard as a dowager planning a party, 9 p. m. WMAL.

A symposium of governmental views is heard on WMAL at 6 p. m. "A New Deal or a Re-Deal," airs the views of Herbert S. Agar, Pulitzer Prize winner in history; Benjamin Stolberg, a collaborator on "Challenge to the New Deal;" Joseph Wood Krutch, dramatic critic of the Nation, and Bruce Bliven, editor of New Republic.

At 11:30 p. m., WJSV, George Olmsted, chairman of the Young Republican's National Committee, speaks on "Mobilizing Liberal Republicans."
